(4) If at any time after the conclusion of the trial of a person accused of a non-bailable offence and before judgment is delivered, the Court is of opinion that there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is not guilty of any such offence, it shall release the accused, if he is in custody, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance to hear judgment delivered.

(5) A High Court or Court of Session and, in the case of a person released by itself, any other Court may cause any person who has been released under this section to be arrested and may commit him to custody.

Change:—This section has been amended by section 136 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "What we have done is to allow the Court or police-officer to release on bail a non-bailable case unless there appear to be reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation, and, as some safeguard against this, we have provided in sub-sec. (5) for a review by the Sessions Court or the High Court of any order admitting to bail in a non-bailable case"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922). As regards the new sub-sec. (4), see Note 1312 below.

1310. Scope of section:—Under the old section the general rule was that bail was not to be taken in respect of non-bailable offences—Nensi Hansraj, 8 Bom L.R. 420, 3 Cr.L.J. 499; Narendra Lal, 36 Cal. 166; Har Chand, 10 S.L.R. 208, 18 Cr.L.J. 640. Under the present section, the Legislature by defining the offences under which bail is not to be granted (viz., offences punishable with death or transportation) has practically laid down that bail should ordinarily be granted, and that only in cases of heinous offences it will be refused. "This cannot but be regarded as the result of a liberalising influence on the policy of the Legislature, and the discretion of the Courts will henceforth be less fettered than before"—Nagendra Nath, 51 Cal. 402 (417), 25 Cr.L.J. 732, 38 C.L.J. 288. The new sec. 497 of the Cr. P. Code has been materially altered. Under the new section when any person accused of any non-bailable offence is arrested, he may be released on bail, but he shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of "an offence punishable with death or transportation for life". The words in inverted commas were substituted for the words "the offence of which he is accused". This change cannot but be regarded as the result of a liberalising influence on the policy of the Legislature and the discretion of the Courts will be less fettered than before. The section draws a distinction between non-bailable offences which are punishable with death or transportation for life and other non-bailable offences. In the former case the Magistrate's powers for granting bail are restricted, but it is not so in the latter class of cases—King-Emp. v. Abharaj Kunwar, 40 Cr.L.J. 841 (843), 183 I.C. 713, 1939 O.W.N. 791, 1939 O.L.R. 548, 12 R.O. 54, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 8, 1939 A Cr.C. 155, 1939 A W.R. (C.C.) 144, 1939 O.A. 665.

The present policy of law is to allow the bail in the case of under-trial prisoners rather than to refuse it. The High Court granted bail where the only reason given by the Magistrate for refusing bail was that to grant it would be prejudicing the case—Ghulam, 27 Cr.L.J. 302, 92 I.C. 590, A.I.R. 1925 Lah 510, 7 Lah.L.J. 331.

In view of the express provision contained in this section, it is not open to Courts in India to follow the principles laid down in the decisions of English Courts in determining matters of bail—Narendra Lal, 36 Cal. 166, 13 C.W.N. 43, 9 Cr.L.J. 375, 1 I.C. 738; Gul, 29 Cr.L.J. 470.

Where a person, being accused of a bailable offence, was released on bail but owing to changes in the condition of the injured party it appeared later on that he would have to be accused of a non-bailable offence, the provisions of sec. 497, Cr. P. C., and not the provisions of sec. 496, Cr. P. C., came into operation and the Magistrate had power to cancel the bail and to remand him in custody—Osman Piroo, 38 Cr.L.J. 93, 165 I.C. 923, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 187, 1936 Cr.C. 972, 30 S.L.R. 131.

As to distinction between sub-sections (1) and (2), see Note 1311 below.

There is no provision in the Criminal Procedure Code or in the Extradition Act (XV of 1903) authorising a Magistrate to hold a person to bail to appear before a tribunal in a State, to which the Extradition Act applies, unless the warrant is endorsed under the provisions of sec. 8 of the Act—Balthasar, 33 Cal. 1032.

As the law stands now, it is no longer the case that bail ought to be refused merely because the offence is a non-bailable one. That rule is now restricted to offences punishable with death or transportation—Abhram Bali, 28 O.C. 220, 26 Cr.L.J. 1286, 89 I.C. 150. Where the offence in respect to which a person is accused is a non-bailable one punishable with transportation for life, strictly speaking, he ought not to be released on bail at all having regard to the provisions of sec. 497 (1), Cr. P. C.—Giani Meher Singh v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 138, 185 I.C. 249, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 42, 43 C.W.N. 639, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 714. But the mere fact that the offence is a serious one is not a ground for refusing bail. However serious an offence may be, if it is bailable and there is no likelihood of the accused absconding if released on bail, the seriousness of the offence would not alone justify a Court in refusing bail—Abdul Habib, 26 A.L.J. 363, 29 Cr.L.J. 450. Where the accused charged with a serious non-bailable offence is an old man and is a Government servant, and it is found that if he is not released on bail there would be nobody to instruct his counsel in going through the documentary evidence and that he would not be able to make a proper defence, held that bail should be granted—Abhram Bali, 28 O.C. 220, 12 O.L.J. 394, 26 Cr.L.J. 1286. But this matter is left to the discretion of the Court, and the Magistrate may in the exercise of this discretion refuse to grant bail to a person accused of a non-bailable offence—Jumo, 20 S.L.R. 136, 27 Cr.L.J. 859 (860).

The matters for consideration in an application for bail may be enumerated as follows: (a) whether there is or is not a reasonable ground for believing that the applicant has committed the offence with which he is charged, (b) the nature and the gravity of the charge, (c) the severity or degree of the punishment which might follow in the particular circumstances in case of a conviction, (d) the danger of the applicant absconding if he is released on bail, (e) the character, means and standing of the applicant, (f) the danger of the alleged offence being continued or repeated, assuming that the accused is guilty of having committed that offence in the past, (g) the danger of witnesses being tampered with, (h) opportunity to the applicant to prepare his defence and (i) the fact that the applicant has already been some months in jail and that the trial is not likely to conclude for further several months at least—Hutchinson, 32 Cr.L.J. 1271 (1275), 1931 A.L.J. 515, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 858, 134 I.C. 842, 1931 Cr.C. 12, A.I.R. 1931 All. 356, 53 All. 931. These do not appear to have been laid down as exhaustive or inflexible tests. It cannot be suggested that any one of those tests would, by itself, even in the face of other considerations to the contrary, be conclusive. It is the net result of all the considerations for and against the accused which must ultimately decide the matter. Many more considerations can be added, without any attempt to make the list exhaustive. Even the extreme youth or old age or sex of the accused may be a matter for consideration and so also the state of his health. His previous conduct and behaviour in Court, or want of confidence in obtaining reliable sureties or the character of the sureties, if indemnified by the accused, may equally be taken into account. Even his social status or the position which an accused person occupies in relation to the other member of his family, particularly when he is the only adult male member, the rest being woman and children has also not been lost sight of. Sometimes even the fact that he was arrested during the harvesting time has also been considered though, of course, not made the sole ground of release—Joglekar, 33 Cr.L.J. 91 (96), 135 I.C. 113, 1931 A.L.J. 773, A.I.R. 1931 All. 504, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 1, 1931 Cr.C. 892, 54 All. 115 (F.B.). See also Mahammad Panah, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 131, 28 S.L.R. 47.

The main points for consideration in the application for bail are:—(1) Whether there is any likelihood of the accused absconding; (2) whether there is any likelihood of the accused tampering with the evidence by threatening the complainant. The social position or status of an accused person should never be taken into consideration when granting or rejecting an application for bail. It is the duty of the Court to see that both sides are not hampered. The Court must see that the Crown does not get a free hand the accused are not locked up or are hampered in their defence simply on the ground that it is alleged or feared that they will tamper with the evidence—King-Emp. v. Abhairaj Kunwar, 40 Cr.L.J. 841, 183 I.C. 713, 1939 O.W.N. 791, 1939 O.L.R. 548, 12 R.O. 54, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 8, 1939 A.Cr.C. 155, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 144, 1939 O.A. 665.

The discretionary power of the Court to admit to bail is not arbitrary but is judicial and is governed by established principles. In deciding whether bail should be granted, Court should consider the seriousness of the charge, the nature of the evidence, the severity of the punishment prescribed for the offence, and in some instances the character, means and standing of the accused—Nagendra Nath, 51 Cal. 402 (416), 81 I.C. 220, 38 Cr.L.J. 388, 25 Cr.L.J. 732; Tularam, 27 Cr.L.J. 1063 (1066), 97 I.C. 39.

Magistrates are bound to consider the nature of the offence charged, the character of the evidence against the prisoner, and the punishment which in the event of conviction is likely to be inflicted on the prisoner. While mere vague allegations that the prisoner, if released, will tutor witnesses should not be taken into account, the Magistrate may well refuse to enlarge on bail where the prisoner is likely to intimidate witnesses or where there are reasonable grounds for believing that he will use his liberty to suborn evidence—Mohammad Eusoof, 3 Rang. 538 (542), 27 Cr.L.J. 401, followed in Nga San Htun, 5 Rang. 276, 28 Cr.L.J. 773 (F.B.); Achhaiyar, 27 A.L.J. 927, 30 Cr.L.J. 718; Guru, 32 Cr.L.J. 278, 129 I.C. 341, 32 Bom.L.R. 1131, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 484, 1931 Cr.C. 1020, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 149; Mahammad, 36 Cr.L.J. 711, 155 I.C. 113, 28 S.L.R. 47, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 131; Krishna Chandra, 6 Pat. 802, 28 Cr.L.J. 621; or where there are reasonable grounds for believing that he will get up false evidence in support of the defence—Allahrakhsa, 35 Cr.L.J. 144, 146 I.C. 561, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 367, 1933 Cr.C. 1339. The Court is not called upon to conduct a preliminary trial of the case and consider the probability of the accused's guilt or innocence. It would be entirely exceeding its function if it did that in any detail; but it may incidentally have to look at the weight of the evidence against the accused as a necessary part of its proper function; that is to enquire whether the giving of the bail as opposed to the arrest of the accused might lead to a real danger of his absconding and not appearing to take his trial or whether there is any real reason to suppose that he is likely to tamper with the witnesses who would be called against him—Sanyasaya v. Public Prosecutor, 26 Cr.L.J. 1593, 90 I.C. 665, 22 M.L.W. 156, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1224. See also Hardwari, 33 Cr.L.J. 497, 137 I.C. 514, 33 P.L.R. 331, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 344. The necessity of a severe punishment in case of conviction is no reason for a refusal to grant bail. Bail may be refused if there is reason to believe that the accused may commit a similar or any other serious offence while on bail—Achhaiyar, 30 Cr.L.J. 718, 117 I.C. 99, 27 A.L.J. 297, A.I.R. 1929 All 614, Ind. Rul. 1929 All. 675. Persons accused of an offence under s. 302 read with s. 115, I. P. C., are not entitled to bail as a matter of right—King-Emp. v. Abhairaj Kunwar, 40 Cr.L.J. 841 (842), 183 I.C. 713, 1939 O.W.N. 791, 1939 O.L.R. 518, 12 R.O. 54, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 8, 1939 A Cr.C. 155, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 144, 1939 O.A. 665. Where the accused was charged under sec. 307, I. P. C., and it was alleged that the accused might, if left on bail, assail the complainant, he should not be released on bail—Naranji Premji, 30 Bom.L.R. 622, 29 Cr.L.J. 901, 111 I.C. 661, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 244. Where a person is arrested and charged with a serious offence as attempt to murder, bail should not be allowed; it is not a sufficient reason to allow bail on the ground that the injured person is not well enough to be subjected to the ordeal of an identification parade and the prosecution is not in a position to state definitely whether the person arrested actually inflicted the wound—Pritam Singh, 33 P.L.R. 387, 1932 Cr.C. 579 (580), 33 Cr.L.J. 335, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 245, 136 I.C. 709, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 433. Where a person has been found guilty of deliberately attempting to shoot a man with a revolver, he should not be released on bail on the grounds that he is only 19 years of age and that it will be unfortunate that he should be associated with bad characters in jail if ultimately it is found that he was not guilty. An argument of this kind certainly has some force, but after all it is an argument which could be raised in almost every case, because respectable men even if they are more than 19 years of age may suffer deterioration from detention in jail—Dhanpal, 37 Cr.L.J. 1017, 164 I.C. 703, A.I.R. 1936 All 656, 1936 A.L.J. 961, 1936 Cr.C. 792. Save in exceptional circumstances persons accused of crimes punishable with long terms of imprisonment should not be released by Magistrates and Sessions Judges on bail. The richer the accused, and the more easy it is for him to find bail, the less it is desirable that he should be released, and in no circumstances without an order of the High Court, should any person accused of murder be admitted to bail—Hikayat Singh, 11 Pat. 280, 1932 Cr.C. 522 (524), 138 I.C. 27, 33 Cr.L.J. 574, 13 P.L.T. 530, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 209, Ind. Rul. 1932 Pat. 162.

'Reasonable grounds for believing,' etc.:—Persons accused of non-bailable offences should not be released on bail as a rule, but they may be so released if the reasons for believing that the case against them is such that it is not likely to succeed, or if there are special circumstances justifying bail—Bashiram, 26 Cr.L.J. 4, 83 I.C. 483, A.I.R. 1923 All. 479. This section lays down that a person accused of a heinous offence like murder shall not be released on bail if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of the offence with which he is charged—Nga San Tin, 5 Bur.L.J. 170, 28 Cr.L.J. 188; Jahana, 36 Cr.L.J. 227, 152 I.C. 180, 35 P.L.R. 558, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 609, 1934 Cr.C. 941. The fact that the accused has no member in his family who can look after his case, is no reason whatever to admit him to bail in a case of murder—Sri Chand, 36 Cr.L.J. 184, 152 I.C. 802, A.I.R. 1934 All. 815, 1934 Cr.C. 998. That one of the two accused, who are brothers, should be given an opportunity to arrange for the defence and for funds is no reason for the Sessions Judge to grant bail when the High Court has already held that the release of the accused persons has led to tampering with the witnesses for the prosecution—Sardar Jahan, A.I.R. 1933 All. 895, 1933 Cr.C. 1525. The section says nothing about taking into consideration the likelihood of the accused person absconding. All that the Court has to consider is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing that the accused is guilty—Henderson, 6 L.B.R. 172, 19 I.C. 171, 14 Cr.L.J. 171. Other considerations may arise in deciding the question as to granting bail, and one of those considerations is whether there are any grounds for supposing that the accused would abscond. But the main question for consideration in determining matters of bail is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be guilty—Jamini Mullick, 36 Cal. 174, 13 C.W.N. 51; Gul, 29 Cr.L.J. 470 (471). Whether there are reasonable grounds or not for believing that the accused is guilty must be decided judicially, that is to say, there must be tangible evidence on which, if unrebutted, the Court might come to the conclusion that the accused might be convicted—Jamini Mullick, 36 Cal. 174.

On a complaint under sec. 409, I. P. C., the Magistrate examined the complainant who was not asked and did not state how he proposed to prove the allegations. He held no preliminary enquiry but directed the issue of a warrant of arrest forthwith. There was considerable delay in filing the complaint. The accused surrendered to Court and applied for bail which was refused. Held that there was nothing but the statement of the complainant, entirely unsupported by any evidence whatsoever and in the particular circumstances of the case while there might be reasonable grounds for believing that an enquiry should be held into the matter, there could not yet appear to be reasonable grounds for believing that the accused was guilty of the offence with which he had been charged and that the accused should under such circumstances be granted bail—Htye Yar v. The King, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 474, 172 I.C. 176.

After the accused had been convicted of a serious offence under sec. 120B read with sec. 302, I. P. C., by the unanimous verdict of the jury even though the Sessions Judge disagreed with the verdict of the jury and made up his mind to refer the matter to the High Court, it is desirable that the convicted persons should be held in custody pending the final decision of the High Court—Benat Pramanik, 39 C.W.N. 954 (960).

In determining matters of bail, the Appellate Court also should be guided by this principle. That Court should not refuse bail on the ground that the accused has been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment by the trying Court, or that the granting of bail has a tendency to increase the number of appeals and of protracting the appellate proceedings. The main question for consideration by the Appellate Court is whether there are reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be guilty of the offence charged—Gul, 29 Cr.L.J. 470 (471), 109 I.C. 118, A.I.R. 1928 Sind. 142, 22 S.L.R. 435.

The phrase "an offence punishable with death or transportation for life" covers not only offences which are punishable with death as well as in the alternative with transportation for life, but also covers an offence which is punishable with transportation for life but not in the alternative with capital punishment. The phrase must be read disjunctively, as if it ran, "offence punishable with death, or punishable with transportation for life"—Nga San Htwa, 5 Rang. 276 (F.B.), 28 Cr.L.J. 773 (overruling Mohammad Eusool, 3 Rang. 538, 27 Cr.L.J. 401); Naranji, supra. See also Janki, 33 Cr.L.J.

Proviso:—"This clause provides for the grant of bail in any case at the discretion of the Court, if the accused is a minor, female, sick or infirm person"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

1311. Sub-section (2):—Sub-section (1) applies to a stage when the accused is first brought before a Court or his arrest is brought to the notice of the Court, and there is little or no information before the Court on which it can act. This clause has no reference to an application for bail presented during the trial, even if it is made before a Magistrate. The appropriate provision applicable where the investigation or inquiry or trial has been proceeding is sub-section (2). The importance of the distinction lies in the fact that the relaxation of the restriction on the powers of the Magistrate under sub-section (1) effected by the Amendment of 1923 does not find place in sub-section (2)—Hutchinson, 1931 A.L.J. 515, 32 Cr.L.J. 1271 (1275), Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 858, 134 I.C. 842, 1931 Cr.C. 612, A.I.R. 1931 All. 356, 53 All. 931.

Bond for appearance:—When a Police officer takes a bond under this section, he has power to make it a condition of the bond that the accused person shall appear before the police; the law does not require that the accused person shall always be directed to appear before a Court. When the law enables a Police officer to take bonds, that officer can certainly direct the accused to appear before the police. To hold otherwise would be to render secs. 499 and 514 meaningless—Kansai Ram, 1913 P.R. 22, 14 Cr.L.J. 631. But in Chandra Sekhar, 11 Cal. 77, it has been held that a bond for appearance before a Police officer is void.

1312. Sub-section (4):—The reason for adding this sub-section has been thus stated by Mr. Rangachariar (the mover of the amendment): "The reason for this amendment is this. As Honorable Members are aware, at the conclusion of the trial in the original Court, oftentimes judgment is not ready for delivery at once, but the Court has come to the conclusion, after taking the verdict of the assessors or the jury in a Sessions trial, or the Magistrate has made up his mind, that the accused is not guilty and therefore proposes to acquit him. As sections 366 and 367 stand, a doubt has been expressed whether really the accused could be set at liberty before judgment is actually pronounced"—Legislative Assembly Debates, 12th February 1923, page 2206.

In a case under the old section a trial was held with the aid of assessors, and they gave their opinions that the accused were not guilty. The Sessions Judge then wrote a short note setting forth the findings of the assessors, and adding his own finding agreeing with the assessors that the accused were not guilty, and they were acquitted. At a later date he wrote a full reasoned judgment. Held that the procedure was a mere irregularity curable by section 537—Sankaralinga v. Narayan, 45 Mad. 913 (F.B.).

The present sub-section validates such procedure, making it conditional on the accused to execute a bond for his appearance when judgment is to be delivered.

But the District Magistrate has no power to cancel a bail and order the re-arrest of a person released on bail by a Subordinate Magistrate—Maung Ba Chit, 4 Bur.L.T. 70, 12 Cr.L.J. 244; Bashir-ud-Din, 33 Cr.L.J. 752, (754), 139 I.C. 330, A.I.R. 1932 All. 327, 1932 Cr.C. 306, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 554. Sub-section (5) gives that power only to the High Court and the Court of Sessions.

In the case of an accused who is released by Police, the Magistrate has no power under section 497 (5) to commit him to custody. The words "by itself" must mean by the Magistrate in question—Lakhamji, 35 Cr.L.J. 580, 147 I.C. 1159, A.I.R.

1933 Sind 331, 27 S.L.R. 197, 1933 Cr.C. 1078. But the principle of law laid down in Lakhami's case does not apply and the words "by itself" in this sub-section are of no significance where bail was granted by the police and was confirmed by the Court on the next day and was subsequently cancelled by it as the offence with which the accused was charged, though appearing as a bailable one in the beginning, turned ultimately to be a non-bailable one—Osman Piroo, 38 Cr.L.J. 93, 165 I.C. 923, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 187, 1936 Cr.C. 972, 30 S.L.R. 131.

Every Judge or Magistrate trying a criminal case has inherent power to see that the trial is properly conducted and that the ends of justice are not defeated, and if facts are brought to its attention, which suggest that unless the person who is being tried is placed under arrest the ends of justice will be defeated, the Court has inherent power to direct his re-arrest. Where, therefore, the Magistrate is satisfied that the accused has been tampering with a prosecution witness, in order to prevent a repetition of the offence he is entitled to direct that the accused be re-arrested notwithstanding the order for his release on bail which had been passed by another Magistrate who dealt with the case at an earlier stage—Rautmai Kanumal, A.I.R. 1940 Bom. 40, 41 Bom.L.R. 1232, 186 I.C. 101, I.L.R. 1940 Bom. 38, 41 Cr.L.J. 251.

The granting of bail in a non-bailable offence is a concession allowed to an accused person and it presupposes that this privilege is not to be abused in any manner and that the accused person has not to come into contact with the prosecution witnesses or to exert any undue influence on them so as to destroy the evidence or to minimise its effect against him. It is a sort of trust reposed in him by Court and if it is found that he has betrayed this trust in any manner or that he has misused the liberty thus granted to him by Court he disentitles himself to the privilege so granted. This is more specially so when he happens to occupy a dominating position in relation to the witnesses concerned and can injure or benefit them by his own fiat. Where, therefore, an accused, in making an attempt to approach the prosecution witnesses and require them to supply with the gist of the statements made by them to the Police, abused the opportunity granted to him by the Court by releasing him on bail, he disentitled himself to enjoy the concession any longer and his bail was cancelled—Jivan Lal Gauba, 37 Cr.L.J. 937, 164 I.C. 376, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 730, 1936 Cr.C. 765, 17 Lah. 779, 9 R.L. 110, 39 P.L.R. 56.

Under this clause, the powers of the High Court are confined to cases of persons released by the Trial Magistrate. Therefore, there is no jurisdiction in the High Court to entertain an application under this clause against an order granting bail passed by a Sessions Judge in a case pending before a sub-Magistrate. But under sec. 561A the High Court has inherent power to interfere with an order granting bail passed by a Sessions Judge—Gulam Jilani, 25 Cr.L.J. 1363, 82 I.C. 755, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 228. Where it appears that attempts have been made by a prisoner to pervert the course of justice the High Court has power under sec. 561A, assuming there to be no power otherwise, to direct the cancellation of the bail-bond, and that the prisoner be committed to custody—Rameswar K'horiwalla, 32 C.W.N. 889 (892). When the High Court passed an order under sec. 498 granting bail, that order for bail may be cancelled by the High Court in exercise of the powers under sec. 561A without the accused person having done anything since the order to violate any condition on which bail was granted—Mohammad Ibrahim, 33 Cr.L.J. 684, 138 I.C. 768, 1932 A.L.J. 701, A.I.R. 1932 All. 534, 1934 Cr.C. 630, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 494. See also Bashiran, 26 Cr.L.J. 4, 83 I.C. 483, A.I.R. 1923 All. 479 and Sanyasaya v. Public Prosecutor, 26 Cr.L.J. 1593, 90 I.C. 665, 22 M.L.W. 156, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 1224.

Reasons must be recorded for cancelling the bail. When the Magistrate did not state his reasons, the High Court in revision admitted the accused to bail—Chengalraya, (1911) 2 M.W.N. 138, 12 Cr.L.J. 503.

Enhancement of bail:—It is open to a Magistrate to demand enhanced bail during the course of the trial if there are circumstances which in the opinion of the Magistrate call for the course to be taken—Keshab, 25 Cr.L.J. 1003, 81 I.C. 715, A.I.R. 1924

All. 320. See also Bashir-ud-Din, 33 Cr.L.J. 752 (754), 139 I.C. 330, A.I.R. 1932 All. 327, 1932 Cr.C. 306, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 554.

1314. Revision:—Where the Sessions Court allows the accused to be at large on bail, it is within the jurisdiction of the High Court to consider whether the order passed by the Sessions Court should or should not be maintained, and also whether under sub-section (5) the accused should be allowed to continue at large—Pritam Singh, 33 P.L.R. 387, 1932 Cr.C. 579 (580), 33 Cr.L.J. 335, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 433, 136 I.C. 709. But the District Magistrate cannot revise any order as to bail passed by a subordinate Magistrate under this section. If the District Magistrate considers the subordinate Magistrate's order to be wrong, he should report it to the High Court—Sadashiv Narayan, 22 Bom 549.

Even the High Court's power of interference is limited. The High Court has jurisdiction to interfere in revision, only if the Judge has passed an illegal order. Where a Sessions Judge after considering the evidence thinks that there are no reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be guilty of the offence of which he is accused, and releases him on bail, the High Court will not go behind this finding and cancel the order of the Judge releasing the accused on bail—Thimma Reddi, 10 M.L.J. 411; Badri Prasad, 5 A.L.J. 419, 8 Cr.L.J. 49. Similarly, if the Sessions Judge, after considering all the grounds of objection, has in his discretion refused to grant bail in case of a non-bailable offence, the High Court will not interfere and admit the accused to bail under section 498—Nga San Tan, 5 Bur.L.J. 170, 28 Cr.L.J. 188. See also Allahrakhio, 35 Cr.L.J. 144, 146 I.C. 561, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 367, 1933 Cr.C. 1339. The High Court will be very cautious in interfering with the discretion of a Magistrate in case of bail under section 497, especially where the prosecution has not tendered evidence to connect the accused with the offence—Lakshman Sangor, Ratanlal 892.

1314B. Right to argue:—Permission to appear and argue one's own application for bail may be granted but this cannot be treated as a precedent for all accused persons in all cases—Hutchinson, 1931 A.L.J. 515, 32 Cr.L.J. 1271, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 858, 134 I.C. 842, 1931 Cr.C. 612, A.I.R. 1931 All. 356, 53 All 931.

1314C. Explanation:—The trying Magistrate is not entitled to make any suggestion or representation in the explanation which he may submit in any case to the High Court of anything which is not founded on the record before him—Mani Krishna, 34 C.W.N. 256.

498. The amount of every bond executed under this Chapter shall be fixed with due regard to the circumstances of the case, and shall not be excessive; and the High Court or Court of Session may, in any case, whether there be an appeal on conviction or not, direct that any person be admitted to bail, or that the bail required by a police officer or Magistrate be reduced.

1314D. Scope of section:—Under this section the High Court can only release the accused on bail or reduce the amount of bail, but cannot order the arrest or commitment to custody of any person who has been released on bail by the lower Courts—Gulam Jilani, 25 Cr.L.J. 1363, 82 I.C. 755, A.I.R. 1925 Nag 228. The High Court can grant bail in cases pending anywhere in the Presidency—Jumna v. Ramanathan, 52 Mad. 52, 55 M.L.J. 690, A.I.R. 1929 Mad. 29 (30). This section does not specially empower the High Court to cancel a bail granted by itself. But it can hardly be said that the High Court has no such power, when such a power is given to a Sessions Judge or Magistrate under sec. 497. Under the wide powers conferred by sec. 561A, the High Court can direct the arrest of a person who has been released on bail under its orders, if it appears that he has committed a serious non-bailable offence—Mirza Mahomed Ibrahim, 1932 A.L.J. 701, 1932 Cr.C. 630. See Note 1313.

The High Court, in the absence of any order by any Court, has no power to direct the offender to be released on bail either under sec. 497 or under sec. 498, Cr. P. C.—Srilal Agarwalla, 44 C.L.J. 134 (135).

Although there is no hard and fast rule, it is desirable that the ordinary practice should certainly be that the lower Court should first be moved and this is particularly desirable in a bail application, where the appropriate Court to deal with the matter is the Court which is going to try the case and where an expression of opinion by a superior Court is likely to prejudice the trial in the lower Court—Mohd-ud-Din Lal Badshah v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 127, 178 I.C. 632, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 762, 40 P.L.R. 716, 11 R.L. 482.

The words "in any case" and "whether there be an appeal on conviction or not" cannot be taken to mean that the Court can act once it has reached finality. The Code must be read as a whole and since its scheme is to render a Court functus officio the moment judgment is signed, the section cannot possibly mean that nevertheless the High Court has power to release an accused on bail and thus suspend sentence when no tribunal is seized of the proceedings—Bashiruddin Ahmad, 38 Cr.L.J. 384, 167 I.C. 373, 9 R.N. 182, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 236, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 181.

Granting of bail by Appellate Court:—When an accused person has been convicted of a non-bailable offence by a competent Court after a regular trial, the Appellate Court should not ordinarily release the accused on bail unless there is an error of law or mistake or mis-statement of fact apparent on the face of the record, or unless there exists any of the reasons mentioned in the proviso to sec. 497 (1). But the Appellate Court should not refuse to grant bail merely on the ground that the accused has been sentenced to a long term of imprisonment by the trial Court, or that the granting of bail has a tendency to increase the number of appeals and of protracting the appellate proceedings—Gul, 29 Cr.L.J. 470 (471, 472), 109 I.C. 118, A.I.R. 1928 Sind 142, 22 S.L.R. 435.

1315. Powers of High Court and Sessions Court:—This section gives the High Court and the Court of Session very wide powers to admit an accused person to bail in any case even when he is charged with a non-bailable offence—Badri Prasad, 5 A.L.J. 419, 8 Cr.L.J. 49; Kamaraju Pandia, 2 Weir 657. The powers of the High Court or the Court of Session given by sec. 498 are not controlled by the statutory limitation laid down in sec. 497 of refusing bail if there appear reasonable grounds for believing the accused to be guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life. The powers in sec. 498 are not fettered by any rules defining the limits within which they would be exercised, as the powers under sec. 497 are—Bishambhar Nath, 11 O.L.J. 527, 1 O.W.N. 281, 25 Cr.L.J. 1132; Hutchinson, 32 Cr.L.J. 1271, 1931 A.L.J. 515, 53 All. 931, 134 I.C. 842, A.I.R. 1931 All. 356, 1931 Cr.C. 612; Fateh Singh, 51 All. 603, 30 Cr.L.J. 697; Achhaibar, 27 A.L.J. 927, 30 Cr.L.J. 718 (719), 117 I.C. 99, A.I.R. 1929 All. 614, Ind. Rul. 1929 All. 675; Joglekar, 33 Cr.L.J. 94, 135 I.C. 113, 1931 A.L.J. 773, A.I.R. 1931 All. 504, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 1, 1931 Cr.C. 892, 54 All. 115 (F.B.). See Krishan Gopal, 35 Cr.L.J. 294, 146 I.C. 1083, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 925, 1933 Cr.C. 1384, 31 P.L.R. 1068. That discretion is unfettered but of course it cannot be exercised arbitrarily but must be exercised judicially. Where there is a reasonable ground for believing that the accused has been guilty of an offence punishable with death or transportation for life, as regards which the Legislature has thought fit to prohibit Magistrates from granting bail at all, the grant of bail by a Sessions Judge or the High Court, who have undoubtedly power under sec. 498, Cr. P. C., is to be made not as a general rule but only in exceptional cases. This is particularly so when the accused is on his trial, the prosecution evidence is closed and the Sessions Judge has refused to exercise his discretion in his favour. This is a rule of practice and caution only—Joglekar, supra. See also Keshav, 35 Cr.L.J. 539, 147 I.C. 1010, A.I.R. 1933 Bom. 492, 35 Bom.L.R. 1072, 1933 Cr.C. 1596; Mahammed Panah, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 131, 28 S.L.R. 47. According to the Oudh Chief Court the High Court has power to release a person on bail in any case, that is to say, that the powers in granting bail in non-bailable offences is unrestricted, but that power has to be used judicially and not in an arbitrary manner—Abhairaj Kunwar, 40 Cr.L.J. 841 (843), 183 I.C. 713, 1939 O.W.N. 791, 1939 O.L.R. 548, 12 R.O. 54, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 8, 1939 A.Cr.C. 155, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 144, 1939 O.A. 665. The Calcutta High Court also holds that although the power of the High Court under this section to grant bail 'in any case' is quite unfettered, still in exercising its discretion the High Court ought to take into consideration the limitations imposed by section 497—Sourindra, 37 Cal. 412, 14 C.W.N. 512. This case has been followed by Nagpur Court in Sheikh Karim, 27 Cr.L.J. 319. (But now the limitations imposed by section 497 are very few). The rule laid down in sec. 497 for the guidance of Courts other than High Courts is a rule founded upon justice and equity, and one which should be followed by the High Courts as well as by every other Court, unless anything appears to the contrary. The extended powers given to the High Court under sec. 498 are not to be used to get rid of this very reasonable and proper provision of the law—Ashraf Ali, 42 Cal. 25, 16 Cr.L.J. 1215. In another case the Calcutta High Court has said that in exercising its discretion under section 498 the High Court should not confine its attention to the question whether the prisoner is likely to abscond or not. Other circumstances may also affect the question of granting bail to accused persons charged with crimes of a grave character—Narendra Lal Khan, 36 Cal. 166, 13 C.W.N. 43, 9 Cr.L.J. 375, 1 I.C. 738. The Rangoon High Court holds that although the High Court has absolute direction in the matter of granting bail, and it is not bound by the provision of sec. 497, still the Legislature having placed the initial stage of dealing with crimes with Magistrates and having in fact enacted that persons accused of non-bailable offences shall not be released on bail except under the terms of section 497, the High Court is bound to follow the general law as a rule, and not to depart from it except under very special circumstances—Boudville, A.I.R. 1925 Rang 129, 85 I.C. 43, 26 Cr.L.J. 427, 2 Rang. 546 (547); Nga San Htwa, 5 Rang 276, 28 Cr.L.J. 773, A.I.R. 1927 Rang 205, 104 I.C. 101 (F.B.); Henderson, 6 L.B.R. 172, 19 I.C. 171, 6 Bur.L.T. 73, 14 Cr.L.J. 171; Htye Yar v. The King, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 474, 172 I.C. 176. In an earlier Sind case it was held that the High Court when passing an order under section 498 was not limited by the restrictions imposed by section 497; that bail should not as a matter of principle be granted in non-bailable cases except in special circumstances; and that the discretion given under section 498 was one that should be exercised according to the exigencies of each case—Harchand, 18 Cr.L.J. 642, 10 S.L.R. 208. But in a later Sind case it has been held that though section 498 gives wide powers to the High Court of granting bail, it should be interpreted as controlled by the provision of sec. 497—Gul, 29 Cr.L.J. 470 (471) (following 37 Cal. 412 and 42 Cal. 25). But the principles of law laid down in Harchand's case was quoted with approval by the same Court in Mahammad, 36 Cr.L.J. 711 (713), 155 I.C. 113, 28 S.L.R. 47, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 131, 1934 Cr.C. 1067. When the High Court is concerned with persons who have been actually convicted, the principle which will necessarily guide the High Court in granting bail will be whether there are reasonable grounds for believing that the convicts committed the offences in question—Sheikh Karim, 27 Cr.L.J. 319, 92 I.C. 703, A.I.R. 1926 Nag 279.

The High Court and the Court of Session can exercise their power of granting bail, as soon as the Police have arrested the accused and even before the case is sent up to the Magistrate—Ebrahim Ahmed, 7 Bur.L.R. 86. They can admit a person to bail even where he has been convicted and has not appealed—Badri Prasad, 8 Cr.L.J. 49, 5 A.L.J. 419. Where the accused relies merely on a technical ground against the probability of his conviction, he should not be admitted to bail—Clive Durant, Ratanlal 480. The High Court refused to grant bail, where the application for bail contained defamatory statements and allegations consisting of attacks on the trying Magistrate and on the public and private conduct of other officers of high rank—Clive Durant, 15 Bom. 483, and Ratanlal 480.

Where after an exhaustive enquiry the accused has been committed by a competent Magistrate on grave and serious charges relating to non-bailable offences the High Court should not lightly enlarge him on bail—Mohi-ud-Din Lal Badshah v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 127, 178 I.C. 632, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 762, 40 P.L.R. 716, 11 R.L. 482. See also Nasir Ali v. Abdul Hamid in Note 1316.

Grant of bail pending appeal to Privy Council:—Where the accused obtained special leave from the Privy Council to appeal to that tribunal, and applied for bail to the Judicial Committee, and the Judicial Committee expressed an opinion that the matter should be decided by the High Court, whereupon the petitioner applied to the High Court for bail, held that the High Court had jurisdiction to make an order in the case releasing the accused on bail, pending the decision of the Privy Council—Subrahmanya Ayyar, 24 Mad. 161. But when in a case the petitioner has no right to appeal to the Privy Council, and the High Court has no power to give leave to appeal to that tribunal, the High Court cannot after it confirms the conviction of the Court below, admit the petitioner to bail, simply because he proposes to apply (but has not yet applied) to the Judicial Committee for leave to appeal to the Privy Council. It cannot do so even under clause 41 of the Letters Patent. As soon as the High Court confirms the conviction on appeal or revision, it becomes functus officio, and has no jurisdiction afterwards to grant bail in order that a petition for leave to appeal may be made to His Majesty in Council, or until the petition for leave to appeal to His Majesty in Council is disposed of—Tulsi Teli, 72 I.C. 362, 24 Cr.L.J. 362, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 64, 50 Cal. 585; Diwan Chand, 1908 P.R. 15, 19 P.W.R. 1908, 8 Cr.L.J. 89; Hanmantrao, 21 N.L.R. 161, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 228, 91 I.C. 1001, 27 Cr.L.J. 185; Pitmal, 81 I.C. 160, 25 Cr.L.J. 672; Babu Lal Chaukani, 9 R.C. 558, 116 I.C. 612, 1936 Cr.C. 1121, I.L.R. (1937) 1 Cal. 464, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 809, 40 C.W.N. 1313; Bashiruddin Ahmad, 38 Cr.L.J. 384, 167 I.C. 373, 9 R.N. 182, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 236, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 181. But when the further stage had been reached by the acceptance on the part of the Judicial Committee of the appeal, the powers of the High Court in regard to bail would be revived and fresh seisin of the case with regard to the question of bail could be considered—Babu Lal Chaukani, supra. Once, however, leave is granted and seisin taken, then section 498, Cr. P. C., expressly empowers the High Court to act in the matter, not on its own motion but on behalf of their Lordships of the Privy Council. Its jurisdiction to that limited extent revives. The highest judicial tribunal in the Empire is then seized of the proceedings and it directs a Court subordinate to it, as it has every right to do, to perform a function which it has authority to perform under this section. The wording of section 498 is wide enough to cover that. The High Court's seisin of the proceedings then revives for this limited purpose in accordance with well-known rules of procedure—Bashiruddin Ahmad, supra. Once the High Court has ordered in a criminal appeal, it becomes functus officio and has no seisin in the case. The seisin may be revived when the Judicial Committee has granted leave to appeal. There is a further distinction between a case in which the Privy Council in granting leave to appeal has also given a direction to the appellant to apply to the High Court for bail, and one in which there is no such direction. The power of the High Court to deal with an application of this sort depends on whether it has been directed by the Privy Council to do so or not. Once leave is granted and seisin taken, his section expressly empowers the High Court to act in the matter not on its own motion but on behalf of the Privy Council and its jurisdiction to that limited extent revives. The High Court has no power to grant bail in this matter, unless it is directed to consider the petitioner's application for bail by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council which has given him leave to appeal—Bauca Faqir Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 982, 177 I.C. 1001, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 697, 40 P.L.R. 595, 11 R.L. 385.

The High Court has inherent jurisdiction (under sec. 561A) to grant bail to an accused who has filed an application to the Judicial Committee for special leave to appeal to the Privy Council but has not yet obtained the leave; but it would be proper for the High Court to wait till the Privy Council has granted the special leave, and then to grant bail on a fresh application being made—Ram Saroop, 49 All. 247, 25 A.L.J. 97, 27 Cr.L.J. 1377, 98 I.C. 593, A.I.R. 1927 All. 97. A different view has been taken by the Nagpur High Court. It has been held that as regards sec. 561A, Cr. P. C., the inherent power of a Court cannot be invoked with respect to any matter which is expressly dealt with by the Code. The question of bail has been expressly dealt with, and although the matter of bail pending an appeal to the Judicial Committee is not there, its provisions on the subject must be regarded as exhaustive. Moreover there should not be any resort to inherent power when there are other remedies available. The Local Government has ample power to suspend sentence and to release a convict on such terms as it chooses to fix. Inherent powers should be used sparingly—Bashiruddin Ahmad, supra. See also Barendra, 39 CLJ 1, where the High Court stayed execution of the sentence in order that the appeal to His Majesty in Council may not be frustrated.

1316. Power of Sessions Judge:—The Sessions Judge can grant bail to 'any person' who has been wrongly convicted by the Magistrate and whose case he can either deal with himself or can refer to the High Court. But the words 'any person' do not include a person convicted by the Sessions Judge himself. When a Sessions Judge, after convicting the accused, released them on bail pending their appeal to the High Court, it was held that he had no jurisdiction to do so. This section does not give him power to alter or vary his own order—Basuppa, 4 Bom.L.R. 55.

The Sessions Judge has power to admit the petitioners to bail in any case, e.g., on a reference under section 123 (2). It stands to reason that if in the case of a person who is convicted and who has preferred an appeal, bail is allowable, bail can similarly be allowed in the case of a person against whom an order has been made under sec. 118, which order is liable to be revised by the Sessions Judge under section 123, sub-section (2)—Ahmed Ali Sardar, 50 Cal 969, 37 CLJ 595, 24 Cr.L.J. 953; Mangal Singh, 28 Cr.L.J. 657, 103 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 189.

As for the powers of the Sessions Judge to grant bail to a person in appeal from an order passed against him under sec. 118, Cr. P. C., see Note 240.

The mere fact that a committal order has been passed, does not in itself afford reasonable grounds to the Sessions Judge for believing that the person so committed is guilty of the offence with which he is charged. The Sessions Judge can, therefore, grant bail to the accused even after commitment in suitable cases—Nasir Ali v. Abdul Hamid, 36 Cr.L.J. 1141, 157 I.C. 286, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 101. But see Badshah v. Emp. in Note 1315.

There is no authority which authorises a Sessions Judge to reverse an order of the High Court in regard to the granting of bail to a particular person before him on trial where no new case for granting bail appears to have arisen after the date of the order of the High Court refusing bail to him—Sardar Jahan, A.I.R. 1933 All. 895, 1933 Cr.C. 1525, 35 Cr.L.J. 614, 148 I.C. 133.

The admission to bail is a matter within the discretion of the Sessions Judge, and where the Judge uses his discretion with proper care, the High Court will decline to interfere—Badri Prasad, 5 A.L.J. 419, 8 Cr.L.J. 49; Sheikh Karim, 27 Cr.L.J. 319, 92 I.C. 703, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 279.

The direction of the Sessions Judge that the petitioners are to show cause why their bail should not be enhanced, is not proper, where it proceeds solely on the basis that the petitioners had challenged the order of the trying Magistrate under section 5, Identification of Prisoners Act, directing measurements and photographs of the petitioners to be taken. The question whether there is any valid reason for enhancing the bail granted to them should be left to the Magistrate who might very well deal with the matter of enhancement of bail on materials placed before him—J. E. Gubbay, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 65, 40 C.W.N. 415.

499. Before any person is released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such sum of money as the police officer or Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient shall be executed by such person, and, when he is released on bail, by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the police-officer or Court, as the case may be.

(2) If the case so require, the bond shall also bind the person released on bail to appear when called upon at the High Court, Court of Session or other Court to answer the charge.

1316A. Scope:—The provisions of this section are not exhaustive and do not override the inherent powers of the High Court in matters of bail. There are no restrictions on the High Court in the matter of imposing conditions on which it grants bail. It is open for instance to the High Court in granting bail, where an accused has been convicted by making a seditious speech, to impose the condition that the accused should abstain from addressing any public meeting or publishing any matter until the decision of the appeal. There is no irregularity in the High Court directing that the sureties shall be responsible for the production of an accused person on bail in the High Court and for his subsequent production in the Court of the District Magistrate of the district where he was tried to hear the reserved judgment in his appeal—Adkoo Umrao, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 420 (421), 40 Cr.L.J. 464, 180 I.C. 608, I.L.R. 1939 Nag. 170, 11 R.N. 387. See also Ram Bilas v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 375, 185 I.C. 598, 1940 P.W.N. 151, 21 P.L.T. 194, 41 Cr.L.J. 214.

The Calcutta-High Court has taken a different view in the matter. It has held that the only condition contemplated by a bail bond is a condition for attendance in Court. A bail bond in which any other condition (e.g., an undertaking for good behaviour such as that the accused will not deliver any speech until the disposal of the case under section 124A, I. P. C., against him) is included, cannot be regarded as a bond under the Code and cannot be forfeited by the Magistrate under sec. 514, Cr. P. Code—Giani Meher Singh v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 138, 185 I.C. 249, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 714, I.L.R. (1939) 2 Cal. 42, 43 C.W.N. 639. The procedure which should be adopted in a case of this sort is for the Police to bring to the notice of the Court the fact that there has been a violation of the undertaking in order that the Court may thereupon cancel the bail bond in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction. It is also possible that by violating the undertaking the accused may commit a contempt of Court. An undertaking, not to make a speech, should not be imported into the bail bond and the bond cannot be forfeited under section 514, Cr. P. C., on breach of that condition—Ibid.

1316B. Power to accept sureties, if can be delegated to another Magistrate:—The granting of bail is a judicial act and not a ministerial one; and no judicial function can be delegated to another in the absence of an express provision of law, or of some rule having the force of law. The proceedings entail something more than the mere passing of an order. The Judge or Magistrate who grants bail has to be personally satisfied in his judicial capacity that the sureties produced are reliable and solvent and also that the persons who sign are actually the persons they purport to be. Fraudulent impersonation is not unknown in these matters. It follows he cannot delegate this responsibility to another, unless the law expressly empowers him to do so. The very fact that secs. 60, 76 (1), 85 and 86, Cr. P. C., which allow a bond to be executed before a Magistrate or person not seized of the proceedings, were deemed necessary by the Legislature indicates that they are exceptions, and not part of the general law. The sureties must appear before him and satisfy him of their solvency and their identity, except in so far as they are expressly authorised to do otherwise by some express rule or provision of law—Banarsidas, 38 Cr.L.J. 633, 168 I.C. 876, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 168, 9 RN 275

Acceptance of sureties:—The surety bond is something more than a mere contract with the Crown. The parties to a contract are not bound to enter into it; nor are the results which flow from one the same. Provided certain conditions are fulfilled, a Magistrate is bound to grant bail. It is a right to which the accused is entitled and not a mere favour. That at once removes the matter from the realm of contract. So also the Magistrate is bound to accept the sureties produced, provided they are properly identified and are solvent, and reliable. He cannot, for instance, reject them on the ground of their political views—Ibid.

1317. Time and place:—If a bail-bond fixes neither the time for the production of the prisoner, nor the place of appearance it cannot be forfeited for the non-appearance of the prisoner—Chattar Singh, 1885 A.W.N. 44. Bail proceedings are special proceedings about which there are specific directions in the Code, and they must be strictly followed. This section states that the time and place at which the accused is to appear must be mentioned in the bond, and the second clause of this section states that if the accused is to appear in some other Court the bond must expressly say so. It is not open to Courts to depart from these express provisions. Where in the printed bond executed by the accused as well as the surety, there is no mention of the Court in which the accused is directed to appear, it is impossible to enforce the vague and slovenly bond of this character—Chitaram, 38 Cr.L.J. 100, 165 I.C. 825, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 243, 1936 Cr.C. 1037, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 137; Brahma Nand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 All. 682 (684), 1939 A.L.J. 779, 184 I.C. 662, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 696, 1939 A.Cr.C. 164, 41 Cr.L.J. 85. See also Imarat Mallik in Note 1333.

There is nothing illegal in requiring the accused to bind himself to appear from the date of the execution of the bail-bond on every day until the case is disposed of. No notice is necessary before proceeding to enforce the penalty if default is made—Anonymous, 6 M.H.C.R. App. 38, 2 Weir 662.

If no day is specified in the bond but the day is to be a day of which notice is to be given thereafter, reasonable notice must be given to enable both the accused and the surety to attend—Fatehchand Wadhwal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 136 (137), 41 Cr.L.J. 802, 189 I.C. 800.

Where the accused himself did not execute a bond for his appearance but a third person executed a bond as a surety, the bond was in accordance with the provisions of this section and the surety was amenable to the penalties contemplated by law in the event of his failure to produce the accused. It was not necessary as a condition precedent that there should have been a bond executed by the accused himself—Reoti Prasad, 36 Cr.L.J. 297, 153 I.C. 155, A.I.R. 1934 All. 1046, 1934 Cr.C. 1329. The same High Court took a different view in Brahma Nand v. Emp., supra. It has been held that when a person is released on bail he must himself execute a bond. The law does not contemplate any person being released on bail without executing a bond himself merely upon an undertaking or security given by a surety. The only exception to this rule is to be found in sec. 514B, Cr. P. Code. It is incumbent under sec. 499, Cr. P. C., to get a bond executed by the person who is released on bail and unless that is done there can be no valid bond by a surety alone. See also Wadhwa Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 318, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 247, 109 I.C. 219, 29 Cr.L.J. 491. The recent view of the Lahore High Court, however, is that section 496, Cr. P. C., does not state that a person released on bail must give a bond himself. Nor is there anything requiring such a bond on first principles. The person giving bail enters into a contract with a penalty clause to produce the accused person before a Magistrate when called upon. The person giving bail is the principal. The person for whom bail is given is the subject of the contract. If the person giving bail fails to

See also Ram Bilas v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 375, 185 I.C. 598, 1940 P.W.N. 151, 21 P.L.T. 194, 41 Cr.L.J. 214.

There is nothing illegal in requiring the accused to bind himself to appear from the date of the execution of the bail-bond on every day until the case is disposed of. No notice is necessary before proceeding to enforce the penalty if default is made—Anonymous, 6 M.H.C.R. App. 38, 2 Weir 662.

If no day is specified in the bond but the day is to be a day of which notice is to be given thereafter, reasonable notice must be given to enable both the accused and the surety to attend—Fatehchand Wadhwal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 136 (137), 41 Cr.L.J. 802, 189 I.C. 800.

Where the accused himself did not execute a bond for his appearance but a third person executed a bond as a surety, the bond was in accordance with the provisions of this section and the surety was amenable to the penalties contemplated by law in the event of his failure to produce the accused. It was not necessary as a condition precedent that there should have been a bond executed by the accused himself—Reoti Prasad, 36 Cr.L.J. 297, 153 I.C. 155, A.I.R. 1934 All 1046, 1934 Cr.C. 1329. The person for whom bail is given is the subject of the contract. If the person giving bail fails to perform his contract then the penalty clause may be put into operation against him, although as in other contracts with a penalty clause it is not necessary to exact the penalty in full—Indar v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 339, 42 P.L.R. 411, 41 Cr.L.J. 958, 190 I.C. 688.

Verbal direction to appear:—By the terms of a bail-bond the defendant bound himself to appear 'on the first day of inquiry or at other times required'. He appeared on the first day of the inquiry and was verbally directed to appear on a subsequent date, but failed to do so. It was held that the amount secured by the bond could be legally forfeited by reason of such non-attendance—Haslavaram Subba Reddi, 2 Weir 658.

Sufficient sureties:—The Magistrate will not be committing an illegality in insisting that, in the light of the provisions laid down in sec. 514, Cr. P. C., that security alone can be termed sufficient which is backed by movable property of the value of the amount secured—K. L. Gauba v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 955 (957), 170 I.C. 586, 18 Lah. 114, 10 R.L. 135, 39 P.L.R. 643, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 411.

Omission of date by surety:—In a bail-bond, the accused person bound himself to appear on a specified date, and below his signature was the undertaking by the surety that he would cause the accused to appear, but this declaration did not mention the date for the accused's appearance. The accused having made default, the security was forfeited. It was held that the bail-bond and the undertaking by the surety should be read as one document, and the undertaking should be read as referring to the date mentioned in the portion of the bond signed by the accused, that the omission of date by the surety was immaterial, and that therefore the security was rightly forfeited—Mappillai Kader, 19 Cr.L.J. 687, 46 I.C. 47 (Mad.).

Appearance before Police:—The words 'until otherwise directed by the Police officer' shew that a bond under sec. 497 may require the accused to appear before the Police; the direction as to appearance is not limited to appearance before a Court—Kansai Ram, 22 P.R. 1913, 14 Cr.L.J. 613.

500. (1) As soon as the bond has been executed, the person for whose appearance it has been executed shall be released; and, when he is in jail, the Court admitting him to bail shall issue an order of release to the officer in charge of the jail, and such officer on receipt of the order shall release him.

(2) Nothing in this section, section 496 or section 497 shall be deemed to require the release of any person liable to be detained for some matter other than that in respect of which the bond was executed.

1317A. Released:—When a Court orders the release of an accused under this section, it has no right or power to put any restrictions on the accused's movements, and obviously when an accused person is released on the suretyship of another, the intention is that the surety should have control over his movements. Otherwise there is no sense in making the surety responsible for the attendance of the accused in Court. Therefore the order of the Magistrate that the accused should be kept in the Mahila Ashram relieves the surety of his responsibility under the bond as the accused is not actually "released". That is to say, she is not released within the meaning of this section, and this being so, the surety is not bound by the terms of his bond—Raghubar Dayal v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 219 (220), 172 I.C. 862, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 81, 10 R.O. 196, 1938 O.W.N. 46, 1938 O.L.R. 31, 13 Luck. 720, 1938 A Cr.C. 7, 1938 O.A. 75.

501. If, through mistake, fraud or otherwise, insufficient sureties have been accepted, or if they afterwards become insufficient, the Court may issue a warrant of arrest directing that the person released on bail be brought before it and may order him to find sufficient sureties, and, on his failing so to do, may commit him to jail.

1318. Scope:—This section applies only to a case where there were sureties; it does not apply where the accused was let out on his own bond, without any surety—Karuthan Ambalam, 38 Mad. 1088, 17 Cr.L.J. 132, 33 I.C. 308.

Insufficient sureties:—A Magistrate is justified in increasing the amount of bail if by inquiry the case turn out to be more serious than he at first imagined—Sita Ram v. Govind, 66 P.L.R. 1912, 13 Cr.L.J. 474, 15 I.C. 314.

502. (1) All or any sureties for the attendance and appearance of a person released on bail may at any time apply to a Magistrate to discharge the bond, either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants.

(2) On such application being made, the Magistrate shall issue his warrant of arrest directing that the person so released be brought before him.

(3) On the appearance of such person pursuant to the warrant, or on his voluntary surrender, the Magistrate shall direct the bond to be discharged either wholly or so far as relates to the applicants, and shall call upon such person to find other sufficient sureties, and, if he fails to do so, may commit him to custody.

Where a surety has applied for cancellation of the bail-bond and the Magistrate has received the application there is no other alternative left to the Magistrate than to cancel the bail-bond. There is no need to hear the application on the merits, and the Magistrate cannot dismiss it because of the applicant's failure to attend and plead—Narayan Shivram, 9 Bom.L.R. 1285, 6 Cr.L.J. 385. This section does not provide for a Magistrate discharging a surety so soon as he applies. The Magistrate shall issue a warrant directing the arrest of the accused, and only on the appearance of the accused before him shall the Magistrate then discharge the surety. He cannot discharge the surety before the accused appears or is brought before him—Fatehchand Wadhwal, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 136, 41 Cr.L.J. 802, 189 I.C. 806, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 479. Where a surety applies for discharge of his bond and the arrest of the accused, a Magistrate cannot forfeit the security bond without complying with the provisions of sub-sec. (2) of this section—Gurmukh, 27 Cr.L.J. 848, 95 I.C. 768; Tha Maung, 38 Cr.L.J. 1010, 171 I.C. 80, 10 R.R. 130, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 244. There is nothing in this section that it is the duty of the sureties to surrender the accused persons if they feel that they are unable to carry out their obligations—Tha Maung, supra.

CHAPTER XL.

OF COMMISSIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

503. (1) Whenever, in the course of an inquiry, a trial or any other proceeding under this Code, it appears to a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Court of Session or the High Court that the examination of a witness is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate or Court may dispense with such attendance and may issue a commission to any District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such witness resides, to take the evidence of such witness.

When attendance of witness may be dispensed with.

Issue of commission and procedure thereunder.

(2) When the witness resides in any Indian State or tribal area in which there is an officer representing the Central Government or the Crown Representative the commission may be issued to such officer.

(2A) When the witness resides in British Burma, the commission may be issued to any District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class within the local limits of whose jurisdiction in British Burma such witness resides.

(3) The Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is issued, or, if he is the District Magistrate, he, or such Magistrate of the first class as he appoints in this behalf, shall proceed to the place where the witness is or shall summon the witness before him, and shall take down his evidence in the same manner, and may for this purpose exercise the same powers, as in trials of warrant cases under this Code.

(4) Where the commission is issued to such officer as is mentioned in sub-section (2), he may delegate his powers and duties under this commission to any officer subordinate to him whose powers are not less than those of a Magistrate of the first class in British India.

Amendment:—In sub-section (2) for “the territories of any Prince or Chief in India” the words “any Indian State or tribal area” and for “British Indian Government” the words “the Central Government or the Crown Representative” have been substituted, by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Sub-section (2A) has been inserted by the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1940 (Act XXXV of 1940) which comes into force on such date as the Central Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint in this behalf.

1319. Scope of section:—This section provides for the issue of a commission to examine a witness in British India or in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Government. This section does not provide for the examination of a witness residing outside India—Moorga Chetty, 5 Bom. 338; Corporal Allen, 10 Cr.L.J. 571, 4 I.C. 400; Abdul Gani, 49 Bom. 878, 27 Cr.L.J. 114 (116), 27 Bom.L.R. 1373; Fazal Rahman Khan, 37 Cr.L.J. 618, 162 I.C. 270, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 101, 1936 Cr.C. 311.

Burma has ceased to be part of British India. Therefore this section does not empower the District Magistrate to issue a commission for the examination of any witness in Burma—Nachiappa Chetty v. Nachiappa Chettiar, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 192, 1937 M.Cr.C. 318, 1937 M.W.N. 1132, 46 M.L.W. 703, 171 I.C. 931, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 902, I.L.R. 1938 Mad. 455, 39 Cr.L.J. 27. In order to remove this difficulty sub-section (2A) has been inserted by the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1940 (Act XXXV of 1940). This sub-section now empowers the British Indian Courts to issue commissions to any District Magistrate or Magistrates of the first class in British Burma to take evidence of persons residing within the local limits of his jurisdiction.

In Suppaya Chettyar v. Karuppaya Pillay, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 528 (530) Mackney, J., also observed: "As regards the question of summoning witnesses residing in Madras, it has been pointed out to me that it is to say the least of it doubtful, whether, now after 1st April when this country no longer forms part of the Indian Empire, summons could be issued to persons residing out of Burma, and even whether there is any procedure for the issue of commission for the examination of these witnesses."

The High Court has no authority in a criminal case to issue a commission or a letter of request to the English Court for the examination of a witness residing in England—Corporal Allen, 10 Cr.L.J. 571, 4 I.C. 400 (All).

A Criminal Court in British India has no jurisdiction to issue a commission to an officer representing British Indian Government resident in the territory of an Indian State for the purpose of examining the Ruling Prince of that State. Section 503 (2) has no application to a Ruling Prince of an Indian State—Cheda, 34 Cr.L.J. 795, 144 I.C. 582, 10 O.W.N. 234, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 181, 1933 Cr.C. 384, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh 270, 8 Luck. 439, where A. M. Jacob, 19 Cal. 113, was distinguished on the ground that commission was issued in that case with the express consent of the Ruler.

This section relates to the issue of a commission to a District Magistrate or a 1st class Magistrate; and the District Magistrate or 1st class Magistrate can proceed to the place where the witness resides. But the District Magistrate cannot direct a subordinate Magistrate, before whom the case is pending to go to the house of a witness to examine him. Even if it were to be construed as an order for examination by a Commissioner, the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to make such an order except on a reference made to him under section 506—Chato, 2 S.L.R. 8, 10 Cr.L.J. 211.

Where no writ of commission was issued and there was no return to the commission but the evidence was merely placed on the record without comment, the High Court was not prepared to take the evidence into consideration—Lachmi Lal, 1922 Pat.H.C.C. 159, 23 Cr.L.J. 218, 65 I.C. 1002.

'In the course of inquiry':—A committing Magistrate is competent to examine a witness in the course of the inquiry before himself. But after making the order of committal, he has no jurisdiction to issue a commission for taking evidence so that it might be available at the trial before the Court of Session or High Court. After a commitment is made, application for the examination of witness on commission must be made to the High Court or to the particular Judge exercising original criminal jurisdiction in the High Court or to the Court of Session, as the case may be—Jacob, 19 Cal. 113; Ramchandra Govind, 19 Bom. 749.

'Witness':—The section relates to commission for the examination of witnesses. In the preliminary stage of a proceeding a complainant is not a witness, and a commission cannot be issued for his examination—Sarb Dayal, 10 P.R. 1896. But if a complainant calls himself to testify to matters within his knowledge, he will as regards such testimony be a witness for the prosecution and the issue of commission for his examination is perfectly legal—Mirza Abdul, 14 Cr.L.J. 3, 1913 P.W.R. 11. The terms of this section are very wide. They refer not only to an inquiry or trial, but to any proceeding. This section authorises the examination of any witness, and a complainant is certainly a witness—Abhoyeswari v. Kishori Mohan, 42 Cal. 19, 18 C.W.N. 1020, 15 Cr.L.J. 348.

Witness residing within jurisdiction:—There is nothing in the language of this section to support the contention that the Court has no authority to examine a witness on commission when he is within the Court's jurisdiction—Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 6 Bom. 285. See also Hem Coomaree, 24 Cal. 551, 1 C.W.N. 333.

It is doubtful whether a Presidency Magistrate or the High Court has power under this section to issue commission for the examination of a witness in a Presidency-town, because there is no "District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class" in a Presidency-town to whom the commission can be issued. But there is nothing to prevent a Presidency Magistrate from examining a witness residing within his jurisdiction, at some place other than the Court-house—Hem Coomaree, 24 Cal. 551, 1 C.W.N. 333.

Expert witnesses:—Where an expert in handwriting appears to be the principal witness in the case, he ought not to be examined on commission but should appear before the Court—McGrath v. Brachis, 1911 M.W.N. 97, 9 I.C. 347, 12 Cr.L.J. 64, 9 M.L.T. 334. The evidence of a handwriting expert has always to be carefully weighed but when given on commission, in the absence of the accused, its value is very considerably reduced—Nur Din, 29 Cr.L.J. 377, 108 I.C. 369, 10 Lah.L.J. 235, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 533.

1320. Pardanashin ladies:—A pardanashin lady has a right, as a witness in a criminal case, to be exempt from personal appearance at Court and to be examined on commission—Hurro Soondery, 4 Cal. 20. If a complainant is a pardanashin lady, she may be examined on commission under this section, because a complainant is treated as a witness—Abhoyeswari v. Kishori Mohan, 42 Cal. 19, 18 C.W.N. 1020. This section allows the examination on commission of a witness who is a ghosha woman although she is practically the complainant—2 Weir 659. The word 'inconvenience' in this section empowers the Court to allow their examination by commission, where according to the customs and manners of the country they ought not to be compelled to appear in public—Faridunnissa, 5 All. 92 (93). See also 1 S.L.R. 5, 9 Cr.L.J. 249. An application by a pardanashin woman to be examined on commission on the ground that her appearance in Court would cause social degradation to her, was granted where she lived near the Court house and volunteered to pay the expenses of the commission, and the opposite party did not insist on her examination in open Court—Din Tarini, 15 Cal. 775; Hem Coomaree, 24 Cal. 551, 1 C.W.N. 333. The same view was adopted by the Madras High Court—Man Bhoy, 12 Cr.L.J. 501, 12 I.C. 221. Even a daughter of a prostitute is entitled to be examined on commission if she is pardanashin and living a married life, despite her lowly origin—Mirza Abdul, 1913 P.W.R. 11, 14 Cr.L.J. 3.

In an Allahabad case, however, it has been held that it cannot be adopted as a general principle that pardanashin ladies are in all cases to be examined on commission at some place other than the Court-house itself. If it becomes imperatively necessary to take her evidence the Magistrate should make arrangements, so as to take her evidence either in an empty Court-room in the presence of himself, the accused, his pleader and the pleader of the prosecution, if there be any, or if no empty room is available, in his own private room or some other room in the Court building—Basant Bibi, 12 All. 69. In a prosecution under sec. 498, I. P. C., where the identity of the woman alleged to have been enticed is in question, and the accused insists on issuing a commission for her examination on the ground that she is a pardanashin woman, the better course is that instead of issuing commission, the Magistrate should examine her in Chambers—Mahomed v. Bacho, AIR. 1930 Sind 56, 120 I.C. 518, 32 Cr.L.J. 115, 1930 Cr.C. 94. See also Imp. v. Mewaram, 12 Cr.L.J. 398, 11 I.C. 582, 4 S.L.R. 257. In another Allahabad case it was held that where the pardanashin woman was not merely a witness but was also the complainant in a case of defamation (which gave both a civil and a criminal remedy), the fact that she avoided the civil remedy and chose to set the criminal law in motion materially altered her position, and the accused had a right to have her evidence taken in his presence in the Court. Otherwise there would be endless cases of false charge and malicious prosecution—Fardunnissa, 5 All. 92 (93).

1321. Delay, expense or inconvenience:—The taking of evidence on commission in criminal cases should be most sparingly resorted to. Such a procedure is unknown to English practice, and in this country it ought not to be adopted except in cases of delay, expense or inconvenience. The Courts would have to experience extreme difficulty in dealing with cases of false charge and perjured testimony, if they have not the advantage of considering the demeanour of witnesses in order to ascertain the truth—Fardunnissa, 5 All. 92 (94). If a witness is unable to attend the Court owing to illness (e.g., weak heart and a painful internal malady) the proper course for the Magistrate would be to first ascertain whether it would be possible for the witness to come to Court within a reasonable time; and if not possible, then the Magistrate will have to reluctantly come to the conclusion that his evidence should be taken on commission—Jamuna Singh, 3 Pat. 591 (594). Where the evidence of two witnesses was a most material one in the case, in as much as they deposed to the identification of the stolen property, on which deposition the whole case depended, the witnesses ought not to have been examined on commission but their attendance before the Court ought to have been procured, and the expense of Rs. 500 in procuring their attendance was not considered to be unreasonable or excessive, having regard to the circumstances of the case—Burke, 6 All. 224.

'May issue'—Discretion of Court:—The issue of a commission for examination is entirely in the discretion of the Court. In criminal cases, the issue of a commission would be a most unsatisfactory course of proceeding, and one dangerous to the interests of the community. And the High Court refused to issue commission for the examination of a prosecution witness even though he was 63 years old and unable to attend owing to sickness—Counsell, 8 Cal. 896. The issue of commission is an unsatisfactory proceeding, because on the one hand the Court has no opportunity of noting the demeanour of the witness, and on the other hand, of controlling irrelevant and unnecessary or harassing cross-examination of the witness. The discretion to issue a commission should be sparingly exercised, and only in cases of real hardship and inconvenience, having due regard to the prejudice which is likely to be thereby caused to the opponent—Vishnoo v. Dipchand, 20 S.L.R. 28, 27 Cr.L.J. 89, 91 I.C. 393. It is desirable, where possible, that the normal procedure of the Court should be followed, witnesses should ordinarily be examined in the Court precincts, and the Magistrate who tries the case should himself see the witnesses—Saleh, AIR. 1936 Sind 221, 38 Cr.L.J. 127, 166 I.C. 45. It is desirable that the witness on whose statement the accused is likely to be convicted should be examined in the presence of the accused so that the latter may get a chance of cross-examining him and the Court may also have a chance of noticing the demeanour of the witness; but to say that in no case a commission should be issued for the examination of a witness would be to delete the provisions of secs. 503 and 506, Cr. P. C.—Bala Bux v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 732, 176 I.C. 558, AIR. 1938 Pat. 366, 19 P.L.T. 395, 4 B.R. 734, 11 R.P. 85. A Mahant cannot claim the privilege of being examined on commission—Saleh, supra. The mere fact that a witness is temporarily ill is no ground for allowing him to be examined on commission—Mahomed Shafi, 13 P.L.T. 345, 1932 Cr.C. 639, 33 Cr.L.J. 942, 140 I.C. 291, AIR. 1932 Pat. 242, Ind. rather than he should be examined on commission, but, where he has already appeared twice in Court for cross-examination and his condition is clearly very bad, commission must be issued—H. Guha v. R. R. Chanda, 38 Cr.L.J. 875, 170 I.C. 238, 10 R.R. 67, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 231. In *Asst. Govt. Advocate v. Rul. 1931 Pat. 186, a commission was issued for examination of a prisoner in jail provided the accused were reimbursed for the additional expenditure that would be entailed on them.

It is most unsatisfactory that an important witness should be examined on commission in the absence of both complainant and accused—Sardul Singh, 27 Cr.L.J. 840, 95 I.C. 760, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 567. See also Lachman Lal, 1922 Pat. H. C. C. 159, 23 Cr.L.J. 218, 65 I.C. 1002, where this principle of law was enunciated although there was no question regarding the absence of the parties at the time of the examination of the witness on commission.

Sub-section (2):—Where the accused was convicted on the basis of the evidence taken on commission in Nepal, held that the onus of proving that Nepal is in India as defined by the General Clauses Act, sec. 3, sub-sec. 27, lies on the party who alleges that the evidence taken there is proper evidence and on their failing to do so the conviction must be set aside—Singbir Lama, 7 C.W.N. 635.

Sub-section (3):—Where the Magistrate issues commission for the examination of a witness in a Native State, the officer representing the British Indian Government is bound either to proceed where the witness is, or to summon such witness before him; or he may delegate his functions to any officer subordinate to him. But he cannot decline to execute the commission on the ground of inconvenience or some other similar reason. The provisions of sub-section (3) are mandatory in this respect. Thus, the officer cannot refuse to execute the commission on the ground that there is no Resident Political Officer in that State who can execute the commission, for the Cr. P. Code nowhere speaks of a 'Resident Political Officer'—Sikandar, 9 Lah. 347, 29 Cr.L.J. 202.

Sub-section (4)—Delegation:—This sub-section was added to the Code of 1898. Under the Code of 1882, when a commission was issued to a British Resident for the examination of a witness residing in a Native State, he could not delegate his powers to his subordinate, but had to personally execute such commission—Mohpal Singh, 1896 A.W.N. 106. The present sub-section provides for such delegation.

Where the High Court remanded a case to a Magistrate with directions to examine the defence witnesses on commission but the Magistrate recorded the depositions of those witnesses himself, held that no valid objection can be taken to the admissibility of the evidence recorded by the Magistrate and that the irregularity, if any, is covered by sec. 537 C—Sikander, 30 Cr.L.J. 948, 118 I.C. 643, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 104, alleged to have Rul. 1929 Lah. 803.

504. (1) If the witness is within the local limits of the jurisdiction of any Presidency Magistrate, the Magistrate or Court issuing the commission may direct the same to such Presidency Magistrate, who thereupon may compel the attendance of, and examine, such witness as if he were a witness in a case pending before himself.

(1A) When a commission is issued under this section to a Chief Presidency Magistrate, he may delegate his powers and duties under the commission to any Presidency Magistrate subordinate to him.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect the power of the High Court to issue commissions under the Slave Trade Act, 1876, section 3.

Change:—Sub-section (1A) has been added by section 137 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923, to provide for the delegation of powers and duties of a Presidency Magistrate to a subordinate Presidency Magistrate.

505. (1) The parties to any proceeding under this Code in which a commission is issued, may respectively forward any interrogatories in writing which the Magistrate or Court directing the commission may think relevant to the issue, and the Magistrate or officer to whom the commission is directed or to whom the duty of executing such commission has been delegated, shall examine the witness upon such interrogatories.

(2) Any such party may appear before such Magistrate or officer by pleader, or if not in custody, in person, and may examine, cross-examine and re-examine (as the case may be) the said witness.

Change:—The italicised words have been added by sec. 138 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. This amendment is consequential to the amendment made in sec. 504.

Section 256, Cr. P. C., gives an accused person the right to have the witnesses for the prosecution cross-examined after charge has been framed, and that right is not in any way affected by the provisions contained in Chap. XL. Sec. 507, which is one of the sections contained in Chap. XL, provides for the inspection of depositions taken on commission, and it is open to a person accused in a warrant case, to refrain from putting in any interrogatories when the commission is first issued and to apply at a later stage (that is to say, after he has inspected the deposition taken on commission and after charge has been framed against him), for reissue of the commission together with his cross-interrogatories—Dombain v Somesuar, 36 Cr. L.J. 239, 152 I.C. 1005, 38 C.W.N. 673, 59 C.L.J. 377, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 698, 1934 Cr. C. 1044, 61 Cal. 824.

506. Whenever, in the course of an inquiry or a trial or any other proceeding under this Code before any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, it appears that a commission ought to be issued for the examination of a witness whose evidence is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate shall apply to the District Magistrate, stating the reasons for the application; and the District Magistrate may either issue a commission in the manner hereinbefore provided or reject the application.

1323. Where a case is pending before a subordinate Magistrate, the District Magistrate cannot issue a commission for the examination of a witness in that case, without a reference by the subordinate Magistrate under this section. The District Magistrate cannot on his own motion direct the subordinate Magistrate to go to the house of a witness to examine him—Chato, 2 S.L.R. 8, 10 Cr.L.J. 211. Any party, who has a case pending in a Court other than the Courts mentioned in sec. 503 and desires that his witnesses should be examined on commission, should move the trial Court to apply to the District Magistrate in the manner stated in sec. 506. If the trial Court declines to comply with this request, the party aggrieved will have his remedy by an application in revision—Khanchand v. Gomibai, 35 Cr.L.J. 22, 146 I.C. 203, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 278, 1933 Cr.C. 952; Saleh, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 221, 38 Cr.L.J. 127, 166 I.C. 45. A Magistrate can take action under this section if the evidence of the witness is necessary, but not otherwise—Dinabandhu v. Hasan Ali, 33 C.W.N. 1088, 31 Cr.C. 645, 124 I.C. 325.

507. (1) After any commission issued under sec. 503 or sec. 506 has been duly executed, it shall be returned, together with the deposition of the witness examined thereunder, to the Court out of which it issued; and the commission, the return thereto and the deposition shall be open at all reasonable times to inspection of the parties, and may, subject to all just exceptions, be read in evidence in the case by either party, and shall form part of the record.

(2) Any deposition so taken, if it satisfies the conditions prescribed by section 33 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, may also be received in evidence at any subsequent stage of the case before another Court.

1324. Sub-section (2)—Admissibility of evidence taken on commission:—This section has been enacted on the basis of the judgment in Ramchandra Gobind, 19 Bom. 749. Under the 1882 Code, evidence taken under a commission issued by the Chief Presidency Magistrate during the course of an inquiry before him was held inadmissible at the trial of the same case at the High Court Sessions—Jacob, 19 Cal. 113. This difficulty has been removed by this sub-section.

The words "Any deposition so taken" in sub-sec. (2) of this section mean a deposition taken under sub-sec. (1). If a deposition satisfies the conditions prescribed by sec. 33, Evidence Act, 1872, it may also be received in evidence at any subsequent stage of the case before another Court. So, it is clear that the examination and cross-examination of a witness taken on commission in the previous proceedings in the case is admissible without anything further in subsequent proceedings before another Magistrate when the accused demands that the witnesses be re-examined and re-heard in accordance with the provisions of sec. 350 (1)(a), Cr. P. C. A demand of this sort cannot apply to a case of a witness who has never been summoned, never been heard by the Court and whose evidence has only been taken upon commission. But sub-sec. (2) may not cover a case where a Magistrate on his own motion in the subsequent proceeding recommending the inquiry or trial has framed a charge, when the right of the accused to cross-examine the witness under sec. 256 or sec. 257, Cr. P. C., might arise—Sukhranddas v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 193, 42 Cr L.J. 80, 191 I.C. 127, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 498. See also Dombrain v. Someswar in Note 835 and the rulings under the heading "Witness" examined on commission" in Note 1015.

Evidence taken on commission is admissible in a trial of a seaman for an offence committed on the High Seas—Barton, 16 Cal. 238.

508. In every case in which a commission is issued under sec. 503 or sec. 506, the inquiry, trial or other proceeding may be adjourned for a specified time reasonably sufficient for the execution and return of the commission.

1324A. When a commission has been issued, the trial should be postponed till the return of the commission. The trial and commission cannot go together. The discretion given by this section to adjourn proceedings ought to be exercised in a reasonable manner. The accused person should not be detained for an unnecessarily long time—See Jacob, 19 Cal. 113.

1324B. This section has been inserted by the Code of Criminal Procedure (Amendment) Act, 1940 (Act XXXV of 1940) which comes into force on such date as the Central Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, appoint in this behalf. It empowers the British Indian Courts to execute commissions issued by the Courts in British Burma.

CHAPTER XLI.

SPECIAL RULES OF EVIDENCE.

509. (1) The deposition of a Civil Surgeon or other medical witness, taken and attested by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused, or taken on commission under Chapter XL, may be given in evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, although the deponent is not called as a witness.

(2) The Court may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine

Power to summon such deponent as to the subject-matter of medical witness. his deposition.

1325. Scope:—This section is not intended to be applied where the medical witness is present in Court—Rangappa Goundan, 37 Cr.L.J. 471, 161 I.C. 663, 1936 M.W.N. 110, 43 M.L.W. 307, 70 M.L.J. 447, 59 Mad. 349.

This section confines itself to expert evidence tendered by a medical witness as such. It has no application to evidence relating to facts tendered by a person who also happens to be a medical man. In recording the statement of the deceased the doctor does not act as a medical man. It is, therefore, necessary to prove the dying declaration by producing the doctor who records it—Waris Khan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 209 (211), 1940 O.W.N. 177, 15 Luck. 429.

1325A. Deposition:—It is only deposition of a Civil Surgeon that can be taken in evidence; the only opinion of the Civil Surgeon which can be considered in judicially dealing with the case is an opinion expressed by him when examined as a witness under the usual tests to which witnesses are subjected. The Civil Surgeon's letter addressed to the Sessions Judge expressing an opinion as to the nature of the wound inflicted upon the deceased, is an extra-judicial matter and cannot be received in evidence—Samuruddin, 8 Cal. 211; Budhu Koiri, 40 C.L.J. 563, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 538; Bechun Prasad v. Jhuri, A.I.R. 1936 All 363 (364), 1936 Cr.C. 427, 161 I.C. 49, A.L.R. 1936 All. 248, 1936 A.L.J. 189, 1936 A.W.R. (H.C.) 188. So also, the certificate of a medical officer as to the cause of the death of a person and of the fatal character of the wounds is no evidence. He should be examined regarding those points, and some evidence should be taken to identify the wounded body with that of the person whose murder is the subject of the charge—Venkatroyadu, 2 Weir 659. See also Rampear Rai v. Bhogia, 8 I.C. 713 (Cal.); Ahila Manaji v. Emp., 26 Cr.L.J. 339 (340), 47 Bom. 74, 24 Bom.L.R. 83, A.I.R. 1923 Bom 183; Madhawa v. Jai Kishan Das, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 427, 106 I.C. 493, 29 P.L.R. 195. The report of a Medical man on his post mortem examination cannot be treated as evidence, though it may be used by him to refresh his memory when giving evidence—Roghuni Singh, 9 Cal. 455. The report (notes of post mortem examination) is not admissible as evidence except to contradict the officer who made it. It may, however, be used by that officer when under examination for the purpose of refreshing his memory—Jadob Das, 4 C.W.N. 129 (143), 27 Cal. 295; Ram Sarup, 6 C.W.N. 98 (101); Mohammad Yusuf, 31 Cr.L.J. 1026 (1038), 126 I.C. 449, A.I.R. 1930 Sind 225; Rangappa Goundan, 37 Cr.L.J. 471, 161 I.C. 663, 1936 M.W.N. 110, 43 M.L.W. 307, 70 M.L.J. 447, 59 Mad. 349, A.I.R. 1936 Mad 426, 1936 Cr.C. 509; Mohammad Salabat, 38 Cr.L.J. 869 (870), 170 I.C. 253, 39 P.L.R. 290, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 475; Ramaswami, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 336, 40 Cr.L.J. 596, 181 I.C. 849, 1938 M.W.N. 36, 47 M.L.W. 272, 11 R.M. 870. A paper which purports to be the substance of a report from a subordinate medical officer with an expression of concurrence by the Civil Surgeon cannot be used as evidence, although the examination of a medical witness written in proper form may be so used—Chintamonee, 11 W.R. 2. A certificate granted by the Professor of a Medical College as regards the bones submitted to him for examination is not admissible in evidence. He must be examined as a witness—Ahilya Manaji, 47 Bom. 74, 24 Bom.L.R. 83, 26 Cr.L.J. 339, A.I.R. 1923 Bom. 183.

It is the bounden duty of the Public Prosecutor to tender in evidence not only the medical evidence and the post mortem report of the Civil Surgeon, but also the reports of the Chemical Examiner and of the Imperial Serologist. A Sessions Judge ought not to allow the Public Prosecutor to refuse to produce them as evidence on behalf of the prosecution and, if he does so, the defence Counsel may request that those reports, which ought to be tendered on behalf of the prosecution, should be treated as evidence on behalf of the defence—Ghirrao, 34 Cr.L.J. 1009 (1012), 145 I.C. 470, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 265, 1933 Cr.C. 592, 10 O.W.N. 1108.

'By a Magistrate':—The deposition may be attested by a Magistrate, i.e., any Magistrate, not necessarily by the committing Magistrate who is holding the preliminary inquiry—Durga, 1893 A.W.N. 180.

'In the presence of the accused':—To render the deposition of a medical officer admissible in evidence, it must be shown to have been taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused—Kachali Hari, 18 Cal. 129; Jhubboo Mahton, 8 Cal. 739. The evidence of a Medical officer given before a committing Magistrate is not admissible in the Sessions Court where the committing Magistrate does not certify that the evidence was given in the presence of the accused—Bajrangi, 4 C.W.N. 49 (56). This section does not enact that the deposition of a medical witness shall be taken and attested by a Magistrate in the presence of the accused. What it provides is that the deposition, if so taken and attested, may be put in evidence in the trial. Therefore, in the absence of proof that the deposition was taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused, it cannot be presumed, that the deposition was so taken and attested—Pohp Singh, 10 All. 174 (178); Kachali Hari, supra; Riding, 9 All. 720. The depositions of the medical witnesses are not inadmissible merely because the Magistrate has failed to append certificates in the prescribed form. This section does not in so many words require any certificates by the Magistrate in any particular form and the requirements of law would be complied with if it appears from the Magistrate's record or is made to appear that the statement was taken and signed in the presence of the accused—Nawab, 34 Cr L.J. 443, 142 I.C. 577, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 131, 1933 Cr.C. 247, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 213. The examination of a medical witness taken in the absence of the accused is inadmissible in evidence. When, however, there is sufficient prima facie evidence to warrant a commitment to the Sessions Court, and the evidence of the medical witness is likely to be only of a formal character, and great inconvenience would result from his being summoned to a Magistrate's Court, the examination need not be taken before a Magistrate, but attendance before the Sessions Court must be secured. Under all other circumstances the Magistrate should invariably record the evidence of the medical witness before himself—Anonymous, Ratanlal 81.

A medical witness, like any other witness in a case, must give his evidence orally in the presence of the accused. Where he is allowed to prove statements made at the trial of other accused persons in the absence of the accused under trial, such mode of giving evidence is illegal—Sardara v. Emp., 27 Cr L.J. 571, 94 I.C. 139, 26 P.L.R. 80.

A Magistrate should take and attest a deposition in the presence of the accused, and should also, by the use of few apt words on the face of the deposition, make it apparent that he has done so—Pohp Singh, supra. In order to secure compliance with the provisions of this section, Magistrates are hereby directed to sign at the foot of the deposition of medical witnesses a certificate in the following form—"The foregoing deposition was taken in the presence of the accused (name) who had an opportunity of cross-examining the witness. The deposition was explained to the accused, and was attested by me in his presence"—Cal. G. R. & C. O., page 14; C. P. Cr. Cir., Part II, No. 55; N. W. P. H. C. Cr. Cir., para 38, p. 17.

Deposition should be carefully recorded:—The statement of a medical witness, if taken and attested by the Magistrate in the presence of the accused, is admissible as evidence in the Sessions Court, although the medical witness is not himself called. It should, therefore, be recorded with the utmost care and accuracy—Bharat, 20 O.C. 61, 18 Cr.L.J. 380 (381), and not in an untidy, slipshod and illegible fashion—Baldeo, 19 O.C. 239, 18 Cr.L.J. 105 (106).

1327. Value of medical evidence:—Mere theories of medical witnesses should not be accepted as against proved facts. It would be improper for a Judge to reject facts which were proved by the evidence of certain witnesses, merely because a medical officer gave his opinion that what the witnesses deposed to could not be true—Ahmed Ali, 11 W.R. 25. Medical experts and others such as Judges who have to form opinions and exercise their judgment should have regard primarily to the facts and not draw upon their imagination; otherwise the administration of justice would depend upon their individual idiosyncrasies and become unstable and unworkable—Yunus Ali, 32 C.W.N. 783 (787). A Judge is not right in discarding the whole of the direct evidence of credible and unimpeachable witnesses who depose on oath that with their own eyes they saw a thing being done, merely upon the strength of the opinion of a medical witness to the effect that such a thing could not have been done—Wazir Ali, 1889 A.W.N. 74.

1328. Sub-section (2)—Summoning of medical witness:—In a case of murder or man-slaughter, where the medical report is inconsistent with the prosecution evidence, it is the duty of the prosecution to call the medical officer himself or to give other medical evidence in the hearing of the jury, and not to stand merely on the deposition given by the medical officer before the committing Magistrate in its recorded form. It is unreasonable to expect the jury to convict if a proper exposition and explanation of the medical evidence is not given viva voce by a doctor who can deal with the matter and satisfy the jury—Debendra Narayan, 56 Cal. 566, 50 C.L.J. 1, 119 I.C. 378, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 244, 33 C.W.N. 632, 30 Cr.L.J. 1031 (1033); Bahadur Singh Arjan Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 410, 174 I.C. 420, 40 P.L.R. 484, 10 R.L. 563, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 176. In any event, Counsel who acts for the accused in the Sessions Court should notice the point and insist upon the medical officer coming to the Sessions Court—Bahadur Singh Arjan Singh v. Emp., supra. No consent or admission by the prisoner's Advocate to dispense with the medical witness could relieve the prosecution of proving by evidence the nature of injuries received by the deceased and that the injuries were the cause of death—Rangappa Goundan, 37 Cr.L.J. 471, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 426, 1936 Cr.C. 509, 161 I.C. 663, 1936 M.W.N. 110, 43 M.L.W. 307, 70 M.L.J. 447, 59 Mad. 349. In a Sessions case, depending almost entirely on the medical evidence, the examination of the Surgeon before the Magistrate should not be tendered or accepted as sufficient. All the evidence before the Magistrate as to the symptoms should be re-taken, and the Surgeon should be examined as an expert in regard to the case of those symptoms—Mantapampalla, 2 Weir 660. The recorded deposition of a medical witness should be carefully scrutinized by the Sessions Judge, and if it appears that the deposition is essentially deficient or requires further explanation or elucidation, the Judge should summon and examine the witness—Bharat, 20 O.C. 61, 18 Cr.L.J. 380 (381). Where the medical evidence given before the committing Magistrate appeared to be inconsistent with the confessions of the accused, e.g., where the method by which the murder was committed as given in the confession of the accused, did not fit in with the medical evidence, the Sessions Judge ought to call the medical officer instead of explaining away with the remark that the injuries might have been caused in some other manner. Such theorising is unsound in principle—Bharat, supra.

No doubt this section permits the deposition of a medical witness taken in the Commitment Court to be given in evidence at the Session trial, but that is subject to the condition that the accused should have been given full opportunity to cross-examine the witness and the Court may, if it thinks fit, summon and examine such a witness as to the subject matter of his deposition. Where, therefore the accused reserved the cross-examination of the medical witness in the Commitment Court which apparently was allowed and the witness was summoned by the Sessions Court to give evidence on behalf of the prosecution, the Sessions Court was apparently in error in refusing to re-summon the witness when he did not attend and in admitting the evidence of the witness given in the Commitment Court—Shivadhin v. King-Emp., A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 116 (118), 3 P.L.T. 32, 60 I.C. 662.

"If Magistrates carefully and fully record the medical evidence, there will be no necessity for summoning the medical witness to attend before the Sessions Court, except for special reasons in particular cases. The accused persons or their pleaders should be asked at the time of commitment whether they wish to have the medical witness summoned before the Sessions Court or whether they consider that the evidence recorded by the Magistrate, which should be carefully attested in their presence, is sufficient. If they desire the personal attendance of the medical witness, this should be regarded as a sufficient reason for summoning him"—Cal. G. R. & C. O., p. 14.

510. Any document purporting to be a report under the hand of any Chemical Examiner or Assistant Chemical Examiner to Government, upon any matter or thing duly submitted to him for examination or analysis and report in the course of any proceeding under this Code, may be used as evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code.

1329. Report:—A Court cannot send an exhibit to a Chemical Examiner and get a report from him merely to satisfy its own mind. The Magistrate must take evidence in a regular manner, i.e., he should have the report formally put in evidence and shall take also the evidence necessary to prove that what was sent to the Chemical Examiner was what had been seized from the possession of the accused. But where there is enough evidence to show what the contents of the exhibits are, the mere fact that the Magistrate did not follow the above procedure would not render the conviction illegal—Tan Kyi, 5 Bur L.J. 100, 27 Cr L.J. 1281.

The report must be the original report of the Chemical Examiner, bearing his signature, and not a copy of the report; and it must be signed by the Chemical Examiner—45 WR 49. Where a matter containing poison was submitted to the Chemical Examiner, his report as to the discovery of poison in the matter, in order to be admissible in evidence, must purport to be signed by the officer or officers who detected the poison in the matter and who from personal knowledge could certify to the correctness of the result embodied in the report. Otherwise the report cannot be accepted as one made under a sense of personal responsibility—Venkataswami Achari, 2 Weir 661 (662). The defect in this case was remedied by the High Court taking the evidence of the Chemical Examiner under sec. 375 (the case having been submitted to the High Court for confirmation of the sentence of death).

Where all that is on the record of a case is a little scrap of paper on which it is written in somebody's handwriting that the Chemical Examiner's report shows that the packets in question contained cocaine, it is not legal evidence and cannot be a substitute for the original certificate or at least for a copy of it certified by the Magistrate as being a true copy. The provisions relating to the production of a report by the Chemical Examiner in place of the Chemical Examiner's own personal appearance in Court are special provisions of the Code and must be strictly adhered to—Peary Lal v. Emp., 39 Cr L.J. 714, 176 I.C. 225, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 496, 40 P.L.R. 783, 11 R.L. 167.

'Any Chemical Examiner':—The word 'any' includes an Additional Chemical Examiner. The word 'any' did not occur in the earlier Code, and it was therefore held in Autal Muchi, 10 Cal 1026 that the report of an Additional Chemical Examiner could not be received in evidence.

A report made by a Government Excise Analyst does not come within the purview of this section—Bansi Lal, 30 Bom.L.R. 646.

The certificate of a Professor of Anatomy is not per se admissible in evidence

Identity of articles examined:—When committing cases, a Magistrate must take care to send up evidence to prove that a body sent to the hospital for post mortem examination is really the body of the person referred to in the case under trial, or that an article analysed by the Chemical Examiner was actually the article sent to him for analysis in the case under trial. A Sessions Judge must insist upon being furnished with such evidence and must not record either the chemical analysis report or the evidence of the medical officer until the connecting links requisite to render them admissible have been established—Nag Pya, 1 Bur.L.R. 634; Autal Muchi, 10 Cal. 1026; Chuk-karpalli Ramayya, 20 M.L.J. 657, 1 Cr.L.J. 222; Muhammad Din, 26 P.L.R. 748, 26 Cr.L.J. 1420. A Sessions Judge is bound to warn the jury that before using the Chemical Examiner's report, they must be satisfied on the evidence that the substances examined were in fact what they were said to be—Ofel Molla, 18 C.W.N. 180, 15 Cr.L.J. 147.

Use of the report as evidence:—The report of a Chemical Examiner may be used as evidence in any inquiry, trial or other proceeding. This, however, does not imply that without tendering it in evidence it can be made use of for the first time in appeal. It is a piece of evidence that does not require any formal proof, but at the same time it must be tendered as evidence and used as such, so that the accused may have a chance of questioning it—Wali Muhammad, 21 A.L.J. 869, 26 Cr.L.J. 200, A.I.R. 1924 All. 193, 83 I.C. 904. See Ghirrao cited in Note 1325.

Contents of the report:—In a case of murder by poison it is not enough for the Chemical Examiner to merely state his opinion that arsenic was detected. He must state the grounds on which he arrives at that opinion. It is extremely desirable that his report should be full and completed and take the place of evidence which he would give if he were called to Court as a witness—Gajrani, 34 Cr.L.J. 754 (759), 144 I.C. 357, A.I.R. 1933 All. 394, 1933 Cr.C. 664, 1933 A.L.J. 1617, Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 414.

Value of the report:—Sec. 510, fortunately for accused persons, says nothing as to the weight to be attached to the Chemical Examiner's report. No person, therefore, ought to be put in peril of capital, or any punishment on a written report not given on oath and untested by cross-examination. To accept such a report whatever it may contain—as proof of death by arsenic poisoning or of anything, appears to be an impossible proposition in law. (Per Young, J.). When a report is received from the Chemical Examiner containing a quantitative analysis, it should be shown to the medical officer who conducted the post-mortem examination so that he will be in a position to state before the committing Magistrate what are the medico-legal inferences to be drawn from the report—Happu, A.I.R. 1933 All. 837, 1933 Cr.C. 1463, 146 I.C. 1089, 35 Cr.L.J. 280, 1934 A.L.J. 106; Ujagar Singh, 40 Cr.L.J. 576, 181 I.C. 861, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 149, 11 R.L. 895, 41 P.L.R. 493, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 206. It is to be expected that whenever a Magistrate or a Court of Session finds that the report of the Chemical Examiner is inadequate, he or it should not admit it in evidence unless the officer concerned submits a full and satisfactory report or has been examined in support of it. The High Court cannot reject it as inadmissible in the face of section 510 where the Sessions Judge admitted it in evidence. No hard and fast rule can be laid down as regards the value to be attached to such reports but a meagre and cryptic report is hardly of any value—Gaya Kunwar, 35 Cr.L.J. 700 (702), 148 I.C. 600, 11 O.W.N. 312, 1934 Cr.C. 231, 1934 O.L.R. 341, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh. 62. It cannot be accepted as a proposition of law that the Chemical Examiner must be called in all cases in which a Chemical Analysis has been made and in which the result of such analysis is a determining factor in the case. Where neither the accused nor his Counsel objected to the admission of the Chemical Examiner's report and they did not request that the Chemical Examiner be sent for and put into the witness-box, the Chemical Examiner's report was admissible in evidence, establishing the contents of the report—Bachcha, A.I.R. 1934 All. 873, 36 Cr.L.J. 362, 153 I.C. 472, 1934 Cr.C. 1082, A.L.R. 1935 All. 19, 57 All. 256. There is no doubt that the provision of law contained in section 510, Cr. P. C., is of an exceptional nature. It was, however, deliberately enacted by the Legislature, and the Courts are bound to give effect to it so long as it remains on the Statute Book whatever may be said of the wisdom of the policy underlying it. It can hardly be open to the Courts to render this enactment nugatory by refusing to attach any weight to the reports in question. If they are not to have any weight, there would be no object in making them admissible in evidence. The intention of the Legislature is that they should have the same value as they would have if they were formally proved by sworn testimony. It is always open to the Courts to call the Chemical Examiner when this course is deemed to be necessary in the interests of justice. He does not, as a rule, give any opinion as to the cause of death, but merely reports the result of the Chemical Examination of the substances sent to him. It is for the Court to determine the cause of death after a consideration of such report together with post mortem appearances as deposed to by the officer who conducts the autopsy and of the other evidence in the case—Aishan Bibi, 36 Cr.L.J. 14 (16), A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 150, 15 Lah. 310, 152 I.C. 206, 1934 Cr.C. 330, 37 P.L.R. 67, A.L.R. 1934 Lah. 573.

The negative effect of the Chemical Examiner's report that no blood was detected by him on leaves, grass and earth taken from the alleged place of occurrence, is not sufficient to rebut the strong direct evidence as to the place of occurrence—Hassenulla, 26 Cr.L.J. 5 (8), 83 I.C. 485, 28 C.W.N. 561, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 625.

The evidence of blood-stained nails is not only of no value but may be extremely dangerous to innocent persons. Giving such evidence as corroborating an approver or as circumstantial evidence connecting an accused person with homicide may lead to the miscarriage of justice—Ujagar Singh v Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 576, 181 I.C. 864, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 149, 11 R.L. 895, 41 P.L.R. 493, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 206.

The Imperial Serologist is a highly responsible officer and a duly qualified scientist who would never venture to give any definite opinion on a question unless he has the fullest scientific data in support of his conclusion. His opinion is entitled to great weight—34 Cr.L.J. 1009 (1100), 145 I.C. 470, 1933 Cr.C. 592, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 265, 10 O.W.N. 1108.

511. In any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this

Code, a previous conviction or acquittal may be proved, in addition to any other mode provided by any law for the time being in force—

- (a) by an extract certified under the hand of the officer having the custody of the records of the Court in which such conviction or acquittal was had, to be a copy of the sentence or order, or,
- (b) in case of a conviction, either by a certificate signed by the officer in charge of the jail in which the punishment or any part thereof was inflicted, or by production of the warrant of commitment under which the punishment was suffered;

together with, in each of such cases, evidence as to the identity of the accused person with the person so convicted or acquitted.

1330. Proof of previous convictions:—Before passing sentence, it is desirable and necessary that if there are previous convictions they should properly be proved—Turimella, 17 Cr.L.J. 179. Magistrates are not absolved from the ordinary rules of evidence in taking proof of previous convictions. Whenever it is required to prove a previous conviction against a man, whether it be for the purpose of enhancement of punishment under s. 75, I. P. C., or in proceedings under Ch. VIII of the Cr. P. C., such previous conviction must be proved strictly and in accordance with law. Unless it is so proved, no Court can properly take such previous conviction into consideration—Sheik Abdul, 43 Cal. 1128, 20 C.W.N. 725, 33 I.C. 825, A.I.R. 1916 Cal. 344, 17 Cr.L.J. 185. Previous conviction should, regard being had to the provisions of this section, be proved by copies of judgments or extracts from judgments or by any other documentary evidence of the fact of such previous convictions; and the examination of the accused in respect of those convictions is, having regard to sec. 342, without legal warrant or jurisdiction—Yasin, 28 Cal. 689, 5 C.W.N. 670; Alloomiya, 28 Bom. 129. Previous conviction should be proved by one of the modes laid down in this section. The Court should not be satisfied only with the admission of the accused—Dayaram, 30 P.L.R. 530, 30 Cr.L.J. 1082; Sardar Ahmad, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 693, 35 P.L.R. 697, 36 Cr.L.J. 778, 155 I.C. 478, 1934 Cr.C. 1008; Said Ali, 35 Cr.L.J. 1387, 151 I.C. 719, 36 P.L.R. 7. Before an accused can be questioned about previous convictions, there must be evidence legally admissible upon the record which shows that he has committed these previous offences about which he is examined by the Court; and legally admissible evidence as to previous convictions must fall either within sec. 511, Cr. P. C., or sec. 54, Evidence Act—Ghous Baksh Muhammad Amin v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 770, 183 I.C. 219, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 203, 12 R.S. 49, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 677.

When the previous conviction has been put to the accused and he denies it, the certified extract from the records of the Court in which he was convicted should be put in evidence; proof should be given that he and the person named therein are one and the same person, and the Court should record a specified finding upon that point—Mundar, 1881 A.W.N. 144; Tuki Mahomed v. Kishto, 15 W.R. 53. But a mere Kaifiat from the record office is not sufficient to prove a previous conviction—Tuki Mahomed v. Kisto, 15 W.R. 53.

Finger-impressions are evidence of identity:—The manner in which a previous conviction may be proved is not limited to the method laid down by this section. Any relevant evidence upon which the Court can properly base a finding that the accused was on a previous occasion convicted of an offence will do as the method indicated by this section. Thus, a previous conviction may be proved by finger-impressions. See Sahadeo, 3 N.L.R. 1, 5 Cr.L.J. 220; Murit Roy, 6 C.P.L.R. 3; Abdul Hamid, 32 Cal 759; Fakir Mahomed, 1 C.W.N. 33. If the identity of the accused is to be proved by a comparison of finger-prints, the one taken in Court being compared with certain finger-prints contained in the record of previous convictions, there ought to be evidence to prove the similarity between the two, and the identification of the last mentioned finger-prints as those of the person who has been previously convicted—Ramdas, 21 C.W.N. 469, 16 Cr.L.J. 462. The papillary ridges on the bulbs of the fingers and thumbs, by means of which finger-impressions are made, while proved to be almost beyond change from birth to death, are never wholly repeated in the case of the fingers of any other person, and they therefore furnish a surer test of identity than any other comparable bodily feature. Where two prints made on different occasions resemble one another in the minutia, and contain no points of disagreement, an irresistible conclusion arises that they were made by the same finger—Sahadeo, 3 N.L.R. 1, 5 Cr.L.J. 220.

Where the only evidence of previous conviction is merely the extracts from the records of the Central Bureau for finger-prints and the evidence of an expert of the Finger-print Bureau and no certificate from the officer in charge of the jail or the warrant of commitment is produced to prove it, the Court cannot take account of previous conviction on such evidence. The evidence of finger-prints is evidence of identity and is not in itself evidence of the previous conviction—Abdullah Karim, 41 Cr.L.J. 143 (144), 185 I.C. 268, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 335, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 83.

512. (1) If it is proved that an accused person has absconded, and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him, the Court competent to try or commit for trial such person for the offence complained of may, in his absence, examine the witnesses (if any) produced on behalf of the prosecution, and record their depositions. Any such deposition may, on the arrest of such person, be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into, or trial for, the offence with which he is charged, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable.

(2) If it appears that an offence punishable with death or transportation has been committed by some person or persons unknown, the High Court may direct that any Magistrate of the first class shall hold an inquiry and examine any witnesses who can give evidence concerning the offence. Any depositions so taken may be given in evidence against any person who is subsequently accused of the offence, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or beyond the limits of British India.

1331. Scope of section:—This section, which empowers a Magistrate to take the deposition of certain witnesses in the absence of the accused, enacts an exception to the principle embodied in section 33, Evidence Act, namely that the evidence of a witness which a party had no right and opportunity to cross-examine is not legally admissible. Before an exception can be availed of, the conditions prescribed by the statute must be strictly complied with. Even under section 33, Evidence Act, strict proof of the conditions required in that section are insisted on, especially in criminal cases—Labhai Kutti, AIR 1939 Mad 190, 1938 M.W.N. 582, 1938 M.Cr.C. 212, 40 Cr.L.J. 437, 180 I.C. 605.

This section has been specially enacted for enabling the Magistrate to record evidence in the absence of an absconding accused; and therefore a Magistrate cannot reject an application of the complainant to summon witnesses or to call on them to produce documents, on the ground that the accused has absconded and no inquiry is being then conducted—Wasudeo, 2 Bom.L.R. 707.

The Magistrate can only record the evidence, but cannot convict or sentence the accused in his absence. The whole trial must take place in the presence of the accused, and his defence must be heard, before he can be convicted and sentenced—Sardar, 1917 P.R. 36.

A pardon can be tendered to an approver under sec. 337 even though the principal accused has absconded; in such a case, the approver's evidence will be recorded under this section—Dagdu, 46 Bom. 120, 22 Cr.L.J. 620, 23 Bom.L.R. 839, 63 I.C. 156.

Nature of proceedings:—Proceedings under cl. (1) of this section are judicial proceedings which are not an inquiry. Hence an order made at the conclusion of such proceedings, for the disposal of property produced before the Court, is made under the provisions of sec. 523, Cr. P. C., and not under sec. 517, Cr. P. C., and therefore no appeal lies against such an order—U Ba Hlaing v. Balabux Sodani, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 42 (44), 14 Rang. 633.

Proof of absconding:—In order to give jurisdiction to the Court to examine witnesses in the absence of the accused, it must be proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the accused has absconded and that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him—Makhni, 1890 A.W.N. 100; Sahub Singh, 1896 A.W.N. 182. So, where evidence was recorded by the Magistrate while there was no proof that the accused had absconded, there was no judicial proceeding, and any witness giving false evidence therein could not be prosecuted for an offence under sec. 193, I P. Code—Makhni, 1890 A.W.N. 100.

According to the Lahore High Court, to satisfy the requirements of this section, all that is necessary is that it should be proved that the accused has absconded, and it is not necessary that a finding should be given by the Court to that effect—Daya Ram, 6 Lah. 489, 27 Cr.L.J. 247, 26 P.L.R. 845. But in an earlier case the Punjab Chief Court held that where the accused had absconded, the Court had to take evidence as to the accused person having absconded, and to record a finding to that effect. In the absence of such proof and finding, the recording of the deposition of witnesses in the absence of the accused was illegal—Wahid, 1883 P.R. 21. The Allahabad High Court also held that a finding that the accused has absconded should be recorded as a condition precedent by the Magistrate who takes the evidence under sec. 512—Sheoraj, 48 All. 375, 27 Cr.L.J. 874, 24 A.L.J. 394, 96 I.C. 122, A.I.R. 1926 All. 340. The Court which records the deposition under section 512 must first of all record an order that in its opinion it has been proved that the accused has absconded—Rustam, 38 All. 29, 13 A.L.J. 1043, 16 Cr.L.J. 801, 31 I.C. 817. It is sufficient if the Magistrate records a finding that the accused has absconded; it is not necessary to record further that there is no immediate prospect of arresting him. And so, where the Magistrate recorded a clear finding that the accused had absconded, the mere fact that he did not recite in his order a finding that there was no immediate prospect of arresting the accused, would not render the evidence taken in the absence of the accused inadmissible against them when arrested—Bhagwati, 41 All. 60, 16 A.L.J. 902, 20 Cr.L.J. 6, 48 I.C. 481. In Ghurbin, 10 Cal. 1097, the Calcutta High Court has laid down that evidence can be recorded against the accused in his absence, only if the fact of his absconding is alleged, tried and established before the deposition is recorded; but nothing is said in this case as to whether the Court should record a finding as to the absconding of the accused, as in fact the evidence in this case was not recorded under section 512.

Procedure:—Where the procedure laid down in this section has not been taken, the depositions of witnesses examined at the trial of an accused cannot subsequently be used at the trial of an absconding accused. It is not the law that for the purpose of being used under this section the depositions of witnesses must be recorded over again in a separate proceeding. It will suffice if at the commencement of the hearing the prosecutor brings to the notice of the Court the fact that such a person is absconding, examines a witness or witnesses to prove that fact and obtains a direction of the Court that the evidence about to be taken is being taken for the purpose of being used, if necessary, against the absconder under this section as well as against the person present and under trial—Baharuddin, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 49 (51), 16 Pat. 116, 1937 P.W.N. 348, 173 I.C. 230, 19 P.L.T. 164, 39 Cr.L.J. 281, 4 B.R. 225.

Value of the deposition given in absence of accused:—The latter part of sub-sec. (1) seems clearly to indicate that the witnesses who were examined during the absence of the absconding accused should be examined in the presence of the accused, when he is found, unless it is impracticable to obtain their attendance. The statements recorded by a Magistrate under sec. 512 in the absence of the accused cannot be treated as evidence in the Sessions Court, if the witness is living and can be procured—Rakhia, 1911 P.L.R. 157, 12 Cr.L.J. 214, 10 I.C. 119. Where it was not impracticable to obtain the attendance of the witnesses when the accused was found, and the accused was committed to the Sessions merely on the strength of the recorded deposition of those witnesses, the commitment was held to be illegal—Bocha Chowkeedar, 22 W.R. 33. But if the accused pleads to the charge, the commitment cannot be quashed—Sagambar, 12 C.L.R. 120. If, however, upon such commitment, the Sessions Judge in the course of the trial is of opinion that the prosecution has not laid a basis for the reception of the deposition taken before the Magistrate in the absence of the accused, he should adjourn the trial and, under sec. 540, summon such witnesses as he may deem material—Sagambar, 12 S.L.R. 120.

When two witnesses who had given evidence at a previous trial against four persons then on trial, happened to have referred in the course of their deposition at that trial to a person S who was then absconding, and that person S is subsequently tried, the statements of those two witnesses cannot be read at the subsequent trial of S merely because they happen to be absent and cannot give evidence. The two witnesses gave their evidence at a trial in which S was not an accused person; they merely mentioned the name of S, but the attention of the Court was not then directed against S, nor was the evidence given in any sense as evidence against S—Sheoraj, 48 All. 375, 27 Cr.L.J. 874, A.I.R. 1926 All. 340, 96 I.C. 122, 24 A.L.J. 394.

Death:—It is incumbent that the death of the witnesses must be proved and there can be no doubt that the burden of proving the factum of death is upon the party who wishes to tender the evidence. The fact of death must be proved like any other fact and a mere report that a certain person is dead is not sufficient—Labbi Kutti, A.I.R. 1939 Mad 190 (191), 1938 M.W.N. 582, 1938 M.Cr.C. 212, 40 Cr.L.J. 437, 180 I.C. 605.

'Incapable of giving evidence':—Where a witness who had been examined under section 512 appeared in Court at the trial but could not remember the details of the occurrence, held that he could not be considered as 'incapable of giving evidence' within the meaning of this section. What the Court should do in such a case is to refresh the memory of the witness by reading out his deposition and then ask them if he remembers the details of the occurrence—Bhika, 25 Cr.L.J. 95, 76 I.C. 31, A.I.R. 1924 Lah 605.

Restoration of property:—Where, as under clause (1) of this section, the proceeding before the Magistrate is neither an inquiry nor a trial, the Magistrate has no authority to arrive at conclusions regarding facts which are in dispute between the contending parties, in order to decide which of these parties is the person entitled to the possession of the property; he must give possession to the person so entitled, having regard to the indisputable or admitted facts, and leave the contending parties to fight out their rights in a Civil Court. In such a case the order is not made under the provisions of section 517, Cr. P. C., but is made under the provisions of section 523, Cr. P. C., and, therefore, no appeal lies from such order—U Ba Hlaing v Balabux Sodani, A.I.R. 1937 Rang 42 (45), 14 Rang 633, 38 Cr.L.J. 358, 9 R.R. 305. See also Vallappa Chetty v. Joseph, 2 Bur.L.J. 85, 25 Cr.L.J. 666, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 248, 81 I.C. 154. But see A K A. R. A. Chettyar v. Ma Saw Hla in Note 1365.

CHAPTER XLII.

PROVISIONS AS TO BONDS.

513. When any person is required by any Court or officer to execute a bond, with or without sureties, such Court or officer may, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour, permit him to deposit a sum of money or Government promissory notes to such amount as the Court or officer may fix, in lieu of executing such bond.

Deposit instead of recognition.

Scope:—The deposit allowed in this section is allowed in substitution only of the bond which the principal himself would otherwise execute, not in substitution of any bond which his surety executes—Laxmanlal v. Mulshankar, 32 Bom. 449 (453). This view has not been accepted by the Oudh Chief Court. It has held that the words used in this section are that the Court may permit the deposit of a sum of money or Government promissory notes in lieu of executing such bond. If the bond is a bond with sureties, this deposit replaces the whole bond and not merely the bond of the principal—Abdus Sattar v. King-Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 831 (834), 176 I.C. 948, 11 R.O. 7, 1938 A.Cr.C. 55, 1938 O.L.R. 355, 1938 O.A. 566, 1938 O.W.N. 676, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 195.

'Except in case of bond for good behaviour':—The object of law in making this exception in good behaviour cases, is to secure the good conduct of the person bound over, not by means of money but by a bond and sureties, and by making the sureties responsible for the good behaviour of the person bound down. See Sheo Buksh, 2 N.W.P. 295.

1332. Deposit of money:—The deposit of money is in lieu of executing a bond. Where a person was ordered to execute a bond for good behaviour, and also to deposit a certain sum in addition thereto, the order as to deposit was illegal, because it was not in lieu of, but in addition to, execution of bond, and also because it was a good behaviour case—Fata, Ratanlal 671.

Where money has been deposited in Court as bail, the Magistrate is bound to return the amount, on the appearance of the accused, to the person who made the deposit. It has no jurisdiction to attach this money in order to realise out of it the fine imposed on the accused—Raghunandan, 11 O.L.J. 296; Girdhari Lal, 19 A.L.J. 887, 22 Cr.L.J. 744.

Under this section it is optional for the Magistrate in cases specified to allow a man who has been called upon to execute a bond with or without surety to deposit the amount in Court—Surja Narain, 36 Cr.L.J. 730 (734), 155 I.C. 430, 16 P.L.T. 223, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 195, 1935 Cr.C. 534. There is nothing against a legal practitioner becoming a surety for accused persons. But where a mukhtear enters into an agreement, with a person whose security the Court refused to accept, to the effect that the amount deposited by that person with the mukhtear would indemnify the latter if he suffered any loss on account of the bail-bond being forfeited, the contract is unquestionably illegal, being against public policy as it hampers the administration of justice—Ibid.

514. (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid.

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate if he be dead.

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it; and it shall authorize the attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

(4) If such penalty is not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, the person so bound shall be liable, by order of the Court which issued the warrant, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a term which may extend to six months.

(5) The Court may, at its discretion, remit any portion of the penalty mentioned and enforce payment in part only.

(6) Where a surety to a bond dies before the bond is forfeited, his estate shall be discharged from all liability in respect of the bond. * * *

Change:—This section has been amended by section 139 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. In sub-section (3) the word 'attachment' has been substituted for the word 'distress' as the former word is more appropriate. In sub-section (6) the words 'but the party who gave the bond may be required to find a new surety' have been omitted, but a separate provision to the same effect is made in the new section 514A. Sub-section (7) has been newly added; the reason is stated in Note 1339 below.

1333. Scope:—This section indicates that the place of appearance must be expressly stated in the bond. It deals with two positions. The first is when a bond is taken by a Court for appearance, not before a Court, but elsewhere. In that case certain Courts alone have jurisdiction to determine whether the bond has been forfeited. The second is where the bond is for appearance before a Court, and in that case only the Court before whom appearance is to be made can determine whether the bond has been forfeited or not. It is clear that this provision cannot be satisfied unless and until the Court before whom appearance is to be made is expressly stated in the bond—Chintaram, 38 Cr L.J. 100, 165 I.C. 825, A I.R. 1936 Nag. 243, 1936 Cr C. 1037, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 137. Where a person is arrested by a police officer or a Magistrate and is released on executing a bond which does not fix any place where or the Court in which the accused person is to appear it is not possible to take any proceeding under section 514, Cr. P. C., for determining whether the bond has been forfeited or not. When the bond has been taken by some Court it is that Court alone or the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or of a Magistrate of the First Class that can initiate a proceeding under section 514, Cr. P. C., for determining whether a bond has been forfeited. When the bond is for appearance before a particular Court it is only again that Court which can start a proceeding under section 514, Cr. P. C., for determining whether the bond has been forfeited. If a bond has been taken by a Magistrate or a

Scope:—The deposit allowed in this section is allowed in substitution only of the bond which the principal himself would otherwise execute, not in substitution of any bond which his surety executes—Laxmanlal v. Mulshankar, 32 Bom. 449 (453). This view has not been accepted by the Oudh Chief Court. It has held that the words used in this section are that the Court may permit the deposit of a sum of money or Government promissory notes in lieu of executing such bond. If the bond is a bond with sureties, this deposit replaces the whole bond and not merely the bond of the principal—Abdus Sattar v. King-Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 831 (834), 176 I.C. 948, 11 R.O. 7, 1938 A.Cr.C. 55, 1938 O.L.R. 355, 1938 O.A. 566, 1938 O.W.N. 676, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 195.

'Except in case of bond for good behaviour':—The object of law in making this exception in good behaviour cases, is to secure the good conduct of the person bound over, not by means of money but by a bond and sureties, and by making the sureties responsible for the good behaviour of the person bound down. See Sheo Buksh, 2 N.W.P. 295.

1332. Deposit of money:—The deposit of money is in lieu of executing a bond. Where a person was ordered to execute a bond for good behaviour, and also to deposit a certain sum in addition thereto, the order as to deposit was illegal, because it was not in lieu of, but in addition to, execution of bond, and also because it was a good behaviour case—Fata, Ratanlal 671.

Where money has been deposited in Court as bail, the Magistrate is bound to return the amount, on the appearance of the accused, to the person who made the deposit. It has no jurisdiction to attach this money in order to realise out of it the fine imposed on the accused—Raghunandan, 11 O.L.J. 296; Girdhari Lal, 19 A.L.J. 887, 22 Cr.L.J. 744.

Under this section it is optional for the Magistrate in cases specified to allow a man who has been called upon to execute a bond with or without surety to deposit the amount in Court—Surja Narain, 36 Cr.L.J. 730 (734), 155 I.C. 430, 16 P.L.T. 223, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 195, 1935 Cr.C. 534. There is nothing against a legal practitioner becoming a surety for accused persons. But where a mukhtear enters into an agreement, with a person whose security the Court refused to accept, to the effect that the amount deposited by that person with the mukhtear would indemnify the latter if he suffered any loss on account of the bail-bond being forfeited, the contract is unquestionably illegal, being against public policy as it hampers the administration of justice—Ibid.

514. (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid.

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate if he be dead.

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it; and it shall

1934 Cr.C. 1144. The surety undertook to produce the accused before a Magistrate until the case against the accused was disposed of. The case was transferred to a different Court in a different district where the surety failed to produce the accused. Then the Magistrate, before whom the bond was executed, called upon the surety to produce the accused in his Court. The surety having failed to do so, the Magistrate forfeited his bail bond. Held that the surety was bound to produce the accused and that his bail bond was rightly forfeited—Amulya, 36 Cr L J 133, 152 I C. 646, 38 C.W.N. 852, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 785, 1934 Cr.C. 1207, distinguishing Hemlal, supra, and Shamsuddin, supra. If a bail-bond binds the surety to produce the accused in the Court of Agra, an order of the Magistrate calling upon the surety to produce the accused in the Court of Purnea is wholly illegal—Parbhu Dayal, 49 All 825, 28 Cr L J. 586 (587). But where a bond required the attendance of the accused in a particular Court and that Court had been abolished, the bond can be enforced by its successor to which all the functions of the defunct Court has been transferred—Mustaqimuddin, 24 A.L.J. 327, 27 Cr.L.J. 377 (378), A.I.R. 1926 All 297. So also where the Court before which the appearance was to be made did not in point of fact sit on the date when the surety was asked to produce certain persons, the security bond could not be forfeited, because when there was no Court the accused were under no obligation to appear, nor were the sureties under any obligation to produce them—Samman Singh, 9 Lah L J. 411, 23 Cr.L.J. 1020.

When the term of the bail bond was to surrender the accused persons to the District Magistrate on the day of decision or within the three days after or on such other date as the District Magistrate might direct, the surety had three alternatives and the bond could not be forfeited unless the District Magistrate had fixed a date for the production of the accused—Bishambar, 32 Cr L J. 121 (122), 128 I C 348, 11 P.L.T. 578, Ind. Rul 1931 Pat 44. There can be no forfeiture of a bail bond except on its own terms. It is no concern of the sureties to find out what exactly it is that the Police Officer has been directed by the District Magistrate in the way of taking bail with sureties. Their liability must be determined by the agreement that is actually taken from them—A. N Bhattacharjee v Emp, 39 Cr L J 523, 174 I C. 984, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 211, 10 R P. 566, 4 B R 503, 17 Pat 436.

Where the sureties were well aware of the terms on which they had undertaken to furnish security for the due appearance of the accused, as the terms were set out in the bond which they signed, and they knew that they were responsible for his appearance not only in the High Court but in such Court as the High Court might direct him to attend, in order to surrender to his bail and they failed to produce the accused before the Court according to the direction of the High Court, the bond was rightly forfeited—Adkoo Umrao, A.I.R. 1938 Nag 420, 40 Cr L J 464, 180 I C 608, 11 R N 1939 Nag. 170, 11 R.N. 387.

In respect of a bond executed in a trial Court the liability of the obligor continues till the final order in appeal. The liability is not discharged simply because the order of the trial Court is in his favour, if the order is reversed in appeal—Maung Po v. Maung Shwe, 30 Cr L.J. 346 (348).

As to the forfeiture of bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour, see Notes 297 and 298 under sec 121.

The offence under sec 323, I. P. C., is a breach of the peace and entitles the Magistrate to forfeit the bonds and the sureties—Abdus Sattar v. King-Emp., 39 Cr L J 831 (832), 176 I C. 948, 11 R O 7, 1938 A Cr.C 55, 1938 O.L.R. 355, 1938 O.A. 566, 1938 O.W.N. 676, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 195.

Proof of execution of the bond:—Where a person denies the execution of a bail-bond it is obviously necessary that there should be some evidence to prove that he did. Where the Magistrate took no evidence at all in such a case, the High Court set aside the order of forfeiture of the bail-bond—Birendra, 36 Cr L.J. 888, 155 I C. 1120, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 336, 1935 Cr.C. 417.

police and no Court is mentioned therein no proceedings can be taken under section 514, Cr. P. C., at all—Brahma Nand v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 All. 682 (684), 1939 A.L.J. 779, 184 I.C. 662, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 696, 1939 A.Cr.C. 164, 41 Cr.L.J. 85.

What amounts to forfeiture:—Bonds for appearance should be strictly construed. If the bond requires the accused to appear on a day fixed, and if he appears on that day, the bond is complied with, and the failure of the accused to appear on any other day to which the case is adjourned, does not entail a forfeiture of the bond. The party alleging that the condition has been broken must prove the breach. The breach cannot be assumed—Vithaldas Moolji, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 290, 34 Bom.L.R. 584, 138 I.C. 512, 33 Cr.L.J. 628, 56 Bom. 220, 1932 Cr.C. 402 (403); Anonymous, 2 Weir 663; Anonymous, 4 M.H.C.R. App. 44; Behari Lal, 36 Cal. 749. When granting adjournment, the Magistrate ought to have taken a fresh bond from the accused requiring him to attend on the date of adjourned hearing. If this is not done, he cannot forfeit the original bond for failure to attend on the adjourned date—Vithaldas Moolji, supra. Where bonds were taken from the accused and his sureties to appear on Sunday when the Court was closed, and when on the next Monday the case was called on and the accused not being present the bonds were forfeited, it was held that as the bond required the attendance of the accused on the day fixed, i.e., on Sunday and not on the next day, the failure of the accused to appear on Monday did not cause a forfeiture of the bond—Asanulla, 2 C.W.N. 519. If, however, the bond required the accused to appear from day to day until the close of the trial, the bond is not illegal—Anonymous, 6 M.H.C.R. App. 38, 2 Weir 662, and the accused will forfeit his bond if he fails to appear on any adjourned hearing. Where a bond required the accused to appear 'on the first hearing or at other times required' and the accused appeared on the first day as mentioned in the bond, and was verbally directed to appear on a subsequent date on which he failed to appear, it was held that the failure to comply with the verbal direction would entail a forfeiture of the bond—Haslavaram Subba Reddi, 2 Weir 658. Where on a person being arrested under sec. 55 of this Code, the usual security bond was taken for his appearance, held that the bond was only with respect to the offence for which the person was arrested under sec. 55, and the failure of the surety to produce the person in connection with any other offence which he might be suspected of having committed subsequently did not entail a forfeiture of the bond—Mana, 25 Cr.L.J. 131, 76 I.C. 227, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 622.

Where the surety undertakes to produce the accused before a Court on certain dates at a camp without giving any undertaking to produce him at the Sadar Court, his failure to produce him at Sadar Court on a different date does not cause forfeiture of the bail bond—Basudeb, 36 Cr.L.J. 76, 152 I.C. 341, 38 C.W.N. 804, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 763, 1934 Cr.C. 1188.

Where the bonds did not specify any particular place where the Court was going to sit, nor does it appear from the order-sheet that the accused had knowledge of the change of venue, the bonds cannot be forfeited—Imarat Mallik, 39 Cr.L.J. 473, 174 I.C. 823, 10 R.C. 728, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 255.

Where a bond requires the accused to appear before a particular Court, the failure of the accused to appear before another Court to which the case has been transferred, does not work a forfeiture of the bond, if no obligation to appear in the latter Court has been specified in the bond—Shamsuddin, 30 Cal. 107, 6 C.W.N. 885; Behari Lal, 36 Cal. 749; Mahobir, 18 A.L.J. 631, 21 Cr.L.J. 632, 57 I.C. 456; Manung Nge, 2 Rang. 581 (585), 26 Cr.L.J. 389, 84 I.C. 933, A.I.R. 1925 Rang. 153; Chintaram, 38 Cr.L.J. 100, 165 I.C. 825, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 243. The obligation under the bond so expressed ceases to exist on the transfer of the case and the bond cannot be said to have been revived on the subsequent re-transfer of the case to the original Court where the bond was executed—Hem Lal, 37 C.W.N. 880, 35 Cr.L.J. 532, 147 I.C. 1041, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 101, 1934 Cr.C. 145. This is also the case where a fresh bail bond was executed for the appearance of the accused in the Court to which the case was transferred—Pandhi Khan, 35 Cr.L.J. 215, 152 I.C. 874, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 152, 1934 Cr.C. 1144. The surety undertook to produce the accused before a Magistrate until the case against the accused was disposed of. The case was transferred to a different Court in a different district where the surety failed to produce the accused. Then the Magistrate, before whom the bond was executed, called upon the surety to produce the accused in his Court. The surety having failed to do so, the Magistrate forfeited his bail bond. Held that the surety was bound to produce the accused and that his bail bond was rightly forfeited—Amulya, 36 Cr.L.J. 133, 152 IC 646, 38 C.W.N. 852, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 785, 1934 Cr.C. 1207, distinguishing Hemlal, supra, and Shamsuddin, supra. If a bail-bond binds the surety to produce the accused in the Court of Agra, an order of the Magistrate calling upon the surety to produce the accused in the Court of Purnea is wholly illegal—Parbhu Dayal, 49 All. 825, 28 Cr.L.J. 586 (587). But where a bond required the attendance of the accused in a particular Court and that Court had been abolished, the bond can be enforced by its successor to which all the functions of the defunct Court has been transferred—Mustaqimuddin, 24 A.L.J. 327, 27 Cr.L.J. 377 (378), A.I.R. 1926 All. 297. So also where the Court before which the appearance was to be made did not in point of fact sit on the date when the surety was asked to produce certain persons, the security bond could not be forfeited, because when there was no Court the accused were under no obligation to appear, nor were the sureties under any obligation to produce them—Samman Singh, 9 Lah.L.J. 411, 28 Cr.L.J. 1020.

When the term of the bail bond was to surrender the accused persons to the District Magistrate on the day of decision or within the three days after or on such other date as the District Magistrate might direct, the surety had three alternatives and the bond could not be forfeited unless the District Magistrate had fixed a date for the production of the accused—Bishambar, 32 Cr.L.J. 121 (122), 128 IC 348, 11 P.L.T. 578, Ind. In respect of a bond executed in a trial Court the liability of the obligor continues till the final order in appeal. The liability is not discharged simply because the order of the trial Court is in his favour, if the order is reversed in appeal—Maung Po v. Maung Shwe, 30 Cr.L.J. 346 (348).

warrant was issued to a woman in the first instance instead of a summons, without recording reasons under sec. 90, the warrant is wholly illegal, and the bond given by the surety for the woman's appearance has no legal force and cannot be forfeited if the woman does not appear—Bela Singh, 1918 P.L.R. 50, 19 Cr.L.J. 443, 44 I.C. 971; Kala Singh, 1907 P.W.R. 22, 6 Cr.L.J. 275. But see Chajju, 2 Lah 204, 22 Cr.L.J. 662, 63 I.C. 454, where it has been laid down that where the principal agreement is void the surety is liable as a principal debtor. Where the warrant for the arrest of a person was endorsed with an order directing his release on personal recognizance, the police-officer executing the warrant had no authority to take security bond from a surety for the attendance of that person, and the bond being illegal, the surety was not liable to pay anything if that person failed to attend—Kala Singh, supra.

See also Karbalai Hussain in Note 240 and Gyani Meher Singh v. Emp, in Note 1316A.

Death of accused:—The death of the accused discharges the sureties from all liabilities. "The object of the surety bonds is to ensure that the accused person shall not evade justice by flying from the country or the jurisdiction of the Court. But if the accused elects to die sooner than face his trial, that can hardly be a sufficient reason for forfeiting the surety bonds, since that was an event, which his sureties could not have in contemplation, and which is not of the kind which would impose upon them any moral obligation or responsibility of the Court"—Rama Bapu, 18 Bom L.R. 683, 17 Cr.L.J. 393 (394); Virjiraghavalu, 37 Mad 156, 26 M.L.J. 63, 1913 M.W.N. 77, 13 Cr.L.J. 684 (in this case the accused committed suicide); Nrisingha, 16 C.W.N. 550, 13 Cr.L.J. 592, 15 I.C. 1008.

Where a person executing bond under sec 117 (3), Cr. P. C., dies, proceedings against him as an accused must necessarily cease and there is no obstacle to an enquiry whether he has broken the conditions of the bond in order to take proceedings against the sureties under this section—Namdeo v. Emp, A I.R. 1938 Nag 275 (276), 40 Cr.L.J. 23, 187 I.C. 207, 1938 N.L.J. 79, 11 R.N. 210.

Arrest of the accused in another case:—Where the surety fails to produce the accused due to an act of law (for instance, where the accused is arrested and detained in custody or in jail on a criminal charge), his bail-bond should not be forfeited—Alauddin, 26 Cr.L.J. 833, 86 I.C. 657, A I.R. 1925 Pat 389, 6 P.L.T. 397, 4 Pat. 259, 3 Pat L.R. 123 (Cr), 1925 Pat H.C.C. 46. The most important point is not mere arrest but confinement under arrest on the date when production is to be made, which makes such production impossible. If, however, on being arrested in a different case the accused escapes from custody, the surety is not released from his liability by the mere fact that the accused was under arrest for one day or less between the date of the bond and the date when the accused must have been produced in Court—Madan Mohan, 32 Cr.L.J. 467, 130 I.C. 161, A I.R. 1931 Pat. 19, Ind Rul. 1931 Pat. 145, 1931 Cr.C. 55, 12 P.L.T. 814.

1334. What Court can proceed under this section:—So far as bonds generally are concerned, action may be taken under this section by the Court by which the bond was taken or by the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class. But in the case of a bond for appearance before a Court, the tribunal indicated is the Court and there is no other tribunal. Where the bond is for appearance before a Sessions Court, a Deputy Magistrate cannot take action for the forfeiture of the bond. The Sessions Judge cannot delegate that function to the Deputy Magistrate under sec. 516 which deals with the levy of the amount only—Hiralal Sahu, 14 C.W.N. 259, 10 Cr.L.J. 248 (250). Where a bail-bond was executed for due appearance of the accused before a certain Court, and no provision was made therein for his appearance before any other Court to which the case might thereafter be transferred, held that after such transfer, the former Court had no jurisdiction to forfeit the bond on ground of non-appearance of the accused either before the Court to which the was transferred or before itself—Mayang Nge, 2 Rang. 581 (586), 26 Cr.L.J.

personal recognizance to appear was taken from the accused by the Magistrate of Karjat. The accused having failed to appear on the day fixed, the Magistrate at Karjat issued a notice to the accused under this section. In the meanwhile, the accused was transferred to the Court of the Magistrate at Khalapat, who forfeited the bond and directed the accused to pay the penalty. It was held that the Magistrate at Khalapat had no jurisdiction to make the order under this section, as he was not the Magistrate who had taken the bond or before whom the accused had to appear on the date of default—Mir Husen, 16 Bom.L.R. 84, 15 Cr.L.J. 295. It is only the Court which has taken the bond that can enforce it—Kanshi Ram, 34 Cr.L.J. 952, 145 I.C. 270, A.I.R. 1933 Lah 678. The Presidency Magistrate of Bombay has no jurisdiction under this section to order the forfeiture of a bond for appearance before the Police taken by the Police under sec. 106 of the City of Bombay Police Act (Bom. Act IV of 1902)—Crawford, 42 Bom. 400, 19 Cr.L.J. 607, 20 Bom.L.R. 379.

See also Mustaqimuddin in Note 1333.

1335. Notice to show cause:—This section requires the Court to record grounds of the proof that the bond has been forfeited and a bond for the appearance is forfeited when the accused does not appear, but it does not require the Court to issue notice to show cause why the bond should not be forfeited—Fatehchand Wadhmal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 136, 41 Cr.L.J. 802, 189 I.C. 800, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 479.

If an order of forfeiture is passed without any notice to the person whose bond is forfeited, it amounts to a failure of justice, and the defect cannot be cured by sec. 537—Sarju v. Jai Raj, 25 Cr.L.J. 445, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 51. Before a warrant can be issued for the attachment of his property, the surety should be called upon to show cause why he should not pay the penalty mentioned in the bond; and it should be clear on the face of the record that he was so called upon. A mere verbal and unrecorded order to show cause is not sufficient—Khoode v. Doorgadass, 15 W.R. 82. A summary order for recovering the amount due on the security bond from a surety without serving upon him any notice to pay the same or to show cause why it should not be paid, is invalid—Jeebun Sheikh, 9 W.R. 4. Where a Magistrate, in a proceeding to forfeit the surety bond for good behaviour issued notice to the surety and upon his non-appearance did not proceed to hold any inquiry as to whether the principal offender had committed any offence, but relying on the evidence he had recorded before giving notice, passed an order forfeiting the surety bond, held that the procedure was illegal in as much as the only evidence recorded was not recorded upon notice to the surety, and that the order must be set aside—Moslem Mandal, 54 Cal. 134, 44 C.L.J. 170, 27 Cr.L.J. 1293.

Where the Magistrate held the sureties to their bonds without calling upon them to show cause why the penalty should not be paid, the Magistrate undoubtedly failed to follow the appropriate procedure under this section. But where there is no real dispute about the facts, this is sufficient in the circumstances of the case to prevent interference in revision—Ram Bilas v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 375 (376), 185 I.C. 598, 1940 P.W.N. 151, 21 P.L.T. 194, 41 Cr.L.J. 214.

Procedure, if party appears to show cause:—If the party appears to show cause, he should be allowed an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses upon whose evidence the rule to show cause was issued—Nobin Chunder, 4 Cal. 865, 4 C.L.R. 243 (F.B.); Har Chandra, 25 Cal. 440. If the accused appears and shows cause, and the Magistrate still considers that the recognizance should be forfeited, it is his duty to record the evidence upon which it is proved that the accused has acted in such a way that it becomes necessary to forfeit the recognizance. There must be a regular judicial trial and legal inquiry before punishment can be inflicted—Kalikant Roy, 12 W.R. 54. Before it can be declared that a bond executed by a surety is forfeited, there must be a formal finding arrived at after taking evidence in the presence of such surety, which evidence must prove that the principal person has so acted as to necessitate or render it advisable that the surety should, by reason of the act of the principal, forfeit his bond—Har Chandra, 25 Cal. 440.

Discussing the rulings mentioned above it has been held that in case of bond under sec. 106, Cr. P. C., it is obviously necessary for the Magistrate to record evidence to prove the commission of a fresh breach of the peace and the forfeiture of the bond. Such evidence need not, according to the terms of this section, be taken in the presence of the respondent, but clearly, as was said in Nobin Chunder, supra, when the respondent appears and shows cause he must be given an opportunity of cross-examining the witnesses upon whose evidence the Magistrate had directed him to show cause why the bond should not be forfeited. The section does not require that before a final order is made the witnesses on whose evidence the forfeiture is held to be established, if they have been previously examined in the absence of the accused, must again be examined in his presence. Where a bond has been executed for appearance merely, it is often unnecessary for the Magistrate to record any evidence at all. The Magistrate knows by his own observation that the accused failed to appear in his Court. The burden of proving the negative, that is to say, that the accused absented themselves without reasonable cause for their non-appearance, is not upon the prosecution and it is for the surety to give an explanation why the accused person was unable to attend Court. The accused persons should be given an opportunity of proving their allegation, if they so desire. Where the Magistrate does not give the respondents a proper opportunity of showing cause, the order directing the forfeiture of the bonds will be set aside—Kumarappan v. The King, A.I.R. 1939 Rang 427, 185 I.C. 614, 41 Cr.L.J. 216.

See also Note 1333 under the heading "Proof of forfeiture of the bond."

1336. Order when to be passed:—If the accused's bond is forfeited, the Court may at once proceed to pass an order of forfeiture. If the accused fails to appear on the day fixed, the order of forfeiture of the bond of appearance is not illegal if it is passed on the very next day—Nihal Chand, 2 Bom.L.R. 589. Indeed, a Magistrate ought to take action immediately, otherwise it will be deemed that the Magistrate has decided not to take action under this section. Thus, where a person who is already bound over under Chap. VIII is charged with an offence before a Magistrate, and the Magistrate at the time of passing his sentence in the second offence knows that there is an outstanding recognizance, he should decide once for all whether he will proceed on it or not. If he does not make any order for the forfeiture of the recognizance, or makes no reference to the recognizance, it must be taken that he has decided not to forfeit the recognizance, and he cannot afterwards, in a subsequent and separate proceeding, reconsider his decision and direct forfeiture of the recognizance—Munshi, 25 Cr.L.J. 4, A.I.R. 1924 Lah 680, 75 I.C. 692; Mawaz, 1913 PR 13, 14 Cr.L.J. 67, 18 I.C. 403, 39 P.L.R. 1913 (F.B.); Gul Khan, 1904 PR 26, 1 Cr.L.J. 1100; Ramchundra, 1 CLR. 134; Parbatti Churn, 3 CLR 406; Ali Mardan v. Bakar Khan, 13 PR. 1913, 17 I.C. 680, 7 P.W.R. 1913, 27 P.L.R. 1913 (F.B.); Bali Ram v. Ishar Chand, 25 P.L.R. 1904, 65 P.L.R. 1904. But where, although the convicting Court and the confiscating Court were the same, there was nothing to show that at the time of conviction the Magistrate retained any knowledge of the fact that the accused was upon security and the case concerned the surety and not the convicted person, the order of confiscation was not illegal although it was not passed in the same judgment in which the man who had been bound down, was convicted—Muam Shah, 37 Cr.L.J. 849, 163 I.C. 443, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 141. But it is sufficient if the Magistrate passes an order of forfeiture in substantially the same proceeding in which he convicts the accused, though he does not pass such order immediately on conviction. Thus, where the Magistrate did not pass an order of forfeiture of security at the time of conviction of the principals, but while convicting them he plainly wrote in his judgment that "in as much as the sureties would forfeit Rs. 4,000 presently, I refrain from passing a heavy sentence on the accused," and then the Magistrate issued process to the sureties and confiscated the security in full; it was held that the Magistrate having plainly showed in his judgment his intention to confiscate, the order of forfeiture of security though passed subsequently after conviction was legal—Hussain Khan, 1917 P.R. 15, 18 Cr.L.J. 566, 39 I.C. 806. But the Allahabad High Court holds that the mere fact that no immediate action is taken against a person under this section is no bar to his taking such action at a subsequent time; there is nothing in the language of this section which lays down any such limitation; the Magistrate can wait till the time of appealing has expired or till the appeal has been dismissed, and then he can proceed under this section—Raja Ram, 26 All 202, 1903 A.W.N. 237. This case has been followed by the Sind Court in Jeomal, 27 Cr.L.J. 326 (327), 92 I.C. 742, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 180, 20 S.L.R. 95. Even the Judges who decided the case of 1913 P.R. 13 (cited above) have also admitted that there is nothing in sec. 514 to debar a Magistrate who has convicted a person of an offence, which involves the forfeiture of the bond, from subsequently taking action against that person by forfeiting the bond in question.

Discussing the rulings mentioned above the Full Bench of the Lahore High Court has held that there is nothing in this section or any other part of the Code, which restricts expressly or by necessary implication the power of the Court to take action for realization of the penalty under the bond after the order convicting the accused had been passed. The mere fact that no immediate action under this section has been taken against the person under recognizance to keep the peace, or against the surety, on the conviction of the former to keep the peace, is no bar to such proceedings being taken, at a subsequent time, and the wide proposition to the contrary laid down in Mawaz, supra, cannot be supported. It is, of course, a matter for decision in each case, depending upon its own facts and circumstances, whether, when proceedings under this section has been taken subsequently, the penalty should or should not be exacted in whole or in part—Rasul Khan v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 505 (508), 180 I.C. 849, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 283, 11 R.L. 725, 41 P.L.R. 69, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 70 (F.B.).

If a person is bound down to keep the peace, say for one year, and the bond is forfeited, proceedings for forfeiture of the bond must be initiated within the term of the bond, i.e., within one year from the date of the bond; and if the proceedings are started within that period, the termination of the period of the bond before the proceedings are finished will not invalidate the subsequent order of forfeiture—Uma Dutt, 20 A.L.J. 692, 44 All. 657, 23 Cr.L.J. 623.

Moveable property:—During the surety's lifetime, only moveable property can be attached and sold for recovery of the penalty—Nanhe, 16 A.L.J. 503, 19 Cr.L.J. 711 (see this case cited in Note 293 under sec. 118). But a surety can offer house property as security under sec. 118, though his moveable property alone can be attached and sold—Ibid.

'His estate if he be dead':—These words were introduced into the Code of 1898 to meet Gulab Shah, 1894 P.R. 22, where it was held that the legal representative of a deceased surety could not be proceeded against under the provisions of this section.

1337. Liability of sureties:—See A. N. Bhattacharjee v. Emp., in Note 1333. It is the duty of the surety to see that the accused does not run away, but where a surety has failed to produce the accused by reason of an illegal order passed by a Magistrate which the surety was not bound to carry out, and where there is no connivance and no negligence, it cannot be said that the surety has acted irresponsibly so as to be penalised—Parbhu Dayal, 49 All. 825, 28 Cr.L.J. 586 (587), 25 A.L.J. 537. A surety executed a bond whereby he undertook to produce the accused before the Magistrate of Agra during an inquiry into an offence. The Magistrate ordered the surety later on to produce the accused at Purnea. The surety sent the accused to Purnea, but the latter absconded on his way to Purnea. Nine months later the surety was ordered to produce the accused before the Magistrate at Agra in connection with a case at Purnea, and on his failing to do so his security was forfeited. Held that as the bond directed the surety to produce the accused at Agra, the first order directing the surety to produce the accused at Purnea was illegal. The second order was legal, but as the accused had absconded during an honest attempt of the surety to carry out the illegal order of the Magistrate (by sending the accused over to Purnea), the surety should not be penalised to the full extent, and the High Court directed that the order forfeiting the sum of Rs. 1,000 be reduced to a sum of Rs. 250—Parbhu Dayal, supra. In the absence of anything to show that the surety was really responsible for the disappearance of the person for whose attendance he stood surety, and without inquiry into the circumstances under which he came to stand surety, the forfeiture of the whole amount of the bond is improper—Kala Singh, 22 P.W.R. 1907, 6 Cr.L.J. 275 (276).

Where the accused and the complainant came to an arrangement that they would not appear in Court on the next day of hearing and the surety having knowledge of the arrangement concluded that the case would not proceed, and took no steps to procure the attendance of the accused, held that the surety was not altogether relieved of his liability, but in such a case he should not be ordered to pay the full amount—Ali Muhammad, 27 P.L.R. 646, 27 Cr.L.J. 1152 87 I.C. 672. (In this case the High Court ordered that only Rs. 25 was to be recovered, where the full amount of the bond was Rs. 500.)

The liability of the sureties is not confined to the bail bonds alone. If a contract is required to be in writing, it is not the law that it must be contained in one piece of writing alone and the full terms of contracts in writing have often to be gathered from a series of letters passing between the parties put together. Where the sureties sign the order-sheet of the Magistrate against the part which contains the undertaking on which he accepted the bail bonds, the order-sheet with the sureties' signatures itself becomes a part of the contract between the parties—Ram Bilas v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 375 (376), 185 I.C. 598, 1940 P.W.N. 151, 21 P.L.T. 194, 41 Cr.L.J. 214.

Only one bond should be taken from the accused and his sureties for one determinate amount, the sureties engaging to be bound jointly and severally for the same amount as the accused, so that it may be realizable from any one of the obligors, and there is no warrant in law for taking separate bonds from the accused and his sureties individually and severally exceeding in the aggregate the amount for which the accused is liable—Jawaya, 1890 P.R. 30 (Cr.) The bond executed by the principal and the bond executed by the surety are to be considered as one bond for one amount, and is discharged on forfeiture by the payment of the amount due by either the principal or the surety—Kaku, 1894 P.R. 26. In no case can an amount in excess of the amount secured by the bond be demanded or recovered from the person bound for his sureties, individually or collectively—Ali Mahomed, 1911 P.L.R. 226, 12 Cr.L.J. 404, 11 I.C. 588; Kaung Nga, 2 L.B.R. 235. Where the principal accused was bound over (under sec. 107) in the sum of Rs. 500, and his surety in the same amount, and on forfeiture of the bond the Magistrate ordered that the principal should forfeit the whole amount of his bond, viz., Rs. 500, and the surety should forfeit Rs. 250, held that the order was illegal; the Magistrate could not demand a sum in excess of Rs. 500, whether from the principal or from the surety or from both. The High Court modified the order of the Magistrate by directing the principal to pay Rs. 250 and the surety to pay Rs. 250—Harnam, 5 Lah. 448 (449), A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 228, 84 I.C. 546, 26 Cr.L.J. 322. See also Guran Ditta, 31 P.R. 1890 (Cr.). When the amount of the bond has been recovered from the principal, the sureties are not liable to any further amount. The liability of the surety is only a joint and several liability with the principal and there is no warrant to collect the amount twice over—Nga Kaung, 2 Cr.L.J. 463, U.B.R. (1905) 31; Kaku, 1894 P.R. 26; Nanak Chand v. Anant Ram, 26 P.R. 1894; Abdul Aziz, 4 Lah. 462, 25 Cr.L.J. 1131, 81 I.C. 955, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 262. But the Calcutta High Court holds that on the breach of the bond both the surety and the principal are liable to pay the penalty of their respective bonds; and the surety is liable quite irrespective of the question whether the amount of the bond of the principal has been realised or not. The liability of the surety is not co-extensive with that of the principal as in the ordinary case of a surety for a debtor for the payment of his debt, where the surety is discharged as soon as the principal debtor pays the money due from him. Here the surety is an additional safeguard against a breach of the peace. Therefore, where the principal accused was bound down in the sum of Rs. 100, to keep the peace under sec. 107, and the surety bound himself in the sum of Rs. 50 and upon the bond of the accused being declared forfeited, both he and his surety were ordered to pay the amounts of their respective bonds (viz. Rs. 100 and 50), held that the order was not illegal—Saligram, 36 Cal. 562, 9 C.L.J. 296, 13 C.W.N. 555, 2 I.C. 592, 10 Cr.L.J. 89. The Allahabad, Madras, Sind and Peshwar rulings are to the same effect—Q-E. v. Rahimbux, 20 All. 206, 1898 A.W.N. 21; Rajaram, 26 All. 202, 1903 A.W.N. 237; Kulur Alapa Naih, 10 Cr.L.J. 294, 8 I.C. 470; Kuldip Sahai, 9 Cr.L.J. 296; Abdul Karim, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 320, 147 I.C. 127, 1933 Cr.C. 1074, 35 Cr.L.J. 315; Miram Shah, 37 Cr.L.J. 849, 163 I.C. 443, A.I.R. 1936 Pesh. 141. The correct form of the bond to keep the peace is given in Sch V and the correct form of the bond by sureties is also given in the same schedule. These show that the surety does not take responsibility for the payment of the amount forfeited by the principal in the event of the principal failing to pay it, but enters into a direct bond taking responsibility that the principal shall not commit a breach of the peace—Miram Shah, supra.

In Sardar Khan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 133, 17 Lah. 523, 38 P.L.R. 951, 167 I.C. 746, 38 Cr.L.J. 420, the Lahore High Court has observed that the considered decision of the Calcutta High Court in Saligram, supra, is to be preferred to the Lahore decisions, given above, as the view expressed in those decisions is, on first principles and also on a consideration of the words of the statute, untenable. It has been held therein that the order requiring a surety, who executed a bond in accordance with the provisions of sec.106, Cr. P. C., to pay the full amount specified in the bond in addition to any amount which may be recovered from the principal is in accordance with law. In a recent case Skemp, J., of the same High Court, has, however, followed Abdul Aziz, supra, and has observed: "In the first place it is the principal bond which was to be forfeited; only if that cannot be realized, is the surety liable to pay. The same principle would apply to a fractional sum out of the bond"—Chanda Singh v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 359, 186 I.C. 642, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 32.

The Oudh Chief Court has, however, not accepted the view of the Calcutta High Court. It has held that where persons execute bonds for keeping peace together with sureties, upon the failure to keep peace the principals can be called upon to pay the amount under the bond and any one of the sureties can also be called upon to pay the same amount but if any one is called upon to pay the whole amount under the bond any other on that bond, be he principal or surety, cannot be ordered to pay anything more—Abdus Sattar v. King-Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 831 (834), 176 I.C. 948, 11 R.O. 7, 1938 A Cr.C. 55, 1938 O.L.R. 355, 1938 O.A. 566, 1938 O.W.N. 676, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 195.

As regards the liability of sureties per se, if three sureties sign a bond, they are jointly and severally liable to pay the amount of the bond, but every one of them cannot be called on to pay the whole amount; the sum named can be recovered only once—Mahomed Ibrahim, 8 S.L.R. 173, 16 Cr.L.J. 100, A.I.R. 1914 Sind 13. Where a bond for Rs. 2,000 under sec. 117 (3), Cr. P. C., is executed and there are two sureties for a like amount, the two sureties are jointly and severally liable and, therefore, more than a total sum of Rs. 2,000 cannot be recovered from them—Namdeo v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 23 (25), 178 I.C. 207, 1938 N.L.J. 79, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 275, 11 R.N. 210.

Right of sureties:—Since sureties on a bond are required in order that the failure of the principal to appear may be at their peril, it follows that the object of this provision is defeated if the principal and surety are allowed to relieve the latter of the peril and confine it to the former by any arrangement among themselves. Therefore, an agreement by an accused with his surety that the accused will indemnify the surety if the bail is forfeited on account of his non-appearance, is void—Jodhraj v. Bishanlal, 20 N.L.R. 166.

It is essential that when a man stands surety for the appearance of another that he should take every precaution to insure the carrying out of his undertaking. If the surety in such circumstances is allowed to recover any sum forfeited under the bond either from the actual person for whom he stood surety or from any person who induced him to so stand, it would only tend to render the surety callous and the whole object of demanding the bond would be defeated—Bhana Mal v.

Bhartu Mal, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 23, 135 I.C. 224, 32 P.L.R. 739. The principle of law was laid down in a case where a surety executed a bond by which he undertook to produce a judgment-debtor in a Civil Court when necessary and the bond was forfeited on his failure to do so.

1338. Sub-section (5)—Remission of penalty:—It is not really fine, but penalty incurred by way of forfeiture under this section—Imarat Mallik, 39 Cr.L.J. 473, 174 I.C. 823, 10 R.C. 728, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 255.

This sub-section gives the Court power to remit the penalty or to reduce its amount. Under the Codes of 1872 and 1861, neither the Magistrate nor even the High Court in revision had power to reduce the amount of the penalty under a recognizance bond which had been forfeited. See Naki Haji, 8 C.L.R. 72; Nurul Huqq, 3 Cal. 757; Nilmadhub Ghoshal, 19 W.R. 1. If the Magistrate thought that the amount of recognizance was excessive, he was to refer the matter to Government—Ibid.

The Court remitted portions of penalty where the accused had been subsequently arrested and the amount forfeited was excessive and the surety was unable to pay—Jora Singh, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 42, 145 I.C. 967, 1933 Cr.C. 121, 34 Cr.L.J. 1158, 34 P.L.R. 895; Girindra, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 246, 37 Cr.L.J. 77, 159 I.C. 385, 1935 Cr.C. 319, where the surety did not act irresponsibly and there had been no connivance or negligence on the part of the surety; Probhudayal, A.I.R. 1927 All. 831, 102 I.C. 554, 28 Cr.L.J. 586, 49 All. 825.

1339. Sub-section (7)—Admissibility of judgment of conviction:—This sub-section has been newly enacted. Under the old law there was a conflict of opinion among the High Courts. The Allahabad and Punjab Courts laid down that where a person who had given a security bond with a surety for good behaviour, was convicted of an offence, the production of the judgment of conviction and the proof, if necessary, of the identity of the principal was sufficient evidence upon which a Magistrate was competent to issue notice to the surety. It was not incumbent on the Magistrate to prove that the principal was properly convicted, by re-summoning the witnesses on whose evidence the principal was convicted—Man Mohan, 21 All. 86; Wadhawa, 1903 P.R. 32, 15 P.L.R. 1904; Ali Mahomed, 12 Cr.L.J. 404, 11 I.C. 588, 1911 P.L.R. 226. But in Har Chandra, 25 Cal. 440 it was held that the mere production of the original record or of a certified copy of the original record of the trial in which the principal was convicted would not be conclusive evidence to show that the accused had really committed an offence; such fact must be proved by evidence taken in the presence of the surety, unless it was admitted by him. The present sub-section adopts the view of the Allahabad and Punjab decisions. "There has been a conflict of opinions whether a judgment convicting the principal in a bond taken under the Code and ordering the forfeiture of the bond is sufficient prima facie proof in proceedings under this section against the sureties. The amendment permits the use of such a judgment as evidence in such proceedings and directs that the Court shall presume that such offence was committed unless the contrary is proved"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

The judgment of conviction is undoubted evidence against the principal himself. Thus, where the bond is given by the person bound to keep the peace, the judgment convicting him of breach of the peace is admissible in evidence against him, and may form a sufficient basis for an order under this section, he having had an opportunity of cross-examining the witness on whose evidence the forfeiture is held to be established—Har Chandra, 25 Cal. 440; Nobin Chunder, 4 Cal. 865.

Revision:—The High Court can revise all orders made under this section. See notes under section 515.

514A. When any surety to a bond under this Code becomes insolvent or dies, or when any bond is forfeited under the provisions of section 514, the Court, by whose order such bond was taken, or a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, may order the person from whom such security was demanded to furnish fresh security in accordance with the directions of the original order, and if such security is not furnished, such Court or Magistrate may proceed as if there had been a default in complying with such original order.

This section has been added by sec. 140 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923, to make up the deletion of certain words in sub-section (6) of section 514. It also covers the case of a surety who becomes insolvent.

514B. When the person required by any Court or officer to execute a bond is a minor, such Court or officer may accept, in lieu thereof, a bond executed by a surety or sureties only.

"We have added a new section 514B to provide for the case of a bond being required from a minor"—Report of the Select Committee (1916).

Under the old law, where a person released on probation under section 562 and ordered to execute a bond for good conduct was a minor, the bond could not be executed by his sureties; see Mi Pyu, 4 L.B.R. 12, 6 Cr.L.J. 123. This is no longer law.

515. All orders passed under section 514 by any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, shall be appealable to the District Magistrate, or, if not so appealable, may be revised by him.

1341. Appeal and revision:—Under the old Codes of 1861 and 1872 there was no provision for appeal or revision of orders forfeiting a security bond under sec. 514; see Ananthachari v Ananthachari, 2 Mad. 169. This section makes provision for such appeal or revision.

Under this section, all orders passed by the subordinate Magistrates shall be appealable to the District Magistrate, but not to any other first Class Magistrate—Shambhaji, Ratanlal 384. A Sub-divisional Magistrate authorized to hear appeals under sec. 407 (2), Cr. P. C., has no power to hear appeals under this section from an order under sec. 514, Cr. P. Code—Muhammad Shah, 36 Cr.L.J. 557, 154 I.C. 522, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 294, 1934 Cr.C. 525.

Where an appeal from an order under sec. 514 is not admitted by the District Magistrate as being time-barred, it is within the competence of the District Magistrate to revise the order under this section without making a reference to the High Court for revision—Pandhi Khan, 36 Cr.L.J. 215, 152 I.C. 874, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 152, 1934 Cr.C. 1144.

A bond for keeping the peace or for good behaviour is not given to any particular person but to the Court, and no private party is entitled to appeal against an order of a Magistrate refusing to forfeit the bond, but it is open to the District Magistrate to take action in revision—Sarju v. Jai Raj Kumar, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 51, 25 Cr.L.J. 445, 77 I.C. 733 Orders passed by a District Magistrate under this section may be subject to revision by the High Court—Masta, 1905 P.R. 15, 2 Cr.L.J. 131.

516. The High Court or Court of Session may direct any Magistrate to levy the amount due on a bond to appear and attend at such High Court or Court of Session.

Power to direct levy of amount due on certain recognizances.

This section empowers the Court of Session to delegate his power of levying fine to a Magistrate; but he cannot delegate his power of initiating proceedings for forfeiture of the bond—Hira Lal Sahu, 14 C.W.N. 259, 3 I.C. 113, 10 Cr.L.J. 248 (250) (cited in Note 1334 under section 514).

CHAPTER XI.III.

OF THE DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.

"Property used for the commission of an offence":—See Note 1343 under sec. 517. Where a motor-driver is prosecuted for an offence under sec. 338, I P. C., it cannot be said that the motor car has been used by the accused for the commission of an offence; consequently, it is illegal for the Magistrate to detain the car pending the conclusion of the trial—Phula Singh, 1931 Cr.C. 853, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 565. Cf. Ilahi Baksh, 4 P.L.R. 1904, 1 Cr.L.J. 38.

Where the accused was charged with cheating or, alternatively, criminal breach of trust and it appeared that the accused had an account with a bank and the police served a "stop order" on the bank to prevent the accused from operating on his account, held that no such order can be made on the bank, nor is there any section 1342. Scope of section:—Under the Code of 1882, the operation of this section was much restricted, and the Court could make an order under this section only with reference to property in respect of which any offence had been committed or which had been used for the commission of any offence: otherwise not—Fattah Chand, 24 Cal. 499; Basudeb v. Nazruddin, 14 Cal. 834; Anna Purna Bai, 1 Bom. 630; Anant Ramchandra, 10 Bom. 197; Ratanlal Ranglidas, 17 Bom. 748; Devidin, 22 Bom. 844; and the order could be made only when the offence was actually under investigation or trial by the Court—Amra Nathu, Ratanlal 500; Abdul Khalik, 46 P.R. 1888.

Under the 1898 Code, the scope of the section has been enlarged and an order can be made with regard to any property produced before the Court, or in its custody, even though it has not been used for the commission of any offence or though no offence in regard to it has been committed—Rassul v. Ahmed, 34 Cal. 347; Pyde Ramanna, 42 Mad. 9; Maung Ma v. Ma Kra, 6 Rang. 259, 29 Cr.L.J. 958; or though the offence actually under investigation is not in connection with the property or is not proved—Parasanada, 2 Weir 666. See also Gulabchand Umayi, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 33 (35).

In a Madras and a Calcutta case, it was held that this section applied only when it appeared that an offence had been committed with respect to a property; and therefore where a person was bound down for good behaviour under sec. 109 or 110, but it did not appear that any offence had been committed with respect to the property in dispute which the accused claimed as his own, held that no order could be passed under this section as to the property—Govindaranja Padayachi, 16 Cr.L.J. 811, 31 I.C. 827, A.I.R. 1916 Mad. 839; Surendra v. Rai Mohan, 30 Cal. 690, 7 C.W.N. 634. These decisions are incorrect as the Judges failed to notice the amendment made in the 1898 Code of the addition of the word "produced before it or in its custody". Section 517 gives jurisdiction to a Criminal Court to pass an order of confiscation of property produced before it in proceedings under section 109 or 110, though there is no proof that an offence has been committed in respect of such property or that such property has been used for the commission of any offence—Pyde Ramanna, 42 Mad. 9 (12), 49 I.C. 167, 8 M.L.W. 350, 24 M.L.T. 256, 20 Cr.L.J. 135; Bem Madho, 38 Cr.L.J. 175, 166 I.C. 271, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 143, 1936 Cr.C. 694, I.L.R. 1936 Nag. 150.

See U Ba Hlaing v. Balabux Sodani, cited in Note 1331 under the heading "Nature of proceedings."

1343. Property—Property produced in Court:—When a portion of a property (e.g., a portion of salt or other articles in bulk) is produced in Court and received in evidence as a sample, the whole bulk is taken to have been produced before the Court, and the Magistrate can make an order with respect to the entire bulk—Anonymous, 2 Weir 670.

Where the accused was convicted of criminal breach of trust in respect of two G. P. Notes, the Court cannot direct the restoration to the complainant of the renewed notes subsequently issued in lieu of the old at the instance of a third party who was no party to the criminal case; because the renewed notes cannot be said to be property produced before the Court or in its custody or regarding which an offence has been committed—Zainul Abidin, 9 O.W.N. 434, 1932 Cr.C. 521, 33 Cr.L.J. 569, 138 I.C. 156, A.I.R. 1932 Oudh 218, Ind. Rul. 1932 Oudh 292.

This section not only refers to property in respect of which an offence has been committed but also the property before the Court and in its custody—Gulabchand Umayi, 38 Cr.L.J. 382 (384), 167 I.C. 428, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 33, 9 R.S. 190; Namdeo, 39 Cr.L.J. 342 (343), 173 I.C. 620, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 316, I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 454, 10 R.N. 314.

Property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed:—In order that the Magistrate should have jurisdiction to dispose of property, it is only necessary that he should find that it appears that an offence has been committed in respect of that property and it is not necessary that the property should be proved to have been stolen—Kasiram Marwari v. Makhanji Dwarka Prasad, 38 Cr.L.J. 1091 (1092), 171 I.C. 589, 18 P.L.T. 441, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 591, 10 R.P. 221, 4 B.R. 40. These words mean property which has been the subject of offences like theft or criminal misappropriation—Abinash Chandra, 34 Cal. 986, 11 C.W.N. 1046, 6 C.L.J. 754, 6 Cr.L.J. 293. Where the accused gave false information that his jewels were stolen and afterwards these jewels were found in his possession, and the Magistrate after convicting him of an offence under section 182, I. P. C., confiscated those jewels under this section, it was held that the order under this section was illegal, because the jewels were neither produced before the Court nor was there any offence committed with regard to them—Lakshmi Narayan, 9 C.W.N. 597, 2 Cr.L.J. 273.

Cash is not, strictly speaking, property, except in so far as it is capable of being possessed and identified in specie. If, however, it is certain that the coins found on the person of thieves are the actual coins which have been the subject of theft, then it is permissible to treat such coins as stolen property and the Magistrate can pass an order as to their disposal (e.g., an order to pay them to the complainant as compensation). But coins which have been put into circulation and passed on to other persons cannot be treated in the same way as stolen coins actually remaining in the possession of thieves—Parsu, 18 S.L.R. 218, 26 Cr.L.J. 1315. But in an Allahabad case, where the accused embezzled some money from a Bank and sent part of the embezzled money to one of his creditors in notes under insured cover which was traced and seized by the police, and the Magistrate after convicting the accused ordered the money to be handed over to the Bank, held that the order was strictly justified under the provisions of this section, as the money was "property in respect of which an offence was committed" and it was property to which the Bank was entitled—Bankey Lal v. Allahabad Bank, 23 A.L.J. 889, 26 Cr.L.J. 1232. Where in certain disputes regarding possession of boats, nets and tackle a quarrel arose which ultimately ended in riot, assault and murder, held the boats, nets, tackle were "properties regarding which an offence was committed," the attempt to take possession of the boats, etc., was the occasion which gave rise to the quarrel which ultimately ended in the murder, although the boats were not actually the subject of the offence of murder. The words "property regarding which an offence has been committed" include moveable property regarding the possession of which a quarrel or riot is begun, whatever may be the offence which might ultimately be committed in the course of the quarrel or fight—Sheikh Dawood v. Velayuda, 51 Mad. 606, 54 M.L.J. 312, 29 Cr.L.J. 322 (323), 108 I.C. 65, A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 194, 27 M.L.W. 132, 9 A.I.Cr.R. 538.

Where the accused were prosecuted under section 17 (2) (a), Bihar and Orissa Mica Act (I of 1930) for not entering some quantity of crude mica in the stock book, pleaded guilty and were sentenced and they were not asked to meet a charge of having obtained mica by illicit means, and the mica, which was seized, was not made an exhibit, the mica was not a property regarding which any offence was committed and it was not a fit case in which confiscation should be ordered—Mani Ram, 38 Cr.L.J. 602, 168 I.C. 795, 18 P.L.T. 146, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 257, 3 B.R. 486, 9 R.P. 505, 16 Pat. 323, 1937 P.W.N. 167.

An order directing the keys of a house to be made over to the complainant is in fact an order directing that possession of the house in dispute be delivered to him for the purposes of this section—Sundar Das, 32 Cr.L.J. 847, 132 I.C. 202, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 527, 1931 Cr.L.J. 751.

The Magistrate can dispose of property stolen in British territory, though the Police might have seized it in foreign territory—Kushen Koer, 1878 P.R. 20.

"Property used for the commission of an offence":—This means property which has been instrumental in the commission of an offence, e.g., guns or swords—Abinash Chandra, 34 Cal. 986, 11 C.W.N. 1046, 6 C.L.J. 754, 6 Cr.L.J. 293. Thus, where the accused stole two bullocks and killed them, it was ordered that the axe and the knives with which he slaughtered the animals and which were found with the accused when he was arrested, should be confiscated and sold—Bhura, 26 Cr.L.J. 1495 (1496).

10 I.C. 151, A.I.R. 1026 Nag. 89 (Nag.). But any instrument or thing which is too remotely connected with the commission of an offence cannot be confiscated under this section. Thus, it is illegal to confiscate a press in which a seditious matter has been published, because the press is a too remote instrument and cannot be said to be property which has been used for the commission of the offence—Abinash Chandra, supra; Pandi Das, 1907 P.W.R. 37, 6 Cr.L.J. 411 (416). A Magistrate convicting a person for gambling under secs. 6 and 7 of the Madras Towns Nuisances Act cannot confiscate the money found in his waistcoat pocket, when there was no evidence to show that the money was actually staked—Appaji Aiyar, 41 Mad. 644. So also, a boat which has been used by the accused in going to commit a theft or in escaping from pursuit, cannot be said to be property used for the commission of an offence—Farid Gazi, 8 C.W.N. 387; see also Beera, Ratanlal 688. Similarly, where the accused has been guilty of rash driving, it is illegal to pass an order that the cart and pony of the accused should be sold and the sale proceeds paid over to the complainant as compensation—Ilahi Baksh, 1904 P.L.R. 4, 1 Cr.L.J. 38. Cf. Phula Singh, 1931 Cr.C. 853, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 565. Where several counterfeit currency notes were prepared from a genuine currency note, it cannot be said that the genuine currency note has been used for the commission of the offence of counterfeiting currency notes. The Judge is therefore wrong in ordering the genuine currency note to be confiscated and sent to the Collector for cancellation. It should be returned to the accused—Gopal Raghunath, 53 Bom. 344, 31 Bom.L.R. 148, 30 Cr.L.J. 588 (593).

Where some books would be works which would supply the material on which the accused could write the articles on Russia which were among the activities of which he had been found guilty, the books might be said to have been used by him for the commission of the offence of section 121A, I. P. C., and should not be returned to him under this section—Phillip Spratt, 35 Cr.L.J. 1389, 151 I.C. 735, 1934 A.L.J. 425, A.I.R. 1934 All 207, 7 R.A. 195, 4 A.W.R. 550. This decision has gone a little beyond what is contemplated in this section—Mani Ram, 38 Cr.L.J. 602 (605), 168 I.C. 795, 18 P.L.T. 146, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 257, 3 B.R. 486, 9 R.P. 505, 16 Pat. 323, 1937 P.W.N. 167.

Property must be moveable:—This section has no application to immovable property. Where the accused dispossessed the complainant of his garden by breaking the pad-lock of its gate and were convicted of the offence of criminal trespass the Court had no power to order the restoration of the garden to the complainant under this section as this section did not apply to immovable property—Sheonandan v. Bholanath, 18 C.W.N. 1146, 15 Cr.L.J. 222. See also Adepu Reddi v. Ramayya, 12 L.W. 227, 22 Cr.L.J. 110, 59 I.C. 414. An order for demolition of a wall on a conviction for building in contravention of Municipal rules is ultra vires, and sec 517 cannot apply to a case of this kind—Nanhu, 1900 A.W.N. 81. Contra—Tun Hla v. Shwe Ngo, 4 L.B.R. 229, 7 Cr.L.J. 490, where the word 'property' was held to include immovable property.

Property must have been in existence:—No order can be made under this section with respect to property which was not in existence at the time of the offence. Thus an innocent purchaser of a stolen cow cannot be ordered to deliver up the calf which was not even in embryonic existence when the theft took place, but which was given birth to by the cow while she was in his possession—Vernede, 10 Mad. 25.

1344. Order, when can be made:—According to the words of this section an order for disposal of the property can be made only upon the conclusion of the trial, and not long after the conclusion of the trial—Nani Mal, 24 Cr.L.J. 804 (All). See also Rash Mohan v. Kali Nath, 19 W.R. 3 (Cr.), which is directly based on the words in section 132 (a) of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1861. An order for disposal of property passed 14 days after the date of the passing of the judgment in the trial is not invalid—Kishan Chand v. Nanak Chand, 7 Lah.L.J. 625, 89 I.C. 973, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 9, 26 Cr.L.J. 1453. But in another Lahore case it has been held that the order under section 517 and the judgment in the trial must be contemporaneous. And so, if no order is passed by a Court in respect of the disposal of the property on the conclusion of the trial of the accused, the Court has no jurisdiction to pass an order at any subsequent time directing delivery of the property to the complainant—Abdul v. Ghulam Muhammad, 4 Lah. 460 (461), 76 I.C. 20, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 261, 25 Cr.L.J. 84. This case has been dissented from in 7 Lah.L.J. 625, cited above. See also Kanshi Ram v. Emp., A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 75, 73 I.C. 937, 24 Cr.L.J. 713, 4 Lah. 49, where it was held that there was no period of limitation for an order under this section. After reviewing the rulings quoted above the Patna High Court has held that section 517 gives jurisdiction to the Court to pass necessary orders for the disposal of property either at the time of the conclusion of the trial or at a later date. It would be surprising if this were not so in relation to property in the custody of the Court, for, it is the duty of the Court to make some arrangement for its disposal and it must continue to be the Court's duty until the property is disposed of in some way or other either by destruction or by passing out of the hands of the Court. Section 517 cannot be read as requiring that the order for disposal of property must be passed simultaneously with the judgment of the case unless words that are not in the section are read into it. The passing of such orders should not be unreasonably postponed, but the lapse of time does not relieve the Court of the duty and the corresponding jurisdiction to pass orders for the disposal of property which is in the Court's custody or under its control—Deopujan Mahto v. Kukur Ahir, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 198 (200), 1939 P.W.N. 911, 41 Cr.L.J. 559, 188 I.C. 260, 21 P.L.T. 448, 19 Pat. 337.

Where the order disposing of the property under section 517, Cr. P. C., was not made on the application of any party and after notice but was made in the property register probably at the instance of the office, it cannot be upheld. The application of the petitioner for return of the property to him must be dealt with according to law—Akella Rama Krishnayya v. Devulapalli Seethamma, 41 Cr.L.J. 275, 186 I.C. 224, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 916, 1939 M.W.N. 740.

No order as to the disposal of property can be made under this section if the trial is barred under sec. 403. The words 'when an inquiry or trial is conducted' cannot apply to a case in which the Court is prohibited from conducting a trial at all—Tun Hla v. Shwe Ngo, 4 L.B.R. 229, 7 Cr.L.J. 490.

An order under this section can be made when an inquiry or trial is concluded; that is, there must have been some inquiry or trial before the Magistrate. Therefore, where there was no criminal proceeding before the Magistrate, he had no jurisdiction to pass an order directing delivery of a property, which was in the possession of the opposite party, to the applicant merely on the application of the latter—Sreedam Chunder v. W. J. O'Grady, 6 C.L.J. 707, 6 Cr.L.J. 402 (403). Where the complainant practically abandoned the prosecution and the matter of complaint was not investigated, the Court would not be justified in making any order under this section. The proper order in such a case would be to let the property remain with the person in whose possession it was when the criminal proceeding was started—Brojendra v. K. S. Sama, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 614, 132 I.C. 902, 32 Cr.L.J. 983, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 455, 35 C.W.N. 198 (200), 1931 Cr.C. 607; Hrisikesh Ghosh v. R. P. Michael, 67 C.L.J. 569. It has also been laid down that there is no reason why on principle the Magistrate should not order the resumption of the status quo so that the determination of the rights of the parties might be properly sought before the Civil Courts. The language of the section is wide enough to cover an order such as this, and that there is no lack of jurisdiction in the Magistrate—Rama Iyer v. S. P. Das Gupta, 34 Cr.L.J. 676, 144 I.C. 78, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 149, 1933 Cr.C. 226, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 495.

Where in a case under sec. 379, I. P. C., the police seized some articles used in cultivation from the possession of one of the accused and after investigation referred the case as one of civil nature and the Magistrate struck off the case from the Police file but, on the recommendation of the police, ordered that the articles be returned to the complainant, held that the property was seized from one of the accused and it has to be returned to him—Paidi Subbaya, 41 Cr.L.J. 203, 185 I.C. 440, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 905, 1939 M.W.N. 739.

Where a person charged with criminal breach of trust in respect of certain jewels died before the day fixed for his trial, and there was no trial, no order could be made by the Magistrate under this section. The jewels were ordered to be returned to the person from whom the Police recovered them—Kuppanmal, 29 Mad. 375, 4 Cr.L.J. 233.

See Note 1362A.

Order discretionary:—Orders under this section are discretionary. The section invests the Magistrate with a discretionary power and it is a rule of law that such power must be exercised judicially, i.e., according to the sound principles of law and not in an arbitrary manner—Sadashiv, 11 Bom.L.R. 16, 9 Cr.L.J. 162. This discretion is open to correction by the High Court where it has been exercised in violation of judicial principles—Pandharinath, 40 Bom. 186, 16 Cr.L.J. 783, 17 Bom.L.R. 922, 31 I.C. 383, A.I.R. 1915 Bom. 265.

Any property or document in regard to which an offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of an offence should not be returned by a Criminal Court to the person who has been convicted—Philip Spratt, 35 Cr.L.J. 1389, 151 I.C. 735, 1934 A.L.J. 425, A.I.R. 1934 All. 207, 4 A.W.R. 550, A.I.R. 1934 All. 549, 7 R.A. 195.

1345. Nature of order under this section:—The old section stated that the Magistrate could make such order as he thought fit, for the 'disposal' of the property. This was a general term and the nature of the order to be passed for disposal was not specified. It depended upon the discretion of the Magistrate to say that order was to be passed having regard to all facts of the case—Sadashiv, 11 Bom.L.R. 16, 9 Cr.L.J. 162. Under the amended section the word 'disposal' has been elucidated by certain explanatory words.

Order in a bribe case:—When the accused was convicted of taking bribe and the money paid as bribe was deposited in Court by the complainant, the Magistrate could order a portion of the bribe to be confiscated and the rest to be paid to the complainant—Buta Singh, 1873 P.R. 9.

Order in respect of currency note:—Where the accused stole a currency note from the complainant and changed it at the Government Treasury, then on conviction of the accused for theft, the currency note should be delivered to the Treasury and not to the complainant. Currency note is money and the ownership passes by mere delivery, and the original owner cannot claim the amount as against the Treasury—Nizam v. Jacob, 19 Cal. 52. The accused purchased some gold ornaments and handed to the jeweller a currency note which he had stolen. The jeweller not having had adequate cash took the note to a neighbouring shopkeeper who cashed it in good faith. Afterwards, during the prosecution of the accused, the note was attached from the shopkeeper, and on conviction of the accused the Magistrate ordered it to be returned to the Crown whose property it was found to have been. Held that the currency note should be returned to the shopkeeper, for property in it had passed to him by mere delivery—Pandharinath, 40 Bom. 186, 31 I.C. 383, 16 Cr.L.J. 783, A.I.R. 1915 Bom. 265, 17 Bom.L.R. 922. Title to a currency note passes by mere delivery, and therefore where a stolen currency note was recovered from an innocent third person, it should be returned to that person, and not to the person who lost it by theft—Srinivasamoorthi v. Narasimhalu, 50 Mad 916, 28 Cr.L.J. 879 (880). See also In re Collector of Salem, 2 Weir 664, 7 M.H.C.R. 233; Joggesur Mochi, 3 Cal. 379. But where the notes did not pass to the petitioner's firm in the ordinary course of business and an offence had been committed with reference to the notes within the meaning of this section and the circumstances in which the offence was committed seem prima facie to indicate that the petitioner had allowed himself to be duped by the accused, the Magistrate cannot be said to have improperly exercised the discretion vested in him under this section by directing the petitioner's firm to return the currency notes to the complainant's firm—Akshoy Kumar Saha v. Naba Kumar Singh Dudhuria, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 346, 41 Cr.L.J. 791, 189 I.C. 714.

Order in respect of coins:—So is the rule in respect of current coins. Badashahi coin is not current coin in British India, and it is to be delivered to the complainant from whom it is stolen, like any other common article or property—Mathu, 25 Bom. 702.

Order of confiscation:—An order of disposal under this section includes an order of forfeiture or confiscation—Iswar, Ratanlal 492. This is now expressly provided for in the present section. In Prithwiger, 5 N.L.R. 59, 9 Cr.L.J. 539, it was held that the 'disposal' of property could not be held to include confiscation or forfeiture, as the penalty of confiscation or forfeiture having been expressly provided for in secs. 62, 121, etc., of the Indian Penal Code and in numerous other sections of other Acts, it could not be included in the general word 'disposal' used in this section. The same view was taken in Secretary of State v. Lown Karan, 5 P.L.J. 321; Abinish Chandra, 34 Cal. 986, 11 C.W.N. 1046, 6 C.L.J. 754, 6 Cr.L.J. 293; Pindi Das, 1907 P.W.R. 37, 6 Cr.L.J. 411. These rulings are no longer correct in view of the express words of the present section.

An order of confiscation can be passed in respect of property found with the accused and produced before the Court, when security proceedings are taken under sec. 109—Pyde Ramanna, 42 Mac. 9, 49 I.C. 167, 8 M.L.W. 350, 24 M.L.T. 256, 20 Cr.L.J. 135; Beni Madho, 38 Cr.L.J. 175, 166 I.C. 271, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 143, 1936 Cr.C. 694, I.L.R. 1936 Nag. 150. When a Criminal Court imposed fine on the accused and directed that the fine should be recovered from the money which was found with the accused when he was arrested and which was in the custody of the Court, held that the order of the trial Court should be justified on the ground that the effect of the order which the Court made was to impose a fine and direct that the fine should be recovered by confiscation of the money in Court under this section—Samant, 35 Cr.L.J. 1344, 151 I.C. 472, 36 Bom.L.R. 324, 1934 Cr.C. 707, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 193.

Where the property was seized upon the accused who has since been acquitted, it must be returned to him. However strong the suspicion may be the Crown has no right to confiscate property seized from another's possession without proving that it does not belong to him. This section confines the powers of confiscation to property "regarding which any offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of any offence." Where no offence appears to have been committed, there is no power to make an order of forfeiture—Shaligram v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 105 (107), 172 I.C. 213, 10 R.N. 185, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 52.

An order for the confiscation of property which is the subject-matter of an offence cannot be made without first giving notice to and hearing the person to whose prejudice the order would be. Want of notice would be a good ground for setting aside the order—Ambica Tewari, 9 Bur.L.T. 193, 17 Cr.L.J. 207.

Order of destruction of counterfeit coin:—If the accused is convicted of an offence under sec. 241, I. P. C., and counterfeit coin is found in his possession, the Magistrate can order the destruction of the coin—Aiyavaiyan, 2 Weir 669.

Order of restoration of property:—If no offence is proved to have been committed in respect of any property produced before the Court, and the accused is acquitted, the Magistrate should restore the property to the person from whom it was last taken—Hagu v. Manmatha, 18 C.W.N. 959; Nagaratnam v. Rukmani, 2 Weir 668; Sattar Ali v. Afzal, 54 Cal. 283, 28 Cr.L.J. 546, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 532, 102 I.C. 482, 8 A.I. Cr.R. 179; In re Devidin, 22 Bom. 844; Anna Purna Bai, 1 Bom. 630; Anant Ramchandra, 10 Bom. 197; Ratanlal Rangildas, 17 Bom. 748; Ahmad, 9 Mad. 448; Gulabchand Umaji, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 33 (34), 38 Cr.L.J. 382, 167 I.C. 482, 9 R.S. 190. This principle of law, however, does not apply where all the accused are not acquitted—Gulabchand Umaji, supra. The Magistrate has a discretion to decide the question of possession but it is very rarely that discretion, if properly exercised, will go beyond restoring the property to the party from whom it was taken—Vaiyapuri v. Sinniah, 32 Cr.L.J. 355.

129 I.C. 458, 59 M.L.J. 901, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 17, 1930 M.W.N. 1106, 33 M.L.W. 36, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 266, 1931 Cr.C. 30, following Sadashir, 1 I.C. 103, 9 Cr.L.J. 162, 11 Bom.L.R. 160 and Srinivasamurti v. Narashimhalu, 50 Mad. 916, 104 I.C. 719, A.I.R. 1927 Mad. 797, 28 Cr.L.J. 879, 26 M.L.W. 168, 39 M.L.T. 18, 53 M.L.J. 309, 1927 M.W.N. 692. See also Lakshmana v. Arunagiri, 33 Cr.L.J. 783, 139 I.C. 340, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 495, 1932 Cr.C. 470, 1932 M.W.N. 813, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad. 670; Devidan v. Janaki, 33 Cr.L.J. 539, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad. 510, 138 I.C. 126, 1932 M.W.N. 106, 35 M.L.W. 625, 1932 Cr.C. 409, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 428, 62 M.L.J. 632. The property should be restored especially when there is no finding in the case that it belongs to some one else—Goparaju, 3 M.L.T. 334. Thus, where an accused person has been acquitted of the offence of cheating, it is not competent to the Court to restore the goods found in the possession of the accused to the complainant. The proper order in such a case would be to let the goods remain in the possession of the person in whose custody they were found—Ram Dan v. Hari Das, 27 Cr.L.J. 853 (854), A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 1048, 95 I.C. 933. But in view of the provisions of this section as they now stand, it cannot be laid down generally that if no offence was proved to have been committed in respect of property produced before a Criminal Court, and the accused is acquitted, the Magistrate should restore the property to the person from whom it was last taken. The amendment in the year 1923 by the addition of the words "by destruction, confiscation or delivery to any person claiming to be entitled to possession thereof or otherwise" after the word "disposal" in this section, has materially changed the scope of the law as it stood before the amendment. Where, therefore, there were conflicting claims to the properties in question and the titles set up could only be adequately dealt with by a Civil Court, it may properly be ordered that the properties are to remain in the custody of the trial Court, subject to any order that might be made by a competent Court of civil jurisdiction—Ramphal Tatwa v. Jasodia Malani, 40 C.W.N. 862. See also Note 1347.

Where the Magistrate, though he discharges the accused, believes that the property in his custody is the subject of some offence, he is not bound to restore the property to the person from whom it was taken, but can make any other order of disposal under this section—Ahmed, 9 Mad. 448. But if the person who claims to be the owner is before the Magistrate, and if he desires that the Magistrate should treat anybody as the owner other than the person who was in possession of the property, he should prove that the property is his—Kasiram Marwari v. Mahanji Dwarka Prasad, 38 Cr.L.J. 1091 (1092), 171 I.C. 589, 18 P.L.T. 441, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 591, 10 R.P. 221, 4 B.R. 40.

It is perfectly true that in an ordinary case of property or documents with which the Court is called upon to deal, under the provisions of this section, the proper order to pass generally is that such property or such document should in the absence of a definite finding as to the ownership, be returned to the person with whom it was found. In case of pension papers, however, there is a marked exception to the general rule. The only person entitled to the possession of the papers is the pensioner himself, and further the only person to whom they have any value whatsoever is the pensioner himself. In this state of affairs, the common sense view of the matter is that the petitioner should be allowed to regain possession of his own papers—Reza Ali v. Duarka Pershad, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 158, 182 I.C. 571, 12 R.C. 83.

A Magistrate cannot, on dismissal of a complaint, restore the property (e.g., money) to the accused, if he disclaims the property. In such a case the Court should retain the property until one or other of the parties has established his right in the Civil Court. If the property has been already given to the accused, the Court should call upon him to return it back to Court without delay—Chaman, 1913 P.W.R. 37, 14 Cr.L.J. 596 (597), 21 I.C. 468, 30 P.L.R. 1913; where a person disclaims the property it is obviously improper to restore it to him—Benu Madho, 38 Cr.L.J. 175, 166 I.C. 271, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 143, 1936 Cr.C. 694, 1 I.L.R. 1936 Nag. 150.

Where a person accused of theft is acquitted and claims as his own the property to the complainant's firm—Akshoy Kumar Saha v. Naba Kumar Singh Dudhoria, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 346, 41 Cr.L.J. 791, 189 I.C. 714.

Order in respect of coins:—So is the rule in respect of current coins. Badashahi coin is not current coin in British India, and it is to be delivered to the complainant from whom it is stolen, like any other common article or property—Mathu, 25 Bom. 702.

Order of confiscation:—An order of disposal under this section includes an order of forfeiture or confiscation—Iswar, Ratanlal 492. This is now expressly provided for in the present section. In Prithwiger, 5 N.L.R. 59, 9 Cr.L.J. 539, it was held that the 'disposal' of property could not be held to include confiscation or forfeiture, as the penalty of confiscation or forfeiture having been expressly provided for in secs. 62, 121, etc., of the Indian Penal Code and in numerous other sections of other Acts, it could not be included in the general word 'disposal' used in this section. The same view was taken in Secretary of State v. Lown Karan, 5 P.L.J. 321; Abinish Chandra, 34 Cal. 986, 11 C.W.N. 1046, 6 C.L.J. 754, 6 Cr.L.J. 293; Pindi Das, 1907 P.W.R. 37, 6 Cr.L.J. 411. These rulings are no longer correct in view of the express words of the present section.

An order of confiscation can be passed in respect of property found with the accused and produced before the Court, when security proceedings are taken under sec. 109—Pyde Ramanna, 42 Mac 9, 49 I.C. 167, 8 M.L.W. 350, 24 M.L.T. 256, 20 Cr.L.J. 135; Beni Madho, 38 Cr.L.J. 175, 166 I.C. 271, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 143, 1936 Cr.C. 694, I.L.R. 1936 Nag. 150. When a Criminal Court imposed fine on the accused and directed that the fine should be recovered from the money which was found with the accused when he was arrested and which was in the custody of the Court, held that the order of the trial Court should be justified on the ground that the effect of the order which the Court made was to impose a fine and direct that the fine should be recovered by confiscation of the money in Court under this section—Samant, 35 Cr.L.J. 1344, 151 I.C. 472, 36 Bom.L.R. 324, 1934 Cr.C. 707, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 193.

Where the property was seized upon the accused who has since been acquitted, it must be returned to him. However strong the suspicion may be the Crown has no right to confiscate property seized from another's possession without proving that it does not belong to him. This section confines the powers of confiscation to property "regarding which any offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of any offence." Where no offence appears to have been committed, there is no power to make an order of forfeiture—Shaligram v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 105 (107), 172 I.C. 213, 10 R.N. 185, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 52.

An order for the confiscation of property which is the subject-matter of an offence cannot be made without first giving notice to and hearing the person to whose prejudice the order would be. Want of notice would be a good ground for setting aside the order—Ambica Tewari, 9 Bur.L.T. 193, 17 Cr.L.J. 207.

Order of destruction of counterfeit coin:—If the accused is convicted of an offence under sec. 241, I. P. C., and counterfeit coin is found in his possession, the Magistrate can order the destruction of the coin—Aiyavaiyan, 2 Weir 669.

Order of restoration of property:—If no offence is proved to have been committed in respect of any property produced before the Court, and the accused is acquitted, the Magistrate should restore the property to the person from whom it was last taken—Hagu v. Manmatha, 18 C.W.N. 959; Nagaratnam v. Rukmani, 2 Weir 668; Sattar Ali v. Afzal, 54 Cal 283, 28 Cr.L.J. 546, A.I.R. 1927 Cal. 532, 102 I.C. 482, 8 A.I.Cr.R. 179; In re Devidin, 22 Bom. 844; Anna Purna Bai, 1 Bom. 630; Anant Ramchandra, 10 Bom. 197; Ratanlal Rangildas, 17 Bom 748; Ahmad, 9 Mad 448; Gulabchand Umaji, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 33 (34), 38 Cr.L.J. 382, 167 I.C. 482, 9 R.S. 190. This principle of law, however, does not apply where all the accused are not acquitted—Gulabchand Umaji, supra. The Magistrate has a discretion to decide the question of possession but it is very rarely that discretion, if properly exercised, will go beyond restoring the property to the party from what it was taken—Vaiyapuri v. Sinniah, 32 Cr.L.J. 355, them he acted in good faith—Shue Wa v. C. I. Mehta, 28 Cr.L.J. 932 (933), A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 322, 103 I.C. 452, 5 Rang. 533. The amendment to the Contract Act which took effect in 1930, has altered this position. So where some bangles, which were given for mere use, were misappropriated and pledged and the accused were convicted, held that the bangles should be returned to the owner and not to the pawnee—Chettyar Firm v. Ma Nan, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 205; Subbarama Ayyar v. Damodaran, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 313, 1937 M.W.N. 53, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 128, 1937 M.Cr.C. 51, 169 I.C. 80, 38 Cr.L.J. 690. Under section 178, Contract Act, there is a valid pledge if the pledger had not obtained possession of the goods from the original owner by means of an offence or fraud, and the pledger is not acting improperly, and the pawnee also acts in good faith. So, if the pledger (accused) had been expressly or impliedly authorised by the owner of the goods to pledge them and raise money on them, and the accused pawned the goods to the pawnee who also acted in good faith, but the pledger afterwards misappropriated the proceeds, held that there was a valid pledge within the meaning of section 178, Contract Act, when the transaction of pledge took place, and the pledgee was entitled to the possession of the goods under sec. 517, Cr. P. Code; and the fact that the pledgor (accused) afterwards changed his mind and misappropriated the proceeds was immaterial—Sharaf Din v. Gokal Chand, 12 Lah. 304, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 675, 132 I.C. 835, 32 Cr.L.J. 960, 32 P.L.R. 724, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 526, 1931 Cr.C. 750 (751). See also Veeracharyulu v. Rajamma, 1932 M.W.N. 1270. But if the pledgee was not a bona fide pledgee and knew that the pledgor had no authority to pledge the articles, held that the articles should be delivered to the owner and not to the pledgee—Nga Po Chit, 1 Rang. 199, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 277, 74 I.C. 1050, 2 Bur.L.J. 241, 24 Cr.L.J. 858; Valliappa Chetty v. Joseph, supra. Where the pledgers were not mercantile agents and had no right whatever to pledge ornaments or to raise money on them, the pledgee is not protected by the provisions of sec. 178, Contract Act, especially when he did not act in good faith—Gulabchand Umaji, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 33 (35), 38 Cr.L.J. 382, 167 I.C. 428, 9 R.S. 190. Where a pledged property was stolen from the possession of the pledgee by the pledgor who was thereupon convicted of theft, the Court should pass an order restoring the property to the pledgee and not to the person to whom the pledgor had sold it for value after the theft—Gour Mohan v. Bansidhar, 24 Cr.L.J. 238 (Cal.). A goldsmith was entrusted with a certain quantity of gold and diamonds for making a comb for the complainant. When the article was nearly completed, the goldsmith pledged it to a diamond merchant who had no knowledge that the property was the property of the complainant. The Court ordered the jewel to be returned to the complainant. Held that the order was justifiable—Chaganlal v. Maung Po Kouk, 2 Bur.L.J. 152. Where certain jewels were given to a broker for sale and the broker sold the jewels and misappropriated the sale proceeds, and was convicted of criminal breach of trust, the jewels ought to be restored to the purchaser and not to the owner, because the offence was committed not with respect to the jewels but with respect to the sale proceeds and, therefore, the Magistrate was not competent to make any order with respect to the jewels which validly belonged to the purchaser—Nanlal v. Maung Tun, 4 Bur.L.T. 170, 12 Cr.L.J. 467, 11 I.C. 1003.

Any person belonging to any of the classes mentioned in secs. 178 and 178A, Indian Contract Act, 1872 (Act IX of 1872), and sec. 30, Indian Sale of Goods Act, 1930 (III of 1930), which relate to a valid pledge of goods, and of the classes mentioned in secs. 27 to 30 Sale of Goods Act, which relate to sale, can make a valid pledge or sale provided the requirements of the provisos are fulfilled, and in that case the property should be returned not to the owner but to the pledgee or the buyer, as the case may be. But where such person does not belong to any of the classes mentioned above but is merely a bailee and thus cannot make either a valid pledge or sale, the property must be returned to the owner—Maung Po Thaung v. Noor Mohamed, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 385 (387), 171 I.C. 897.

If the property were seized from the servant or agent of the principal owner, and the fact of employment or agency were admitted, the property would rightly be restored seized from him by the Police and alleged to have been stolen, it should be restored to him in the absence of special reasons to the contrary—Savudi Karuppanan v. Guruswami, 34 Cr.L.J. 586, 143 I.C. 510, 56 Mad. 654, Ind. Rul. 1933 Mad. 306, 1933 M.W.N. 88, 37 M.L.W. 415, 1933 Cr.C. 662, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 434, 64 M.L.J. 431. If a complaint of theft of a certain property is dismissed on the ground of there being a bona fide dispute about the ownership of the property, the Magistrate should take custody of the property, sell it (if it is perishable) and retain the sale proceeds until they are shown to be payable to one or other of the parties, either by virtue of a decree of Court, or of an agreement between themselves—Visa Samta, 16 Bom.L.R. 951, 16 Cr.L.J. 111, 27 I.C. 159; Chenga Reddi v. Ramasamy, 1 L.W. 1032, 27 I.C. 152, 16 Cr.L.J. 104. In Syed Mohideen Sahib, 2 Weir 667, it has been held that in such a case, the Magistrate may deliver the property to the person from whose possession it was last taken, with a condition that the property, or its value, must be forthcoming in case the rival claimant establishes a title. But another Madras case lays down that in such a case the accused cannot claim the return of the property to him as a matter of course; the Court has jurisdiction to deliver the subject-matter of the alleged theft to somebody else—Kanaga Sabai, 34 Mad. 94 (95). And so, if it is found that the property belongs partly to the accused and partly to another person, it is not illegal to deliver the property to both of them on their joint receipt—Kanaga Sabai, 34 Mad. 94 (96).

Where properties ordered to be restored by a party had been converted to their own use it is open to the Criminal Court to compel them to produce such properties as may be capable of production and also to produce the money equivalent of such properties as may be incapable of production—Nagendra, 35 Cr.L.J. 886 (889), 149 I.C. 36, 1934 Cr.C. 620, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 454; Shwe Wa v. C. J. Mehta, 105 I.C. 452, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 322, 28 Cr.L.J. 932, 5 Rang. 553; Shamsunder v. Teja Singh, 36 Cr.L.J. 1237, 157 I.C. 763, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 98, 1935 Cr.C. 856; Naini Mall, 24 Cr.L.J. 804, 74 I.C. 708, A.I.R. 1924 All. 189.

1346. Order, when rights of third parties are concerned:—Where a property was stolen from the office of T and the thief sold it to F who pledged it to N, and prosecution was instituted against F, but he was acquitted, and then the property was delivered by the Court to T, held that the order was wrong. There being disputed ownership, the proper order was to order N to deposit the property in Court until the decision of a Civil Court relating to the ownership of the property—Narendra v. Studd, 19 Cr.L.J. 788, 46 I.C. 708 (Cal.). When the evidence disclosed that the property was obtained by the accused from the owner by means of fraud and subsequently pledged, then upon conviction of the accused, the property should be delivered to the owner and the remedy of the pledgee was to bring a suit in the Civil Court to enforce his lien on the property—Kong Lone v. Ma Kay, 4 L.B.R. 13, 6 Cr.L.J. 125; Palaniappa v. Ko Saye, 3 Bur.L.T. 111, 12 Cr.L.J. 88 (89), 8 I.C. 1204; Valiappa Chetty v. Joseph, 2 Bur.L.J. 85, 25 Cr.L.J. 666, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 248, 81 I.C. 154; Subbarama Ayyar v. Damodaram, 38 Cr.L.J. 690, 169 I.C. 80, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 313, 1937 M.W.N. 53, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 128, 1937 M.Cr.C. 51, 9 R.M. 680. Similarly, where the owner of the jewellery gave it to the accused in order that the latter might deposit it for safe custody with a Bank, but the accused instead of doing so pawned it and misappropriated the money, held that upon conviction of the accused, the jewellery ought to be restored to the owner—Mohammad Hadi Husain, 3 Luck. 494, 29 Cr.L.J. 983 (1987). But where certain jewels were given to the accused to sell, but the accused instead of selling them gave them to another person who pledged them to a third person, it was held that the jewels should be restored to the pledgee and not to the owner; because the owner, having parted with the jewels to be disposed of for money, was not entitled to the assistance of a Criminal Court in recovering them from a pawnee to whom they were so disposed of—Stephen Aviet, 4 L.B.R. 25, 6 Cr.L.J. 135; Annamalai v. Mrs. Basch, 11 L.B.R. 217, 23 Cr.L.J. 216. Under section 178 of the Contract Act the pledges to the pawnee were valid, if in accepting them he acted in good faith—Shwe Wa v. C. I. Mehta, 28 Cr.L.J. 932 (933), A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 322, 105 I.C. 452, 5 Rang 533. The amendment to the Contract Act which took effect in 1930, has altered this position. So where some bangles, which were given for mere use, were misappropriated and pledged and the accused were convicted, held that the bangles should be returned to the owner and not to the pawnee—Chettyar Firm v. Ma Nan, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 205; Subbarama Ayyar v. Damodaran, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 313, 1937 M.W.N. 53, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 128, 1937 M.Cr.C. 51, 169 I.C. 80, 38 Cr.L.J. 690. Under section 178, Contract Act, there is a valid pledge if the pledger had not obtained possession of the goods from the original owner by means of an offence or fraud, and the pledger is not acting improperly, and the pawnee also acts in good faith. So, if the pledger (accused) had been expressly or impliedly authorised by the owner of the goods to pledge them and raise money on them, and the accused pawned the goods to the pawnee who also acted in good faith, but the pledger afterwards misappropriated the proceeds, held that there was a valid pledge within the meaning of section 178, Contract Act, when the transaction of pledge took place, and the pledgee was entitled to the possession of the goods under sec. 517, Cr. P. Code; and the fact that the pledgor (accused) afterwards changed his mind and misappropriated the proceeds was immaterial—Sharaf Din v. Gokal Chand, 12 Lah. 304, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 675, 132 I.C. 835, 32 Cr.L.J. 960, 32 P.L.R. 724, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 526, 1931 Cr.C. 750 (751). See also Veeracharyulu v. Rajamma, 1932 M.W.N. 1270. But if the pledgee was not a bona fide pledgee and knew that the pledgor had no authority to pledge the articles, held that the articles should be delivered to the owner and not to the pledgee—Nga Po Chit, 1 Rang. 199, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 277, 74 I.C. 1050, 2 Bur.L.J. 241, 24 Cr.L.J. 858; Valliappa Chetty v. Joseph, supra. Where the pledgers were not mercantile agents and had no right whatever to pledge ornaments or to raise money on them, the pledgee is not protected by the provisions of sec. 178, Contract Act, especially when he did not act in good faith—Gulabchand Umaji, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 33 (35), 38 Cr.L.J. 382, 167 I.C. 428, 9 RS 190. Where a pledged property was stolen from the possession of the pledgee by the pledgor who was thereupon convicted of theft, the Court should pass an order restoring the property to the pledgee and not to the person to whom the pledgor had sold it for value after the theft—Gour Mohan v. Bansidhar, 24 Cr.L.J. 238 (Cal.). A goldsmith was entrusted with a certain quantity of gold and diamonds for making a comb for the complainant. When the article was nearly completed, the goldsmith pledged it to a diamond merchant who had no knowledge that the property was the property of the complainant. The Court ordered the jewel to be returned to the complainant. Held that the order was justifiable—Chaganlal v. Maung Po Kauk, 2 Bur.L.J. 152. Where certain jewels were given to a broker for sale and the broker sold the jewels and misappropriated the sale proceeds, and was convicted of criminal breach of trust, the jewels ought to be restored to the purchaser and not to the owner, because the offence was committed not with respect to the jewels but with respect to the sale proceeds and, therefore, the Magistrate was not competent to make any order with respect to the jewels which validly belonged to the purchaser—Nanlal v. Maung Tun, 4 Bur.L.T. 170, 12 Cr.L.J. 467, 11 I.C. 1003.

Any person belonging to any of the classes mentioned in secs. 178 and 178A, Indian Contract Act, 1872 (Act IX of 1872), and sec. 30, Indian Sale of Goods Act, 1930 (III of 1930), which relate to a valid pledge of goods, and of the classes mentioned in secs. 27 to 30 Sale of Goods Act, which relate to sale, can make a valid pledge or sale provided the requirements of the provisos are fulfilled, and in that case the property should be returned not to the owner but to the pledgee or the buyer, as the case may be. But where such person does not belong to any of the classes mentioned above but is merely a bailee and thus cannot make either a valid pledge or sale, the property must be returned to the owner—Maung Po Thauang v. Noor Mohamed, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 383 (387), 171 I.C. 897.

If the property were seized from the servant or agent of the principal owner, and the fact of employment or agency were admitted, the property would rightly be restored to the master or principal—U Ba Hlaing v. Balabux Sodani, 38 Cr.L.J. 358 (360), 167 I.C. 245, 14 Rang 633, 9 R.R. 305, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 42.

Notice:—It is true that the section does not in terms require the issue of any notice and if an order regarding disposal of property is passed simultaneously with the judgment in the criminal case, no one would contend that a separate notice to the parties to show cause in respect of the disposal of the property was necessary; but when an application is made after some lapse of time, it is only proper on general principles of law that the party to be affected by the proposed order should have notice of the application—Deopujan Mahto v. Kukur Ahir, A.I.R. 1940 Pat 198 (200), 1939 P.W.N. 911, 41 Cr.L.J. 559, 188 I.C. 260, 21 P.L.T. 448, 19 Pat. 337, following Arunachala Thevan v. Vellachami Thevan, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 324, 71 I.C. 514, 24 Cr.L.J. 162, 46 Mad 162, 44 M.L.J. 56.

In a case in which the question of the right to possession is not one between the complainant and the accused, but one between the complainant and a third person, an order for the restoration of the property should not be made without giving the opposite party an opportunity of being heard. Thus, where the complainant entrusted certain jewels to the accused who committed criminal breach of trust in respect of them and pledged them to another person, the Court should not order the jewels to be restored to the complainant without giving any notice to the pledgee—Shw Wa v. C. I. Mehta, 5 Rang. 553, 28 Cr.L.J. 932, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 322, 105 I.C. 452.

1347. Question of title:—Where a question of bona fides and of title by purchase or otherwise clearly arises, the duty of the Criminal Court is not to pass any order under this section, but to leave the complainant to his remedy in the Civil Court if he thinks he has one—Naini Mall, 24 Cr.L.J. 804, A I R. 1924 All. 189, 74 I.C. 708. Where the title to the seized property is doubtful, it should be returned to the person from whom it was seized, unless there are special circumstances which would render such a course unjustifiable—Srinivasamoorthi v. Narasimhalu, 50 Mad. 916, 28 Cr.L.J. 879 (880). If conflicting claims are put forward to the property by different parties, the Magistrate cannot give a decision as to the ownership of the property; the proper procedure would be to keep the property in Court, pending any order which may be made by a competent Civil Court—Ram Khelawan v. Tulsu, 28 C.W.N. 1094, 26 Cr.L.J. 300. See also Ramphal Tatwa v. Jasodia Malain, 40 C.W.N. 862, cited in Note 1345. Where the property in dispute was a certain quantity of wood, the proper order would be to sell the property and retain the sale proceeds in Court until they were shown to be payable to one or other of the parties either in virtue of a decree or in virtue of an agreement among themselves—Visa Samta, 16 Bom L.R. 951, 16 Cr.L.J. 111, 27 I.C. 159.

See also U Ba Hlaing v. Balabux Sodani, cited in Note 1331 under the heading "Restoration of property."

1348. Improper orders:—(1) Disposal in charity:—The section does not place the property at the disposal of the Magistrate in the sense of enabling him to bestow it in charity. He is to make such legal disposition thereof as seems right, i.e., to direct its restoration to some one to whom it seems to belong or permit it to continue in the possession in which it is found or otherwise—Anonymous, 2 Weir 666.

(2) Order regarding custody of children:—Orders regarding custody of children cannot be passed under this section because children are not "property"—Howka Ramalakshmi, 1 Weir 348.

(3) Order for removal of building:—Where the accused built a new wall abutting on the road in contravention of the rules of the Municipality and the Magistrate after convicting and fining the accused ordered the wall to be pulled down, it was held that the order as to the removal of the wall was illegal—Nanhu, 1900 A.W.N. 81.

(4) Order demanding security:—The Magistrate cannot take a bond from the accused to produce the property (with respect to which an offence is alleged to have been committed) in Court whenever required. There is no provision of the law which enables a Magistrate to make an order demanding security. He can proceed under sec. 94 in order to secure the production of the property, and on failure of the accused to produce it, he can proceed under sec. 96—Purna Chandra v. Sashi, 7 C.W.N. 522. Sub-section (4) does not apply to the case, because under that sub-section a Magistrate can take a bond from a person at the time of delivering the property to him.

(5) Detention of property:—If no offence is proved in respect of the property produced in Court, the proper order that the Court may pass is to restore the property to the person from whom it was originally taken. It cannot detain the property until the title of the rightful owner is declared by a Civil Court—Devidin, 22 Bom. 844.

Sub-section (4):—If no offence is proved to have been committed, the Magistrate may restore the property to the accused, and at the same time demand security from him for its production whenever required—Subbarayadu, 2 Weir 668.

1349. Explanation:—The words 'conversion' and 'exchange' used in the Explanation to the section must be taken in their ordinary sense. They apply to such acts as melting down of gold and silver into ornaments or the exchange of notes for cash. When, therefore, a person fraudulently obtained a decree upon a forged pro-note and in execution of that decree purchased a garden and was subsequently convicted of cheating, it was held that the convicting Court could not direct restoration of the garden to its owner, because it could not be said that the garden was acquired by the conversion of the forged promissory note into a decree—Nga Ke Maung, 4 Bur L T 211, 12 Cr.L.J. 473, 12 I.C. 81. A gold ornament was stolen from the complainant and sold by the thief for Rs. 184 to the applicant who converted it into gold and sold it in pieces to different persons. In the course of the trial of the theft case, the applicant was made to produce Rs. 184, and at the end of the trial the Magistrate ordered the sum to be paid over to the complainant. It was held that the money could not be paid over to the complainant, since it merely represented the sum which the applicant paid to the accused as the price of the gold bangles, and it could not be treated under the Explanation to this section as the exchanged property with reference to which an offence had been committed—Anant, 20 Bom L.R. 604, 19 Cr L J 721, 46 I.C. 401.

In view of this Explanation, the objection that the coins directed to be returned are not the identical coins stolen cannot be sustained—Soni, 4 S.L.R. 255, 12 Cr L J. 397.

The money which the Magistrate finds to be the sale-proceeds of stolen property, is itself "property" to which this section relates and may, therefore, be made over to the persons claiming it by the Court—Gobind, 34 Cr.L.J. 581, 143 I.C. 358, Ind Rul. 1933 Lah. 347.

Appeal:—See section 520.

1350. Revision:—The High Court has jurisdiction to interfere with an order of the Magistrate passed under this section—Gangamma, 2 Weir 538 and 669; Pandharinath Pundalik, 40 Bom. 186, 16 Cr.L.J. 783, A.I.R. 1915 Bom. 265, 31 I.C. 383, 17 Bom.L.R. 922. An order passed by a Magistrate under this section is a judicial order and is open to review by the higher Courts on appeal or revision, as the case may be—Sundar Das, 32 Cr L J 847, 132 I.C. 202, A.I.R. 1931 Lah 527, 1931 Cr C 751. An order made under this section may be revised by the High Court either under sec. 520 or by virtue of the powers conferred on it by sec. 439 read with secs. 433 and 423 (d) of the Code—Hagu v. Manmatha, 18 C.W.N. 959, 15 Cr.L.J. 184. But where the case is one in which an appeal lies, any party aggrieved by an order as to the disposal of property must go to the Court of Appeal. In such a case, a Court of revision has no jurisdiction to interfere with an order as to the disposal of property. It is only when there is neither an appeal nor a confirmation that a Court of revision or reference can interfere—Laxman Rangu, 35 Bom. 253, 12 Cr L.J. 169.

The Magistrate is given a wide discretion and unless it is clear that he exercised it on some wrong principle and that he returned the property to somebody obviously not entitled to have it, the High Court in revision will be unwilling to interfere—Subbarama Ayyar v. Damodaran, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 313 (314), 1937 M.W.N. 53, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 128, 1937 M.Cr.C. 51, 169 I.C. 80, 38 Cr.L.J. 690, 9 R.M. 680.

1351. Power of Appellate Court to make orders under this section:—Under clause (d) of sec. 423 the Appellate Court is competent to make any incidental or consequential order that may be just or proper. An order directing the disposal of property is a 'consequential or incidental order' within the meaning of sec. 423 (d). Therefore, where such order was not passed by the Court of first instance, the Appellate Court is entitled to do so—Gopi Nath, 3 A.L.J. 770, 4 Cr.L.J. 370; Azmat Shah, 35 All. 374, 14 Cr.L.J. 526. See Notes under sec. 423 (d). Contra—Locanadu v. Seethal, 2 Weir 674, where it has been held that an Appellate Court cannot pass an order under this section when the Subordinate Court has not done so. But this ruling is no longer correct in view of sec. 423 (1)(d).

Since the High Court in Revision possesses all the powers of an Appellate Court, the High Court can in revision pass an order under this section. See Note 1212 under sec. 439.

518. In lieu of itself passing an order under section 517, the Court may direct the property to be delivered to the District Magistrate or to a Sub-divisional Magistrate, who shall in such cases deal with it as if it had been seized by the police and the seizure had been reported to him in the manner hereinafter mentioned.

Scope of section:—An order under this section can be made only in respect of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed or which has been used for the commission of an offence—Girji, Ratanlal 496.

519. When any person is convicted of any offence which includes, or amounts to, theft or receiving stolen property, and it is proved that any other person has bought the stolen property from him without knowing, or having reason to believe, that the same was stolen, and that any money on his arrest has been taken out of the possession of the convicted person, the Court may, on the application of such purchaser and on the restitution of the stolen property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, order that out of such money a sum not exceeding the price paid by such purchaser be delivered to him.

'Any money has been taken out of the possession, etc.':—The Magistrate can give compensation to an innocent purchaser only out of any money found on the person of the accused; when no money was found in the possession of the person convicted, the Magistrate cannot grant compensation to the innocent purchaser out of the fine imposed on the accused—Puyuthinni Pramutha, 2 Weir 671 (672); Abdul, 3 Bom.L.R. 449; Dhondur, 3 Bom.L.R. 764. See also Rama, Ratanlal 631.

The Magistrate cannot call upon the owner to pay the purchase-money of the stolen property to the bona fide purchaser; and an order delivering the property to the purchaser from the thief because the original owner would not pay him the purchase-money, is illegal—Karim Baksh, 1886 A.W.N. 291.

520. Any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision may direct any order under section 517, section 518 or section 519 passed by a Court subordinate thereto, to be stayed pending consideration by the former Court, and may modify, alter or annul such order and make any further orders that may be just.

Scope:—Under this section strictly speaking there is no right of appeal in the proper sense of the word. This section is not in the Chapter of the Cr. P. Code which deals with appeals, but it gives Sessions Court power to "modify, alter or annul" the order passed under sec. 517. This is a statutory right of revision, or it may be said of interference with any order passed under sec. 517 by a Magistrate subordinate to the Court of Session—Maung Pu Tu v. The King, 39 Cr.L.J. 763, 176 I.C. 451, 11 R.R. 67, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 278.

1352. "Any Court of appeal or revision":—The words "any Court of appeal" are not necessarily limited to a Court before which an appeal in the main case is pending. The orders under secs. 517-519 are appealable quite independent of the fact whether an appeal has been preferred or not from the main order of conviction or acquittal—Joggesur, 3 Cal. 379; Ahmed, 9 Mad. 448; U Po Hla v. Ko Po, 7 Rang 345, 30 Cr.L.J. 540 (542), 115 I.C. 901, A.I.R. 1929 Rang 97 (F.B.). Therefore, where a second class Magistrate restored certain property to the complainant when no offence was found to have been committed, the District Magistrate was competent to annul the order and restore the property to the person from whose possession it was taken, although there was no appeal pending before the District Magistrate—Subbaya v. Narayya, 2 Weir 673. So also, even where no appeal has been preferred from a conviction by a subordinate Court, the District Magistrate has got jurisdiction to interfere as a Court of revision under sec. 520 with an order passed by the trial Court under sec. 517—Nga Po Chit, 1 Rang 199, 24 Cr.L.J. 858, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 227; U P. Hla, supra.

But the Sessions Judge is not a Court of appeal or revision in respect of an order passed by a second class Magistrate. So also, a Sessions Judge is not a Court of appeal from the decision of a second class Magistrate, because there can be no second appeal to the Sessions Judge. Moreover, the Sessions Judge has no revisional powers over the order of a Sub-divisional Magistrate passed on appeal—Soma Pillai v. Krishna Pillai, 47 M.L.J. 481, 25 Cr.L.J. 1247, 20 L.W. 521. But see Explanation to sec. 435.

The Bombay High Court was once of opinion that the words 'Court of Appeal' implied the Court to which an appeal lay in the particular case and not the Court to which appeals would ordinarily lie from the Court deciding the particular case. And therefore where a 1st class Magistrate, in acquitting the accused person charged with theft of cattle, ordered the cattle to be restored to him, but on appeal the Sessions Judge revised the order and held that the complainant was entitled to the cattle, held that the Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to act under sec. 520 since he was not a Court of appeal in this particular case, because no appeal could lie to him against a judgment of acquittal; the appeal ought to have been preferred to the High Court—Khema Rukhad, 42 Bom. 664, 20 Bom.L.R. 395, 19 Cr.L.J. 597. But this decision has been recently overruled by the Full Bench case of Walchand Jasraj v. Hari Anant, 56 Bom. 369, 34 Bom.L.R. 1203, 1932 Cr.C. 789 (790), 139 I.C. 433, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 499, 33 Cr.L.J. 807, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 534, where it is stated that this section means that any Court which has power of hearing appeal, reference or revision in respect of orders of the trial Court can make an order under this section, and the jurisdiction of superior Court is not dependent upon the question in what Court an appeal against an order of acquittal might have been brought which in fact has not been brought. The Rangoon High Court similarly holds that even in case of an acquittal by the trial Court, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, as a Court of revision, has power under sec. 520 to interfere with the order of the trial Court with regard to the disposal of property—U Po Hla v. Ko Po, 7 Rang 345, 30 Cr.L.J. 540 (542), 115 I.C. 901, A.I.R. 1929 Rang 97 (F.B.), overruling Maung Ma v. Ma Kra, 6 Rang. 259, 29 Cr.L.J. 958. The words "Court of Appeal," as used in this section, are not limited to a Court before which an appeal from an order of acquittal could be, and the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal to deal with an order of disposal of property is not dependent upon the question in what Court an appeal from an

An order directing the disposal of property is a 'consequential or incidental order' within the meaning of sec. 423 (d). Since the High Court in Revision possesses all the powers of an Appellate Court, the High Court can in revision pass an order under this section. See Note 1212 under sec. 439.

The orders under secs 517-519 are appealable quite independent of the fact whether an appeal has been preferred or not from the main order of conviction or acquittal—Joggessur, 3 Cal 379; Ahmed, 9 Mad. 448; *U Po Hla v. So also, a Sessions Judge is not a Court of appeal from the decision of a second class Magistrate, because there can be no second appeal to the Sessions Judge. Moreover, the Sessions Judge has no revisional powers over the order of a Sub-divisional Magistrate passed on appeal—Soma Pillai v. Krishna Pillai, 47 M L J. 481, 25 Cr L J. 1247, 20 L.W. 521. The Bombay High Court was once of opinion that the words ‘Court of Appeal’ implied the Court to which an appeal lay in the particular case and not the Court to which appeals would ordinarily lie from the Court deciding the particular case. But this decision has been recently overruled by the Full Bench case of Walchand Jasraj v. Hari Anant, 56 Bom. 369, 34 Bom L R 1203, 1932 Cr C 789 (790), 139 I C 433, Ind Rul 1932 Bom 499, 33 Cr L J. 807, A I R. 1932 Bom 534, where it is stated that this section means that any Court which has power of hearing appeal, reference or revision in respect of orders of the trial Court can make an order under this section, and the jurisdiction of superior Court is not dependent upon the question in what Court an appeal against an order of acquittal might have been brought which in fact has not been brought. The Rangoon High Court similarly holds that even in case of an acquittal by the trial Court, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, as a Court of revision, has power under sec. 520 to interfere with the order of the trial Court with regard to the disposal of property—U Po Hla v. Ko Po, 7 Rang 345, 30 Cr L J 540 (542), 115 I C. 901, A.I.R. 1929 Rang 97 (F.B.), overruling Mauung Ma v. Ma Kra, 6 Rang 259, 29 Cr L J. 958. The words “Court of Appeal,” as used in this section, are not limited to a Court before which an appeal from an order of acquittal could lie, and the jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal to deal with an order of disposal of property is not dependent upon the question in what Court an appeal from an order of acquittal might have been brought, which, in point of fact has not been brought. Consequently, when a Magistrate passes an order of acquittal and makes an order under sec. 517, Criminal Procedure Code, the Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to deal with and set aside that order under this section, although no appeal lies to him from the order of acquittal—Banuruddin v. Gani Mia, 40 C.W.N. 287, 37 Cr.L.J. 313, 160 I.C. 591, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 21, 1936 Cr.C. 112; Ramphal Tatwa v. Jasodia Malain, 40 C.W.N. 862. The same view was taken in an earlier Madras case—Ahmed, 9 Mad. 448. The Punjab Chief Court also held that the 'Court of Appeal' merely implied the Court to which appeals would ordinarily lie, and did not mean that an appeal must lie in the particular case in which the order was passed as to disposal of property—Bhagat Ram, 96 P.L.R. 1911; 12 Cr.L.J. 400, 11 I.C. 584. But the Allahabad High Court holds otherwise. Thus, where the trying Magistrate acquitted the accused who was charged with theft of a drum, and under sec. 517 directed the drum to be returned to the accused, but on appeal the District Magistrate set aside the order under sec. 517 and directed the drum to be delivered to the complainant, held that the District Magistrate had no jurisdiction to do so, because he was not a Court of Appeal within the meaning of sec. 520, since no appeal could lie to him against an order of acquittal—Devi Ram, 46 All. 623 (624), 22 A.L.J. 505, 25 Cr.L.J. 1168.

A Sessions Judge, as a Court of Revision, can himself make an order under this section; he need not refer the matter to the High Court under sec. 438. Sec. 520 is not controlled by the provisions of sec. 438—Walchand Jasraj, supra.

An order made under sec. 517 (1), Cr. P. C., by an Assistant Sessions Judge, directing confiscation to the Government of property found on the person of an accused convicted of dacoity, is appealable to the High Court—Bir Bikram Kishore v. Emp., 41 C.W.N. 512, 65 C.L.J. 397.

An appeal from an order of a second class Magistrate ordinarily lies to the District Magistrate, but if the District Magistrate has directed an appeal or a certain class of appeals to be heard by a Sub-divisional Magistrate, the Court of the Sub-divisional Magistrate, and not that of the District Magistrate is the 'Court of Appeal' under this section. Therefore, where an appeal in the main case lies to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, that Magistrate has jurisdiction to pass an order as to the disposal of property under this section—Arunachala Thevan, 46 Mad. 162, 24 Cr.L.J. 162, 44 M.L.J. 56, 32 M.L.T. 104, 17 M.L.W. 462, 71 I.C. 514, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 324.

But when no appeal is preferred against the main order in the case (i.e., against the acquittal or conviction), but the appeal is confined entirely to the question of disposal of property, the appeal would lie to the Court to which an appeal ordinarily lies, (e.g., to the District Magistrate from an order of a second class Magistrate, and not to the Sub-divisional Magistrate)—Arunachala Thevan, supra; Jogi Venkiah, 42 M.L.J. 401, 23 Cr.L.J. 387, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 78.

But when an appeal has been preferred to a particular Court from the main order of conviction or acquittal, no appeal or revision against an order as to the disposal of property can be preferred to any other Court. The jurisdiction of the other Courts as to the revision of the order is suspended owing to the seisin of the whole case by the Court of appeal—Hussain Shah, 17 C.P.L.R. 107, 1 Cr.L.J. 764. But where the Appellate Court in dealing with an appeal has left untouched the order passed by the Original Court under secs 517-519, there exists no bar to an application for revision of that order being made in any other Court having jurisdiction to revise that order—Hussain Shah, supra.

Where a Magistrate disposing of a criminal appeal fails to pass an order under sec. 520, it will be open to his successor to do so—Subba Naidu, 43 M.L.J. 87, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 329. See sec. 559.

Where an Additional District Magistrate is invested by the Local Government by virtue of the powers conferred upon it by sec. 10 (2), Cr. P. C., with the powers of a Court of Revision he is competent when disposing of a case by virtue of those powers to make any consequential order as to the disposal of the property under this section—

Nagappan v. Ramaram, 31 Cr L.J. 1085, 126 I.C. 594, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 769. But see Mana Pillai v. Gopalkrishna Iyer, 1928 M.W.N. 633, where a different view seems to have been taken. This view was not approved in Abdur Rahman Kutty v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 637, (1937) 1 M.L.J. 498, 1937 M.W.N. 321, 45 M.L.W. 435, 1937 M.Cr.C. 114, 169 I.C. 71, 38 Cr L.J. 664, I.L.R. 1937 Mad. 1034.

An Additional Sessions Judge is a Court of appeal but not a Court of revision within the meaning of this section—Sabhapati v. Ramkishan, 62 Cal. 861, 37 Cr L.J. 541, 162 I.C. 255, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 185. See also Ramphal Tatwa v. Jasoda Malain, 40 C.W.N. 862.

Notice:—An order under this section should not be passed without giving notice to the opposite party—Laxman Rangu, 35 Bom. 253; Kanshi Ram, 4 Lah. 49 (51); Janki Das, 33 Cr L.J. 369, 136 I.C. 735, 33 P.L.R. 167, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 271. Although there is no rule of law which requires that such a notice is absolutely necessary, still if there is some interval between the date of the main order in the appeal and the order as to disposal of property, it is desirable that notice should be given to the opposite party before passing the second order—Arunachala Thevan, 46 Mad. 162, A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 324, 71 I.C. 514, 24 Cr L.J. 162, 44 M.L.J. 56.

Scope of the section:—See U Ba Hlaing v. Balabux Sodani, cited in Note 1331 under the heading "Nature of proceedings."

1353. "And make any further orders that may be just":—These words did not occur in the old Codes and were for the first time introduced into the Code of 1898. Under the old Codes it was doubted whether the Appellate or Revisional Court would direct restitution of property when setting aside the order of the Lower Court. But now the addition of the words "and make any further orders that may be just" in this section gives such power to the Superior Court beyond any doubt. See Arunachala Thevan, 46 Mad. 162 (at p. 167), A.I.R. 1923 Mad. 324, 71 I.C. 514, 24 Cr L.J. 162, 44 M.L.J. 56, Hagu v. Manmatha, 18 C.W.N. 959, and Badrul v. Chamela, 19 Cr L.J. 995 (Pat.). Owing to this change in the section, the following rulings are no longer good law—Basudeb Surma, 14 Cal. 834; Abhram Umar, 8 Bom. 575; Devudin, 22 Bom. 844.

Where the trial Court has not made any order as to the disposal of property, the Sessions Judge on appeal can pass any order that may be just with regard to the disposal of property—Thiraj, 10 Lah. 187, 29 Cr L.J. 810. The fact that an order for delivery of property under sec. 517 has been carried out, does not deprive the High Court of its power to order restoration of the property to the rightful power—Shwe Wa v. C. I. Mehta, 5 Rang. 553, 28 Cr L.J. 932, A.I.R. 1927 Rang. 322, 105 I.C. 452. It is clearly just that when a subordinate Court has made over property to a person who is not entitled to its possession, the High Court should remedy the error by restoring the property to the person properly entitled to its possession—Ibid. It is not necessary that an order as regards the property should be passed under this section by the Appellate Court simultaneously with the disposal of the appeal. Thus, where a conviction for theft of bulls was set aside by the Appellate Magistrate but at that time he forgot to pass any order as to the bulls, and some time after the disposal of the appeal he passed an order for restoration of the bulls to the accused, held that the second order was not illegal as it could be treated as part of the proceedings of the main appeal (the interval being a short one)—Arunachala Thevan, 46 Mad. 162, 44 M.L.J. 56, 24 Cr L.J. 162.

The District Magistrate acting under this section cannot direct that the property should be sold and that the sale-proceeds should be retained in criminal deposit awaiting the decision of a Civil Court as to its ownership. Even if the parties talk of going to the Civil Court, the Magistrate ought not, by the application of this section, to make an order tantamount to attachment before judgment in a civil suit—Kasiram Marwari v. Makhanji Dwarka Prasad, 38 Cr L.J. 1091 (1092), 171 I.C. 589, 18 P.L.T. 441, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 591, 4 B.R. 40, 10 R.P. 221. See also Mahammad Yusuf v. Krishna Mohan, 41 C.W.N. 1376 (1379).

Limitation:—When an application is made to the Superior Court "to make any further orders as may be just," such application should not always be deemed as an appeal and need not be presented within the period of limitation prescribed for filing an appeal from the order of a Magistrate—Srinivasamoorthi v. Narasimhalu, 50 Mad 916, 28 Cr.L.J. 879 (880). Thus, a person was convicted in June 1920 for dishonestly receiving stolen currency notes, and was ordered by the Magistrate to make over the money to the complainant. On appeal, the Sessions Judge in July 1921 reversed the conviction and acquitted the accused, but passed no order as regards the notes. Subsequently, in January 1922, the accused made an application to the Sessions Judge for the restoration of the money, which the Judge rejected as barred by limitation. Held, that this application was in no sense an appeal against the order of the trying Magistrate, but an independent application to the Sessions Judge with a view to his taking action under sec. 520 and 'passing any order that may be just.' No period of limitation is prescribed for such an application and it can be made within a reasonable time from the date on which an accused person is acquitted of the crime with which he was charged—Kanshi Ram, 4 Lah. 49 (51), 24 Cr.L.J. 713.

1354. Revision:—When an order of the Lower Court has been set aside by the Sessions Court on appeal under this section, the order of the Sessions Court is not further appealable; the remedy is by way of revision to the High Court—Debi Prasad v. Puran, 1898 A.W.N. 40.

521. (1) On a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 292, section 293, section 501 or section 502, the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which the conviction was had, and which are in the custody of the Court or remain in the possession or power of the person convicted.

(2) The Court may, in like manner, on a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 272, section 273, section 274 or section 275, order the food, drink, drug or medical preparation in respect of which the conviction was had, to be destroyed.

522. (1) Whenever a person is convicted of an offence attended by criminal force or show of force or by criminal intimidation, and it appears to the Court that by such force or show of force or criminal intimidation any person has been dispossessed of any immovable property, the Court may, if it thinks fit, when convicting such person or at any time within one month from the date of the conviction, order the person dispossessed to be restored to the possession of the same.

(2) No such order shall prejudice any right or interest to or in such immovable property which any person may be able to establish in a civil suit.

(3) An order under this section may be made by any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision.

Change:—The italicised words and sub-section (3) have been added by section 143 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "This amendment provides for the order of restoration being passed within one month from the date of conviction; secondly, it extends the scope of the section to ouster from possession by show of criminal force or criminal intimidation; and thirdly, it gives power to an Appellate Court or to the High Court in revision to pass such an order"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

1355. Scope of section:—An order under this section should not be made where the accused person has not been convicted of an offence attended by criminal force—Soita v. Dochhi, 12 C.W.N. 269; Tulshi Ram v. Abrar Ahmad, 37 All. 654, 30 I.C. 1002, 13 A.L.J. 932, 16 Cr.L.J. 714; Ali Bahadur, 24 O.C. 352, 66 I.C. 324, 23 Cr.L.J. 260, A.I.R. 1922 Oudh 144. See also Sukhlal v. Ladbhai, 17 N.L.J. 27. Therefore, a Magistrate after acquitting an accused person cannot proceed to pass an order under this section—Ali Bahadur, supra. So also, no order can be passed under this section, where the trespass which the accused was alleged to have committed was not a criminal trespass but merely a civil one—Soita v. Dochhi, 12 C.W.N. 269. Where the accused were found not guilty of the offence with which they stood charged, the offence was not attended by any criminal force or show of criminal force or by criminal intimidation and there was no evidence to show that by such force or show of force or criminal intimidation the complainant had been dispossessed of his immovable property, this section had no application and an order for restoration of property could not be passed in favour of the complainant. Nor can the accused be ordered to be given possession. The status quo ante should be allowed to continue in tact pending a decision by the Civil Court—Gulab Singh v. Ram Prasad, 35 Cr.L.J. 685, 148 I.C. 436, 11 O.W.N. 372, A.L.R. 1934 Oudh 256, 1934 Cr.C. 586, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 199. If the conviction is set aside in appeal or revision, the order under sec. 522 resulting from the conviction must also be set aside, and the accused is entitled to get back possession of the property—Lal Chand v. Dasodhi, 24 Cr.L.J. 493, A.I.R. 1923 Lah. 15; Raghunath v. Raghunath, 30 Cr.L.J. 902, 118 I.C. 392, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah. 744.

But it is not necessary that all the accused persons must have been convicted. There is no reason for putting a narrow construction upon this section. An order of restoration would not be bad if some of the accused are convicted and others are acquitted. An order under this section naturally follows from a finding that the complainant has been dispossessed by force. A conviction is undoubtedly necessary, but not necessarily the conviction of all the accused—Garbad Y'adav, 55 Bom. 155, 32 Bom.L.R. 1496, 1931 Cr.C. 46 (47), Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 145, 129 I.C. 337, 32 Cr.L.J. 275, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 77.

1356. Criminal force:—To justify an order under this section the Court must find that the offence of which the accused is convicted was attended with criminal force as defined in sec. 350 of the I. P. Code; and therefore, where a person was convicted of criminal trespass, in which no criminal force was used, the Magistrate could not make an order under this section—Churaman v. Ramlal, 25 All. 341, 1903 A.W.N. 59; Chunni v. Baldeo, 21 A.L.J. 593, 25 Cr.L.J. 42, A.I.R. 1924 All. 84; Ishan v. Dino Nath, 27 Cal. 174, 4 C.W.N. 307; Pan Nyun v. Maung Nyo, 2 Cr.L.J. 377 (378), 3 L.B.R. 20; Balram v. Chamru, 2 P.L.T. 120, 61 I.C. 57, 22 Cr.L.J. 329, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 391; Hari Chand, 20 Cr.L.J. 488, A.I.R. 1919 Lah. 248, 1919 P.R. 16, 51 I.C. 472; Shera, 28 P.L.R. 238, 28 Cr.L.J. 320; Ali Bahadur Wajid, 23 Cr.L.J. 260, 24 O.C. 352; Rajathammal v. Rajamanickam, 1922 M.W.N. 356, 23 Cr.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 188. If the accused armed with sticks and lathis rushed at the complainant and used threats, whereupon the complainant was obliged to run away from his field, held that there was criminal force as defined in secs. 349 and 350, I. P. C., although actual physical force was not used, and an order under this section was justified—Ashiq Hussain, 45 All. 25 (26), 24 Cr.L.J. 857. But where the accused broke open the fence and forcibly removed the cots and constructed a building thereon in spite of the complainant's protest but used no force against her, an order under this section was not justifiable. It must be shown that the owner or occupier of the land was dispossessed by reason of the force shown to him or her—Daw Mja, 38 Cr.L.J. 918, 170 I.C. 363, 10 R.R. 80, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 248.

But the words 'attended by criminal force' do not mean an offence of criminal force as an ingredient; to hold such view is to put a narrow construction on the general

Rajamanickam*, 1922 M.W.N. 356, 23 Cr.L.J. 502, A.I.R. 1922 Mad. 188. If the accused armed with sticks and lathis rushed at the complainant and used threats, whereupon the complainant was obliged to run away from his field, held that there was criminal force as defined in secs. 349 and 350, I. P. C., although actual physical force was not used, and an order under this section was justified—Ashiq Hussain, 45 All 25 (26), 24 Cr.L.J. 857. But where the accused broke open the fence and forcibly removed the cots and constructed a building thereon in spite of the complainant's protest but used no force against her, an order under this section was not justifiable. It must be shown that the owner or occupier of the land was dispossessed by reason of the force shown to him or her—Daw Mja, 38 Cr.L.J. 918, 170 I.C. 368, 10 R.R. 80, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 248.

words. Therefore, an offence under sec. 447, I. P. C. or under sec. 341, I. P. C. would fall under the present section, if criminal force was in fact used in committing the offence, although the use of criminal force is not a necessary ingredient of an offence under sec. 447 or 341, I. P. Code—Batakala Pottia vadu, 26 Mad. 49 (50), 12 M.L.J. 447, 2 Weir 675; Mohini v. Narendra, 31 Cal. 691 (696) (F.B.). Contra—Ram Chandra v. Jityandria, 25 Cal. 434 (439). However, these questions of nicety would no longer arise by reason of the words "show of criminal force" added to this section.

There must be a clear finding by the Magistrate that criminal force was in fact used by the accused, and that the complainant was dispossessed by such force. In the absence of such finding, an order under this section cannot be made—Batakala, 26 Mad. 49 (50), 12 M.L.J. 447, 2 Weir 675; Ramchandra v. Jityandria, 25 Cal. 434 (438); Bhagbat v. Siddique, 39 Cal 1050; Teja Singh, 28 Cr.L.J. 819, 104 I.C. 435, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 792, 9 Lah. 322; Suba v. Ali Gauhar, 36 Cr.L.J. 1161, 8 R.L. 110, 157 I.C. 471, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 477, 37 P.L.R. 176, 1935 Cr.C. 871. In Usmanmiya v. Amirmiya, 28 Cr.L.J. 191 (192), 99 I.C. 863, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 131 it has been held that there need not be an express finding that criminal force was used, if the evidence on record leaves not a doubt as to the matter.

The word 'force' means force to a person as defined in sec. 349, I. P. C., and not force to property. Thus, where the accused dispossessed the complainant of his garden by breaking open the padlock of the gate but used no force or violence to any person, it was held that the case did not fall under this section—Sheonandan v. Bholanath, 15 Cr.L.J. 222, 18 C.W.N. 1146, A.I.R. 1914 Cal. 629, 22 I.C. 751. [But see Usman v. Amirmiya, 28 Cr.L.J. 191 (192), 99 I.C. 863, A.I.R. 1927 Nag. 131.] Where the accused committed rioting and used violence to the complainant's fencing but not to any person, it was held that this section did not apply—Sadasib Mandal, 18 C.W.N. 1150, 15 Cr.L.J. 720, 26 I.C. 168, A.I.R. 1915 Cal. 131. This section does not apply to a case of criminal trespass and dispossession of the complainant unless it is found that the trespass was attended with use of criminal force on the person of the complainant—Bakram v. Chamru, 2 P.L.T. 120, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 391, 22 Cr.L.J. 329, 61 I.C. 57; Bhani v. Narain Singh, 41 Cr.L.J. 387, 186 I.C. 895, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 84, 41 P.L.R. 908. But the mere fact that the accused were acquitted of assault and convicted only under sec. 447, I. P. C., does not mean that no criminal force or show of criminal force or criminal intimidation was present in the conduct of the accused so as to exclude the operation of this section—Mahadeo, 36 Cr.L.J. 328, 153 I.C. 407, A.I.R. 1934 All. 1025 (1027), 1934 A.L.J. 1061, 1934 Cr.C. 1335. Where trespass was committed in the absence of the complainant an order for restoration cannot be passed—Mangi Ram, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 830, 26 P.L.R. 500, 105 I.C. 676, 28 Cr.L.J. 964; Bihari Lal, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 454, 1934 Cr.C. 702, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 257, 36 P.L.R. 91, 152 I.C. 162, 36 Cr.L.J. 59, 15 Lah. 786. See also Zamin Husain, cited below in Note 1357.

Dissenting from the view stated above it has been held that 'when a person breaks open the lock of a house in the absence of the person in possession and enters into possession thereof, he uses criminal force to the lock which he breaks, criminal because it involves the crime of mischief and an order under this section is therefore competent—Roda v. Autar Singh, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 839 (840), 40 P.L.R. 923, 40 Cr.L.J. 380, 180 I.C. 801, 11 R.L. 693. This view of law has been dissented from by the same High Court in a recent case. It has been held that in a case where the complainant himself alleges that the house was locked when the unlawful entry was effected, it can by no stretch of language be argued that the offence of criminal trespass was attended by criminal force or show of force or by criminal intimidation. The term "force" is defined in sec. 349, I. P. C., and the term criminal force is defined in sec. 350, I. P. C., and both sections contemplate the use of force to a person and not to a thing. In Roda v. Autar Singh, Skemp, J., has no doubt remarked that when a person breaks a lock, he uses criminal force to it. But this is not so, especially when it is seen that this section contemplates not only criminal force but criminal intimidation, too, and it is inconceivable how a person can criminally intimidate an inanimate object. In such a case an order under this section is illegal—Ram Chand v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 781, 12 R.L. 111, 183 I.C. 340, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 184, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 513, 41 P.L.R. 63. See also Bhani v. Narain Singh, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 84, 41 P.L.R. 908, 41 Cr.L.J. 387, 186 I.C. 895. In a very recent case a Division of the Lahore High Court has held that the law has been correctly laid down in Ram Chand v. Emp., supra, and that the decision in Roda v. Autar Singh, supra, is incorrect—Narain Singh v. Panna Lal, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 460. The use of criminal force to a human being is necessary before this section comes into operation—Ibid.

An order under this section can only be passed in cases when criminal force as defined in sec. 350, I. P. C., has been used and where a finding to that effect has been recorded—Suba v. Ali Gauhar, A.I.R. 1935 Lah. 477, 1935 Cr.C. 871, 157 I.C. 471, 36 Cr.L.J. 1161, 37 P.L.R. 176. But where the Magistrate does not record a finding that there was criminal force but finds that the complainant's evidence is true, an order under this section is competent—Roda v. Autar Singh, supra.

1357. Show of force:—An order may be passed under this section even if the offence is attended with mere show of force. On this point there was a conflict of opinion prior to the present amendment. In some cases it was held that there must be actual criminal force and not mere show of criminal force. Thus, it was held that the offence of being members of an unlawful assembly was one in the composition of which the use of criminal force did not enter, though the show of criminal force might exist; and therefore an order under this section could not be passed on conviction for being members of an unlawful assembly—Ramchandra v. Jityandria, 25 Cal. 343 (349); Ishan v. Deno Nath, 27 Cal. 174; Narayan v. Visaji, 23 Bom. 494; Bundhi Singh, 19 Cr.L.J. 516, 45 I.C. 276, 4 P.L.W. 329; Mahesh, 50 I.C. 30, 20 Cr.L.J. 270 (Pat.). But these cases were dissented from in Chhako Mandal, 11 C.W.N. 467, 5 C.L.J. 278; and Nga Po Tok, 1918 U.B.R. 3rd Qr. 111, 20 Cr.L.J. 115, where it was held that an order as to possession of property could be passed by a Magistrate even where a person was dispossessed by mere show of criminal force. The Legislature has now given effect to the ruling in the latter set of cases by inserting the words "show of force or criminal intimidation" in this section, and the former set of cases must be deemed as overruled. And thus it has been held under the amended Code that where the accused succeeded in taking possession of the complainant's house by means of criminal trespass, threatening to use force to the complainant and his men, the accused's act clearly came within this section and an order for restoration of the house to the complainant was just and proper—Rameshar, 4 Pat. 438, 27 Cr.L.J. 137 (138); Sitaram v. Tilok Chand, 28 N.L.R. 298. But where there was no occasion for the use of any force or show of force on the part of the accused when they took possession of the property as the complainant was absent and no one on behalf of the complainant appeared to prevent the accused from committing the offences of which they were convicted and the complainant was still fighting out the question of his dispossession from the property in certain criminal cases, no order for restoration of possession to the complainant could be made under this section—Zamin Husain, 35 Cr.L.J. 788, 148 I.C. 790, 11 O.W.N. 472, 1934 Cr.C. 581, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 185, A.L.R. 1934 Oudh 150.

1358. Dispossession:—To justify an order under this section it must be shown that a party has been dispossessed by criminal force. Where there is no evidence of such dispossession, an order under this section cannot be sustained—Vadamalai Pallavarayan, 2 War 674; Kaon, 1917 P.L.R. 62, 18 Cr.L.J. 898. There should be an express finding that the person in whose favour the order was made had been dispossessed by the use of criminal force—Lachmidas v. Pallat, 23 W.R. 54. Where the accused was convicted of wrongfully restraining the complainant by obstructing a path along which he was entitled to pass, and the Magistrate ordered under this section that the obstructions should be removed and the complainant should be allowed to use the path, held that the order was unsustainable in the absence of a finding that the complainant had been dispossessed of any immoveable property—Mohan Khan v. Gayzuddin, 18 C.W.N. 399 (401). Where the accused was convicted of rioting and an order was passed under this section to the effect that one of the witnesses be put in possession of certain land until ousted by a Court of competent jurisdiction, held that as there was no evidence that the witness had been dispossessed by criminal force, the order of the Magistrate was bad—Vadamalai, 2 Weir 674. If the Magistrate purported to act under sec. 145, he should have instituted separate proceedings.

Where it is found that neither party is in actual possession, an order under this section cannot be made—Bhairi Surayya, 2 Weir 675.

Order affecting possession of third person:—The object of the provisions of this section is to enable the Criminal Court, by a summary order, to restore the state of things which existed at the time of the dispossession by the convicted person or persons. It cannot go behind the state of affairs existing at the time of forcible dispossession leading to the criminal prosecution. Where an auction-purchaser of a mortgaged property was put in possession of the property by ejecting the tenant, and the auction-purchaser was forcibly dispossessed by certain persons, held that upon the conviction of the latter, the auction-purchaser was entitled to be restored to actual possession which he held of the house at the time of his dispossession, and that the tenant had no right to any possession, but that he should seek his remedy in the Civil Court—Rameshwar v. Biswa Nath, 5 C.W.N. 374. If the Court finds that possession was with the complainant when the offence was committed and he was dispossessed by force, it will order the complainant to be put in possession, but will not look into the title of a third person to possession; especially if that person had an opportunity of disproving the complainant's title and proving his own at the trial of the accused but did not prove it—Garbad Yadav, 55 Bom. 155, 32 Bom.L.R. 1496, 1931 Cr.C. 46 (47), Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 145, 129 I.C. 337, 32 Cr.L.J. 275, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 77.

An order under this section can only be binding between the parties to the order and can have no finality in favour of one who was not a party to the order and does not claim under any party—Adinarayana v. Surama, 48 M.L.J. 372, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 799.

1359. Order under this section:—The order to be passed under this section is an order to the effect that the person dispossessed be restored to the possession of the property. Where the accused obstructed the complainant's right of way over a path by the erection of a hut, and used criminal force to the complainant when the latter objected to the obstruction, held that the Magistrate could order the hut to be removed, because that was the only way in which the complainant could be restored to the possession of his right of way of which he had been dispossessed by reason of the obstruction—Mohini v. Harendra, 31 Cal 691 (695) (F.B.). Where the accused was convicted under sec. 323, I. P. C., for having forcibly dispossessed the complainant of a bungalow and its contents, it was the duty of the Magistrate to pass orders under this section directing restoration to the complainant of the bungalow and its contents—Ahmed Ali v. Keenoo, 36 Cal. 44, 13 C.W.N. 77.

Order when can be made:—An order under this section, although it can be made only on the conviction of an offence, is an independent order and need not be made simultaneously with the conviction—Narayan v. Visaji, 23 Bom. 494. It is not essential in law that an order restoring possession should find a place in the actual judgment. But it must be immediate, that is, directly arising out of the judgment of the Court convicting in the case, and without any fresh materials having in the meantime been produced—Jatindra, 14 Cr.L.J. 172 (Cal.); See also Khushi v. Bakhtyal, 16 A.L.J. 489, 19 Cr.L.J. 734, 46 I.C. 414. It is proper if it is made within a reasonable time from the date of conviction—Nga Po Tok, U.B.R. (1918) 3 Qr. 111, 20 Cr.L.J. 115. It is not necessary for the Magistrate to pass an order under this section simultaneously with the conviction and there is no illegality if he passes the order at any time after the conviction, if the cause of delay in applying for the order is fully explained to his satisfaction and the complainant moves the Court promptly after the cause of delay has ceased—Ghulam Muhammad v. Karam Singh, 1914 P.R. 15, 15 Cr.L.J. 275. In this case, there was 20 months' delay owing to the filing of a civil suit by the accused; and the Court excused the delay, since the complainant applied for restoration immediately after this civil suit had terminated in his favour.

It should be noted that the present section as now amended gives only one month's time. And order passed after the expiry of one month is invalid and cannot stand—Ghazan v. Bhag Bhari, 33 P.L.R. 481, 1932 Cr.C. 254, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 151, 135 I.C. 679, 33 Cr.L.J. 191, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 210.

In Mohun v. Rat Chand, 4 C.W.N. 308, it was held that an order under this section must be made simultaneously with the order of conviction of the accused, and could not be made subsequently. But this ruling is no longer good law in view of the words "or at any time within one month" newly added in this section. "We do not think that an order of restoration need be made simultaneously with the conviction, but we think that any application for such an order should be made promptly, and that one month is sufficient time to allow for this purpose"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

This section specifically limits the time to one month from the date of conviction. If an application for restoration of possession is made within one month, the Magistrate is not justified in adjourning the application on the ground that an appeal by the accused against his conviction is pending in the Appellate Court, and in making the order after the dismissal of the appeal. No conduct on the accused's part can extend the jurisdiction conferred by the statute—Aswini Kumar v. Sasanka, 59 Cal. 1153, 36 C.W.N. 624 (625), 140 I.C. 66, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 685, 1932 Cr.C. 745, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 750, 33 Cr.L.J. 868. The proper course for the complainant would have been to make an application for restoration to the Appellate Court when the appeal was dismissed—Ibid. But where the petition was filed before the Magistrate only two days after the conviction and the delay in passing the order was not due to any fault on the part of the complainant, the order is not defective. Even if there be any defect in the order of the Magistrate who had passed it, the High Court would make that order following the procedure in Rameshwar Singh v. King-Emperor, 4 Pat. 438, 91 I.C. 809, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 689, 27 Cr.L.J. 137, 7 P.L.T. 285, where an order under section 522, Cr. P. C., was passed by the High Court—Sahebjan v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 311, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 409, 186 I.C. 423. In a case like this the Allahabad High Court set aside the order of the Magistrate, which was passed beyond time, but directed that the complainant be restored to the possession of the property from which he was wrongfully dispossessed by the accused, in exercise of powers under sub-section (3) of this section—Nihal Singh v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 958, 184 I.C. 384, A.I.R. 1939 All. 662, 1939 A.L.J. 595, 12 R.A. 225, I.L.R. 1939 All. 863, 1939 A Cr.C. 140, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 566. But see Said Umar v. Abdulkadir, infra.

The order of the Court must be passed within one month from the date of the conviction. It is not sufficient that the application to the Court to exercise its powers should be made within one month of the conviction—Daw Mya, 38 Cr.L.J. 918, 170 I.C. 368, 10 R.R. 80, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 248.

Who can make the order:—Where an accused is convicted by a Special Bench of Honorary Magistrates since abolished, another Bench has no jurisdiction to pass an order under this section—Bhani v. Narain Singh, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 84, 41 P.L.R. 908, 41 Cr.L.J. 387, 186 I.C. 895.

1360. Notice to party:—Since an order under this section is to be immediate, that is, directly arising out of the judgment of the Court convicting the accused, and without any fresh materials having in the meantime been produced, it is not necessary that any notice should go to the accused before the order is passed—Jatindra Nath, 14 Cr.L.J. 172 (Cal); Garband Yadav, 55 Bom. 155, 1931 Cr.C. 46 (47), Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 145, 129 I.C. 337, 32 Cr.L.J. 275, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 77. It was not the intention that notice should be issued to the opposite side before orders should be passed; otherwise it would be easy for convicted persons to bring it about that the Court should never be able to pass order within one month from the date of the conviction—Daw Mya, 38 Cr.L.J. 918, 170 I.C. 368, 10 R.R. 80, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 248. Notice to party:—Since an order under this section is to be immediate, that is, directly arising out of the judgment of the Court convicting the accused, and without any fresh materials having in the meantime been produced, it is not necessary that any notice should go to the accused before the order is passed—Jatindra Nath, 14 Cr.L.J. 172 (Cal.); Garband Yadav, 55 Bom. 155, 1931 Cr.C. 46 (47), Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 145, 129 I.C. 337, 32 Cr.L.J. 275, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 77. It was not the intention that notice should be issued to the opposite side before orders should be passed; otherwise it would be easy for convicted persons to bring it about that the Court should never be able to pass order within one month from the date of the conviction—Daw Mya, 38 Cr.L.J. 918, 170 I.C. 368, 10 R.R. 80, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 248. See a!

Said Umar v. Abdul Kadir, infra. But the Magistrate should give the party an opportunity to show cause as a matter of due exercise of judicial discretion—Pan Nyun v. Maung Nyo, 3 L.B.R. 20, 2 Cr.L.J. 377. Where an order under this section was made in respect of a house on a conviction of rioting and hurt, and the Sessions Judge on appeal set aside the conviction but directed the order under section 522 to be in abeyance pending a reference to the High Court, and subsequently in the absence of the complainant declared the order to be void, it was held that the Sessions Judge's order should not have been made behind the back of the party affected by it—Majid Ali v. Ali Asrab, 23 C.W.N. 862, 20 Cr.L.J. 846. See also Muran Bakhsh v. Bhag Mal, 32 P.L.R. 758, 33 Cr.L.J. 123, 135 I.C. 206, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 17, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 78, 1932 Cr.C. 27.

Sub-section (2):—Limitation for civil suit:—See Art. 47 of the Indian Limitation Act, which provides a period of three years from the date of the order.

One month is the time limit fixed for the trial Court in sub-section (1), but there is nothing in sub-section (3) to show that this limitation applies to a Court of Appeal. If it did, the result would be that sub-section (3) would be of little or no practical use, as a case will not usually reach the Appellate Court before the expiry of the month—Namdeo, 39 Cr.L.J. 342 (343), 173 I.C. 620, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 316, I.L.R. 1938 Nag. 454, 10 R.N. 314. An order under this section may be passed by the Court of appeal or revision at any time howsoever long after the conviction by the Magistrate and not necessarily within one month from the date of conviction—Rameshwar, 4 Pat. 438, 27 Cr.L.J. 137 (138), 91 I.C. 809, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 689, 7 P.L.T. 285; Roda v. Autar Singh, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 839 (841), 40 P.L.R. 923, 40 Cr.L.J. 380, 11 R.L. 693; Nihal Singh v. Emp, 40 Cr.L.J. 958, 184 I.C. 384, A.I.R. 1939 All. 662, 1939 A.L.J. 595, 12 R.A. 225, I.L.R. 1939 All. 863, 1939 A.Cr.C. 140, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 566. Clause (3) of this section does not impose any time limit within which a Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision must act. The Legislature, it would seem, thought fit to rely on the discretion of appellate and revisional Courts not to exercise their powers under this section in cases where there has been undue or excessive delay in moving the Court for its use—Fida Hussain v. Sarfaraz, 34 Cr.L.J. 940, 145 I.C. 327, 14 P.L.T. 696, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 617, 1933 Cr.C. 1366, 12 Pat. 787, following Rameshwar, supra; Gudri v. Jangi, 35 Cr.L.J. 1158, 150 I.C. 787, 15 P.L.T. 163, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 154, 1934 Cr.C. 339, A.L.R. 1934 Pat. 178.

The words "Court of appeal or revision" mean the Court to which an appeal or application for revision is preferred against the original order of conviction, and not the Court to which an appeal or revision petition may be made against the order of restoration—Ghazan v. Bhag Bhari, 33 P.L.R. 481, 1932 Cr.C. 254, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 151, 135 I.C. 679, 33 Cr.L.J. 191, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 210, dissenting from Rameshwar, supra. Sub-section (3) of this section only applies to the Court which is dealing with the original matter either as a Court of Appeal, confirmation, reference or revision in relation to that matter. It does not give any sort of right of appeal by itself against an order passed under this section—Mohammad Sharif v. Diwan Singh, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 95, 41 Cr.L.J. 458, 187 I.C. 407, distinguishing Fida Hussain v. Sarfaraz Hussain, 12 Pat. 787, 145 I.C. 327, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 617, 1933 Cr.C. 1366, 34 Cr.L.J. 940, 14 P.L.T. 696, 6 R.P. 161. See also Said Umar v. Abdulkadir, supra.

A Court of reference can only be a Court such as is described in section 433, Cr. P. Code, where the word 'refer' is definitely used. No such word is used in section 438, Cr. P. C., where the word 'report' is used instead. There would have been no difficulty in using the word 'refer' in section 438, Cr. P. C., in place of the word 'report' had it been the intention of the Legislature to include a Court acting under section 438, Cr. P. C., in the category of Courts of reference. Therefore a Court of reference in sub-section (3) of this section can only be interpreted as meaning a Court which has the power to refer and that is only a Court empowered under section 433, Cr. P. Code. A Court which has got the power to report a case under section 438, Cr. P. C., to the High Court for orders is not a Court of reference—Mohammad Sharif v. Diwan Singh, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 95, 41 Cr.L.J. 458, 187 I.C. 407.

1362. Appeal or Revision:—Since an Appellate Court can pass an incidental or consequential order under sec. 423 (d), an order under this section (which is in the nature of an incidental or consequential order) is also subject to appeal and is similarly subject to the revisional powers of the High Court under sec. 439—Gourhari v. Allaz, 29 Cal 724. The ruling in Ramchandra v. Nobin, 25 Cal. 630 is not correct in view of sec. 423 (d). An Appellate Court may set aside an order under this section, while affirming the conviction—Ujir Sheikh v. Syed Ali, 19 C.W.N. 990, 16 Cr.L.J. 607. The High Court has full power to interfere with an order passed by a Magistrate under this section, although this section is not mentioned in section 520—Ahmed Ali v. Kenoo, 36 Cal 44, 13 C.W.N. 77. Where the Magistrate ordered that a property which the accused had taken possession of by force should be restored to the complainant, but on the application of the accused the High Court set aside the order of restoration, held that the order of the High Court amounted to an order of restoration of the property to the accused—Sheonandan v. Bhola Nath, 18 C.W.N. 1147, 15 Cr.L.J. 222.

Under this section, a month after the date of conviction the trial Judge becomes functus officio in the matter of delivering possession. It would be illogical to hold that in spite of the lower Court having ceased to have the power of giving possession, the revisional Court can, when moved to consider the order of that Court refusing to give possession on the ground of limitation, enlarge that period and grant the relief. The legislature could never have intended this result. Sub-clause (3) comes into play when an appeal or revision has been preferred against the conviction. It is then that the appellate or revisional Court is seized of the jurisdiction to restore possession although the original Court may not have done so and such higher Courts are not bound by the limitation of one month in doing so. But this clause does not help if the Court of revision is considering the order of the trial Court under this section refusing to grant possession because the time for making the order had passed—Said Umar v. Abdulkadir, 38 Cr.L.J. 333, 166 I.C. 872, 9 R.Pesh. 73, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 7. But see Sahchjan v. Emp., supra.

523. (1) The seizure by any police officer of property taken under section 51, or alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence, shall be forthwith reported to a Magistrate, who shall make such order as he thinks fit respecting the disposal of such property or the delivery of such property to the person entitled to the possession thereof, or, if such person cannot be ascertained, respecting the custody and production of such property.

(2) If the person so entitled is known, the Magistrate may order the property to be delivered to him on such conditions (if any) as the Magistrate thinks fit. If such person is unknown, the Magistrate may detain it and shall, in such a case, issue a proclamation specifying the articles of which such property consists, and requiring any person who may have a claim thereto, to appear before him and establish his claim within six months from the date of such proclamation.

1362A. Sections 517 and 523:—Section 517 applies only when an inquiry or trial in a Criminal Court is concluded. But section 523 applies even though there has been no inquiry or trial, as in a case where a complaint has been dismissed under section 203—Ramasami v. Venkateswara, 24 M.L.J. 1, 14 Cr.L.J. 27.

In order that section 517 may apply, one of the conditions is that there must have been "an inquiry or trial in any Criminal Court", and that such inquiry or trial must have been concluded. Where the Police submitted a final report under sec. 173, or more strictly under sec. 169, this was a stage prior to the commencement of an inquiry or trial as sub-section (4) of sec. 173 would show. The case would more properly come under sec. 523, which applies where there has been no inquiry or trial, and expressly deals with a case inter alia where property is seized by a police officer as alleged or suspected to have been stolen, that is to say, where property is seized under sec. 550. Section 517 does not at all contemplate a provisional order for delivery or for custody, except as provided for in sub-section (4). If by reason of a disputed claim to possession, an order for delivery cannot be made, or the property may not be finally disposed of by destruction or confiscation or otherwise, the Court will not make any order under sec. 517 at all, but leave the parties to their remedy in a Civil Court, if any. Meanwhile, it will be quite proper to make an order under sec. 523, where the property is property seized in the manner stated in the section. Section 523 will equally apply where there has been and there has not been an inquiry or trial, or where the property has been or has not been produced in Court: in other words, even in a case which comes under sec. 517, if on the facts the Court finds itself unable to make an order for the disposal of the property in the manner indicated therein, it will be open to it to deal with the matter under sec. 523—Mahammad Yusuf v. Krishna Mohan, 41 C.W.N. 1376 (1378, 1379), 69 C.L.J. 95. But where the Police investigated the case and sent accused persons up for trial under sec. 380 read with sec. 411, I. P. C., and the Magistrate entered the case in his Register, fixed dates for hearing witnesses, directed summonses to issue to them and released the accused on furnishing security, but, before the date fixed for hearing, discharged the accused, as the case was withdrawn against them under sec. 494, Cr. P. C., and passed the order for disposal of the property, it must be held that there had been an inquiry before the Court which terminated finally in the discharge of the accused, that the order of the Magistrate with regard to the property was passed rightly under sec. 517, Cr. P. C., and that therefore the Sessions Judge could deal with the application filed before him under sec. 520, Cr. P. Code—Maung Pu Tu v. The King, 39 Cr.L.J. 763, 176 I.C. 451, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 278, 1938 Rang. 143, 11 R.Rang. 67.

See U Ba Hlaing v. Balabux Sodani, cited in Note 1331 under the heading "Nature of proceedings."

1363. Scope of section:—This section does not apply where the property was not taken possession of by the Police under sec. 51 or 54, i.e., where it was not seized by the police under the suspicion of its being stolen property nor had the petitioner committed any offence in respect to the property. Thus, it does not apply where the police obtained possession of the property in question in the course of an investigation into an offence which is in no way related to the property—Chuni Lal v. Ishar Das, 4 Lah. 38 (42, 43), 24 Cr.L.J. 670. This section applies only to property seized by the Police of their own motion in the exercise of the powers conferred on them, i.e., under secs. 51, 54, 165 and 166. Such property should be disposed of by the Magistrate under this section. But property seized by the Police under a search warrant issued by the Magistrate during the course of an inquiry or trial comes under sec. 517 and not under this section—Ratanlal Rangildas, 17 Bom. 748. So also, this section does not apply where the property is seized by the Police on the complaint of certain persons claiming as owners thereof—Kuppammal, 29 Mad. 375 (377), 4 Cr.L.J. 233. Contra—Lakshman Govind, 26 Bom. 552, where it has been held that the words 'seized by the Police' apply equally whether the seizure was under a warrant of the Magistrate, or without such warrant, and the Magistrate has power under this section to dispose of the property seized under a search warrant.

Property:—Standing crops do not come under the provisions of this section—Narayan v. Visaji, 23 Bom. 494.

Where the Magistrate considered that, having refused to take proceedings under sec. 144, Cr. P. C., he was not competent to investigate the question as to who was in possession of the paddy seized by the police, apprehending a breach of the peace and he therefore directed the police to retain it in their custody and, if it was liable to decay, to sell it, and deposit the money in safe custody pending orders from a proper Court, he has not judicially exercised the discretion which this section confers on him. In such a case he must exercise the discretion conferred on him by this section. If he decides that one or other of the parties was in possession at the time the police seized the property, the proper order to be passed will be to restore that party to possession. If the Magistrate is unable to decide who is in possession, it will be his duty to issue a proclamation under sub-section (2) of this section and proceed in accordance with the provisions of that sub-section—Ramsagar Yadav v. M. Yunus, 41 Cr.L.J. 234, 185 I.C. 773, A.I.R. 1940 Pat. 32, 20 P.L.T. 712.

1364. Order under this section:—Under this section the Magistrate may make 'such order as he thinks fit.' This discretion given by these words should be properly exercised. If there is no evidence as to the ownership of the property, it should be delivered to the person from whose possession it was taken—Bahinu, 5 Bom.L.R. 25; Kareppa Chanasappa, 16 Cr.L.J. 207, 17 Bom.L.R. 79; Kyin Tou v. E Cho, 4 L.B.R. 14, 6 Cr.L.J. 126; Aslum, 8 S.L.R. 141, 16 Cr.L.J. 138. Where the offence charged is not made out, the property seized should be returned to the person from whom it was taken—Devidan v. Janaki, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 428 (430), 1932 M.W.N. 106, 62 M.L.J. 632, 35 M.L.W. 625, 1932 Cr.C. 409, 138 I.C. 126, 33 Cr.L.J. 539; Paidi Subbayya, A.I.R. 1939 Mad. 905, 1939 M.W.N. 739, 1939 M.Cr.C. 199, 185 I.C. 440. A Magistrate is also competent to order the property seized by the Police to be made over to the complainant if the Magistrate finds on the materials before him that the complainant is entitled to the property—Husansha v. Mashaksha, 12 Bom.L.R. 232, 11 Cr.L.J. 339. But if the property is alleged or suspected to have been stolen or found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence, the Magistrate can pass orders that the property should be at the disposal of the Government even though the complainant may be entitled thereto—Ramasami v. Venkateswara, 24 M.L.J. 1, 14 Cr.L.J. 27, 18 I.C. 171. So also, if neither party succeeds in establishing his title to possession, the property would be at the disposal of the Government—Ibid. The mere fact that there may be confiscation under sec. 524 after proclamation as prescribed by sec. 523 (2) does not preclude confiscation at once under sec. 523 (1) without issuing such a proclamation. Clause (1) of sec. 523 empowers a Magistrate to adopt alternative courses and if he adopts the second alternative the section does not specifically state what the nature of the order should be and there is nothing to prevent a Magistrate from an order of forfeiture of the property to Government—

Conditional order regarding property:—The Magistrate cannot demand security, either under this section or under sec. 517, from the person in whose possession the articles are, for their production if required—Purna Chandra v. Sasi, 7 C.W.N. 522 (see Note 1348 under sec. 517). But if before the inquiry or trial, it becomes necessary to pass an immediate order to save the property from possible loss or decay, the Magistrate can order the property to be delivered to one of the parties on certain terms—Nasib Ali v. Rukmini, 5 C.W.N. 415. But in no circumstances, whether the case be one under sec. 517 or under sec. 523, can an order be made for detention in Court custody or in the custody of one of the parties, conditional on a civil suit being instituted, for this might mean detention for an indefinite period, if no such suit was brought—Mahammad Yusuf v. Krishna Mohan, 41 C.W.N. 1376 (1379), 69 C.L.J. 96. See also Kasiram Marwari v. Mahhanji Dwarka Prasad in Note-1353.

1365. Inquiry:—It has been pointed out in a Bombay case that the provisions of this section are wider than those of the corresponding section of the Code of 1872, and the Magistrate instead of delivering the property to the person from whom it was taken, may now hold an inquiry and then deliver it to the person legally entitled—Joti Rajnak, 8 Bom. 338. In another case it has been held that the Magistrate is bound to make a proper inquiry before making an order concerning the right of possession of property under this section—Ratanlal Ranghidas, 17 Bom. 748. See also Lakshman Govind, 26 Bom. 552, 4 Bom L.R. 276. This view has been accepted by the Calcutta High Court in Mahammad Yusuf v. Krishna Mohan, 41 C.W.N. 1376 (1379), 69 C.L.J. 96. But the Madras High Court holds that from a study of the section it appears that there is no obligation on the Magistrate to hold an inquiry for the purpose of determining as to which of the contending parties is entitled to the property. 'It does not appear that it is authorised to usurp the functions of a Civil Court and convert the trial of an accused person into an inquiry in regard to property'—Kuppammal, 29 Mad. 375 (378). In another Bombay case it is laid down that the Magistrate need not hold an inquiry but may proceed on such evidence as is available and pass an order under this section. He can base his order on a mere statement made by the accused to the Police that the property was stolen by him from the adjudged owner—Tribhovan, 9 Bom. 131. The same view has been taken by the Sind Court—Asi, 5 S.L.R. 3, 12 Cr.L.J. 108, 9 I.C. 634 (dissenting from 17 Bom 748). The Magistrate is not bound to make a judicial inquiry by examination of witnesses on oath before making an order under this section. All that the law requires is that he should have materials before him to satisfy himself as to who is entitled to possession—Ma Thein v. Ma The, 12 Bur.L.T. 266, 57 I.C. 81, 21 C.L.J. 561; Chuni Lal v. Ishar Das, 4 Lah. 38 (42), 24 Cr.L.J. 670. An order under this section can be passed on police reports and papers alone without any independent inquiry on oath with regard to the question of ownership—Chuni Lal v. Ishar Das, supra. The Court would no doubt be slow to pass an order of forfeiture in cases of mere suspicion under this section—Ramasami v. Venkateswara, 18 I.C. 171, 14 Cr.L.J. 27, 24 M.L.J. 1; Syed Mahbub, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 266, 19 N.L.J. 244. If there is no question that the property was taken out of the complainant's possession, the Magistrate can return the property to the complainant without making any inquiry—Ahmed Saheb, Ratanlal 365 (366).

On the materials which are ordinarily available when an order under this section is made, the person entitled to the immediate possession of the property is usually the person from whom it was seized, but one can readily imagine circumstances under which the indisputable fact, or facts admitted by the parties contending for the possession of the property, show that a person other than the person from whom the Police seized the property is entitled to the possession thereof. For instance, if a thief be caught with stolen property in his possession, and the property is seized from him, but the thief succeeds in making good his escape, then surely the order under this section would not direct the return of the property to the thief. Also, when the person from whom the property is seized admits or alleges that the property was left in his temporary custody by some other person it could not be returned to him: and, equally it could not be returned to him if he admitted that the property was found on his premises, but alleged that it was there without his knowledge. But where, as under section 512 (1), Cr. P. C., the proceeding before the Magistrate is neither an inquiry nor a trial, the Magistrate has no authority to arrive at conclusions regarding facts which are in dispute between the contending parties, in order to decide which of these parties is the person entitled to the possession of the property: he must give possession to the person so entitled, having regard to the indisputable or admitted facts, and leave the contending parties to fight out their rights in a Civil Court—U Ba Hlang v. Balabux Sodani, 38 Cr.L.J. 358 (361), 167 I.C. 245, 4 Rang. 633, 9 R.R. 305, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 42. But where the known facts plainly show that the property has been stolen, it would be intolerable to allow the person in whose possession the property is found to retain it as against the rightful owner, and force the latter to a civil suit for its recovery if the accused absconds—A. K. A. R. A. Chettyar v. Ma Saw Hla, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 450, 172 I.C. 106.

Under this section what the Magistrate has to consider is who is entitled to the possession of property which has been seized by the police. Where it is proved that the person from whose possession the property was seized came by it dishonestly, the Magistrate may have to consider question of title in order to determine the best right to possession. But where it appears that the police have seized property from a person who is not shown to have committed any offence in relation to that property, then the Magistrate can only hold that that person is entitled to possession of property. If the complainant considers that the person has no title to the property he has a remedy in a Civil Court but the burden will be upon him to prove his title. If, however, the property is handed over to the complainant, the burden will be upon that person to prove his title in a Civil Court. There is no reason why the burden of proof in a civil suit should be affected by the seizure by the police of property in relation to which no offence is proved—Lakshmichand Rajmal v. Gopikisan Balmukund, 37 Cr.L.J. 573, 162 I.C. 265, A.I.R. 1936 Bom. 171, 38 Bom.L.R. 117, 60 Bom. 183, 1936 Cr.C. 363.

An order for custody and production of the property can be made under this section only if the person entitled to possession cannot be ascertained. If, on the materials placed before the Magistrate, he is of opinion that it cannot be definitely said that the property belongs to one party rather than the other, he cannot order it to be detained till the parties settle their disputes in a Civil Court. In that case it is his duty to proceed under sub-section (2) of this section and then under sec. 524. It would be quite open to the parties in the meantime to go to the Civil Court, if they so desire, and in case a Civil Court decree is passed, further proceedings before the Magistrate would then at once cease—Mahammad Yusuf v. Krishna Mohan, 41 C.W.N. 1376 (1379), 69 C.L.J. 96.

When the Magistrate has issued a proclamation under sub-sec. (2), he is not bound to make any inquiry till after the expiry of the six months from the date of the proclamation—Mahalabuddin, 22 Cal 761.

Question of title:—The Magistrate deciding a case under this section should not decide any question of title but must be confined only to the question of possession—Husansha v. Mashaksha, 12 Bom.L.R. 232, 11 Cr.L.J. 339. The order under this section does not conclude the right of any person. The real owner may proceed in the Civil Court against the holder of the articles for damages—Trubhovan, 9 Bom. 131; Ahmad Sahab, Ratanlal 365 (366).

1366. Proclamation:—When the person legally entitled to the property is known, the Magistrate need not make a proclamation nor wait for six months before delivering the property to him. He may deliver the property to the person entitled, whether he has issued a proclamation or not. If he has issued a proclamation, that fact will not invalidate an order for immediate delivery of the property to such a known person—Po Luin, 3 L.B.R. 197, 4 Cr.L.J. 203.

1367. Appeal:—No appeal lies against a decision under this section—Syed Mahbub, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 266, 19 N.L.J. 244. See also U Ba Hlaing v. Balobux Sodani 38 Cr.L.J. 358 (360), 167 I.C. 245, 14 Rang. 633, 9 R.R. 305, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 42 in Note 1331 and Maung Pu Tu v. The King in Note 1362A.

Revision:—On a proper case being made out, the High Court in revision has jurisdiction to examine an order passed under this section—Chuni Lal v. Ishar Das, 4 Lah. 38 (42), 24 Cr.L.J. 670. The High Court has power in revision not only to set aside a Magistrate's order for the disposal of property passed under this section, but also to order restitution of the property to the person entitled thereto—Ma Thein v. Ma The, 12 Bur.L.T. 266, 21 Cr.L.J. 561, 57 I.C. 81. In Syed Mahbub, supra, a petition of appeal against an order under this section was treated as an application for revision, even after the period of limitation for such an application, as no appeal lay against the order.

Review:—Order under this section cannot be reviewed. When once a Magistrate has passed an order restoring possession of the property, he cannot reconsider it and pass another order subsequently—Sakharam v. Jairam, 4 Bom.L.R. 12.

524. If no person within such period establishes his claim to such property, and if the person in whose possession such property was found is unable to show that it was legally acquired by him, such property shall be at the disposal of the Provincial Government, and may be sold under the orders of the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, or of a Magistrate of the first class empowered by the Provincial Government in this behalf.

(2) In the case of every order passed under this section, an appeal shall lie to the Court to which appeals against sentences of the Court passing such order would lie.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Government" and "Local Government" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

1367A. "Unable to show that.....him":—When the proclamation has been issued under sec. 523, and the six months have expired, then the provisions of sec. 524 come in, and the person in whose possession the property was found can come up and prove his title to the property—Mahalabuddin, 22 Cal. 761. If he is unable to show that the property is his own, it may be forfeited to Government. But the words "unable to show that it was legally acquired by him" do not reverse the presumption laid down in sec. 110 of the Evidence Act; i.e., it should be presumed that the accused is the owner of the property, in the absence of any proof to the contrary. Where the police seized certain property from the accused and no claimant came forward to claim the same though a proclamation was issued, and several items of the property bore the name of the accused, but the Magistrate said that the evidence produced by the accused was suspicious, though no evidence was elicited to show clearly that the accused's claim was false, it was held that under the circumstances the proper and safest course is to follow the presumption laid down in sec. 110 of the Evidence Act—Aslum, 8 S.L.R. 141, 16 Cr.L.J. 133, 27 I.C. 202; Yaru, 19 S.L.R. 133, 26 Cr.L.J. 1048. Where no offence is found to have been committed, the property should be returned to the accused and should not be forfeited to the Government—In re Kareppa, 17 Bom.L.R. 79, 16 Cr.L.J. 207, 27 I.C. 767.

If no claimant appears within six months, then the further question arises, whether the person in whose possession the property was found is able to show that it was legally acquired by him; and, therefore, the Magistrate should hold an inquiry as to whether that person is entitled to retain possession of the property. Without holding the inquiry, the Magistrate is not entitled to confiscate the property—Yaru, supra.

The period of limitation of six months (sec 523) applies only to the third person and not to the person in whose possession the property was found. Such person is not required to show within six months that the property was legally acquired by him. Such question comes in after the lapse of the period of six months—Yaru, supra.

Property shall be at the disposal of the Government:—The Criminal Court can make arrangements for the custody and protection of the property while in the possession of the Government, and can make a transfer of the property to such person as it thinks proper—Secretary of State v Lown Karan, 5 P.L.J. 321 (324), 21 Cr.L.J. 475. The words "at the disposal of the Government" may reasonably be interpreted as meaning that the Government shall be free to sell the property or to hold it as a trustee for the true owner, who will be entitled to bring a suit for possession of the property—Ibid (at p. 327).

1368. Appeal:—The appeal allowed by sub-section (2) is an appeal in the full sense of Chapter XXXI, and the provisions of that chapter must be fully complied with. Where an appeal to the Court of Session from an order of the District Magistrate was treated as a sort of miscellaneous application and decided ex parte without a notice to the other party, and none of the procedure of Chapter XXXI was followed, the order of the Sessions Judge was set aside—Din Dajal, 1881 A.W.N. 150.

Civil suit:—In one case the Bombay High Court has expressed the opinion that as this section allows an appeal from an order under this section, it is doubtful whether the law contemplates a remedy by suit—Secretary of State v. Wakhul, 19 Bom 668. But in another case the same High Court has laid down that the Magistrate's order under this section is not conclusive as to title, and the owner is entitled to bring a civil suit for possession—Tribhuvan, 9 Bom. 131. See also Wasappa v Secretary of State, 40 Bom. 330. These two cases have been followed in Secretary of State v. Lown Karan, 5 P.L.J. 321 (326), 21 Cr.L.J. 475.

525. If the person entitled to the possession of such property is unknown or absent and the property is subject to speedy and natural decay, or if the Magistrate to whom its seizure is reported is of opinion that its sale would be for the benefit of the owner, or that the value of such property is less than ten rupees, the Magistrate may at any time direct it to be sold; and the provisions of sections 523 and 524 shall, as nearly as may be practicable, apply to the net proceeds of such sale.

The italicised words have been added by section 144 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923.

CHAPTER XLIV.

OF THE TRANSFER OF CRIMINAL CASES.

526. (1) Whenever it is made to appear to the High Court:—

High Court may transfer case or itself try it.

(a) that a fair and impartial inquiry or trial cannot be had in any Criminal Court subordinate thereto, or

- (b) that some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise, or
- (c) that a view of the place in or near which any offence has been committed may be required for the satisfactory inquiry into or trial of the same, or
- (d) that an order under this section will tend to the general convenience of the parties or witnesses, or
- (e) that such an order is expedient for the ends of justice, or is required by any provision of this Code;

it may order—

- (i) that any offence be inquired into or tried by any Court not empowered under sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive), but in other respects competent to inquire into or try such offence;
- (ii) that any particular * * * case or appeal, or class of * * * cases or appeals, be transferred from a Criminal Court subordinate to its authority to any other such Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction;
- (iii) that any particular * * * case or appeal be transferred to and tried before itself; or
- (iv) that an accused person be committed for trial to itself or to a Court of Session.

(2) When the High Court withdraws for trial before itself any case from any Court other than the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, it shall, except as provided in section 267, observe in such trial the same procedure which that Court would have observed if the case had not been so withdrawn.

(3) The High Court may act either on the report of the lower Court, or on the application of a party interested, or on its own initiative.

(4) Every application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section shall be made by motion, which shall, except when the applicant is the Advocate General, be supported by affidavit or affirmation.

(5) When an accused person makes an application under this section, the High Court may direct him to execute a bond, with or without sureties, conditioned that he will, if so ordered, pay any amount which the High Court may under this section award by way of compensation to the person opposing the application.

(6) Every accused person making any such application shall give to the Public Prosecutor notice in writing of the application, together with a copy of the grounds on which it is made; and no order shall be made on the merits of the application unless at least twenty-four hours have elapsed between the giving of such notice and the hearing of the application.

Notice to Public Prosecutor of application under this section.

(6A) Where any application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section is dismissed, the High Court may, if it is of opinion that the application was frivolous or vexatious, order the applicant to pay by way of compensation to any person who has opposed the application such sum not exceeding two hundred and fifty rupees as it may consider proper in the circumstances of the case.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect any order made under section 197.

(8) If in an inquiry under Chapter VIII or Chapter XVIII or in any trial, any party interested intimates to the Court at any stage before the defence closes its case that he intends to make an application under this section, the Court shall, upon his executing, if so required, a bond without sureties of an amount not exceeding two hundred rupees, that he will make such application within a reasonable time to be fixed by the Court, adjourn the case for such a period as will afford sufficient time for the application to be made and an order to be obtained thereon:

Adjournment on application under this section.

Provided that nothing herein contained shall require the Court to adjourn the case upon a second or subsequent intimation from the same party, or, where an adjournment under this sub-section has already been obtained by one of several accused, upon a subsequent intimation by any other accused.

(9) Notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, a Judge presiding in a Court of Session shall not be required to adjourn a trial under sub-section (8) if he is of opinion that the person notifying his intention of making an application under this section has had a reasonable opportunity of making such an application and has failed without sufficient cause to take advantage of it.

Explanation.—Nothing contained in sub-section (8) or sub-section (9) restricts the powers of a Court under section 344.

(10) If, before the argument (if any) for the admission of an appeal begins, or, in the case of an appeal admitted, before the argument for the appellant begins, any party interested intimates to the Court that he intends to make an application under this section, the Court shall, upon such party executing, if so required, a bond without sureties of an amount not exceeding two hundred rupees that he will make such application within a reasonable time to be fixed by the Court, postpone the appeal for such a period as will afford sufficient time for the application to be made and an order to be obtained thereon.

Change:—In clauses (ii) and (iii) the word 'criminal' has been omitted; in sub-sec. (5) the words 'any amount application' have been substituted for the words 'the costs of the prosecutor'; and sub-sections (6A) and (9) have been added, by sec. 145 of the Cr. P. Code Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923.

Sub-sections (5) and (6A) have been further amended by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XXI of 1932. By the same Amendment Act, sub-sec. (8) has been redrafted, and the Explanation to sub-sec. (9), as well as sub-sec. (10) has been newly added. The reasons are stated below in their proper places.

Scope:—This section deals with cases which are not in the High Court, though it is not necessarily to be exclusively confined thereto—Hari, 39 C.W.N. 929 (932), 36 Cr.L.J. 978, 156 I.C. 3, 1935 O.W.N. 744, A.I.R. 1935 P.C. 122.

Sections 526 and 269:—Section 269 in no way limits the powers of transfer conferred on the High Court by this section. The High Court has power to transfer a case from a jury-district to a non-jury district—Jumo, 10 S.L.R. 154, 18 Cr.L.J. 51 (cited under sec. 269). See Note 876.

1369. Conditions precedent:—Before an application is made to the High Court for transfer, the District Magistrate must be moved first. The High Court will not ordinarily entertain an application for transfer when the applicant can under the law move the District Court for the same relief but has not done so. The High Court will interfere only in the last resort—Ravi Chandra v. Sundar, 26 Cr.L.J. 960, 87 I.C. 112, A.I.R. 1925 All 640; In re Fonseca, 1 Cr.L.J. 589, 6 Bom.L.R. 480; Ghulam Navi v. Jwala, 24 Cr.L.J. 466 (Lah.). See also Mohiud-Din Lal Badshah v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 127, 178 I.C. 632, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 762, 40 P.L.R. 716, 11 R.L. 482. (Contra—Nahoomal, 20 S.L.R. 54, 27 Cr.L.J. 40 (41), where it has been held that the application for transfer lies direct to the High Court, and a trial will be unnecessarily delayed if the District Magistrate has to be moved in the first instance before applying to the High Court). In a recent case the Bombay High Court has decided that though in the case of a transfer of a proceeding from a Presidency Magistrate's Court, the general practice is to present the application for transfer to the Chief Presidency Magistrate in the first instance, and though in many cases it would be a convenient course, yet if the accused chooses to go direct to the High Court in order to avoid the expenses of a double application, he cannot be prevented from doing so—Shamdasani, 32 Bom.L.R. 1128, 1930 Cr.C. 1067 (1068), 129 I.C. 399, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 480, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 175.

The case to be transferred must be a case pending before a competent Court. The High Court cannot transfer a case which is not properly before a Subordinate Court of competent jurisdiction to receive and try it—Mangal Tekchand, 10 Bom. 274; Ledgard v. Bull, 9 All 191 (P.C.); Scott v. Rickets, 9 Mad. 356; In re Sikka, 17 L.W. 69; 7 Bom.L.R. 104; Girdharilal v. Motilal, 3 Bom.L.R. 121. If the complaint has been made to a Magistrate who is not competent to take cognizance of the case, he shall return the complaint for presentation to the proper Court with an endorsement to that effect (see sec. 201).

The application for transfer must be made before the disposal of the case. A case cannot be transferred after acquittal. This section contemplates interference by the High Court by way of transfer, when a person is aggrieved or injured by any order of the Magistrate before the disposal of the case. It is not intended to give power to interfere in order to set aside an acquittal or discharge—Corporation of Calcutta v. Bhéechunram, 2 Cal 290; Fakira, 1 Bom.L.R. 782.

1370. Cases which can be transferred:—In clauses (i) and (ii) of the old section, the Legislature used the words 'criminal case' and so the word criminal led to a divergence of views in several cases. Thus, as regards cases under Chap. VIII, it was held in Wazed Ali Khan, 41 Cal. 719, Wahid Ali, 32 All. 642 (644), Baggu Mal, 1913 P.R. 1, 13 Cr.L.J. 746, and Mohamed Shah, 1 S.L.R. 98, 8 Cr.L.J. 356 (360), that such cases were criminal cases and were, therefore, covered by this section; but in Ahmed Bakhsh, 1914 P.R. 5, 15 Cr.L.J. 563, and Rehman, 1916 P.L.R. 78, it was held that those cases not being criminal cases could not be transferred from one Court to another. So also, as regards cases under Chap. XII, in Gurudas v. Gaganendra, 2 C.L.J. 614, 3 Cr.L.J. 83, Atumuga Tegundan, 26 Mad. 188, Jaggu Ahir v. Murti, 34 All. 533, and Sardar Karam Singh, 11 O.C. 61, 7 Cr.L.J. 423, it was held that proceedings under sec. 145, being criminal proceedings, could be transferred from one Court to another, whereas the contrary view was taken in Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179 (184) and 8 S.L.R. 215, 16 Cr.L.J. 249. In Lalit v. Surya, 28 Cal. 709 (720), 5 C.W.N. 749, it was held that though a proceeding under Chap. XII was not a 'criminal' case under the Cr. P. Code (as it did not relate to an offence), still it was a 'criminal' case with n the meaning of the Letters Patent, and could be transferred by the High Court under sec. 15 of the Charter Act. The Legislature has now wisely omitted the word 'criminal', so that all cases inquired into and tried in Criminal Court can now be transferred under this section. "The word criminal has been omitted to make it clear that the powers of a High Court to transfer criminal cases extend to the transfer of miscellaneous proceedings under the Code"—Statements of Objects and Reasons (1914). And, therefore, a person proceeded against under sec. 107 can apply for transfer of the proceedings under the present section—Haji Baqridd, 26 A.L.J. 398, 29 Cr.L.J. 448 (449), 108 I.C. 569, A.I.R. 1928 All. 268; Wahid Ali Khan, 32 All. 642, 11 Cr.L.J. 412, 7 A.L.J. 813, 6 I.C. 874; U Gandama, 145 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 164, 1933 Cr.C. 763, 6 Rang. 41, 34 Cr.L.J. 950. See also Om Radhe v. Emp., in Note 1387. A proceeding under section 14 of the Legal Practitioners' Act is neither civil nor criminal, but is a 'case' within the meaning of section 526, and as it is held in a Criminal Court, it can be transferred from one Court to another under this section—Lakshmi Narain v. Ratnu, 27 P.L.R. 225, 27 Cr.L.J. 476 (477). The contrary view held in Jamal Singh v. Lala Bhagwan, 1888 P.R. 41 is no longer correct.

Future cases cannot be transferred:—The High Court can transfer actual cases only, i.e., cases actually pending before a Court; it cannot direct that cases that may be filed in future should, when filed, not be heard by the authority to which they are presented but should be transferred to some other Court—Lagma, Ratanlal 973.

As for the effect of section 193 on this section see Note 610.

1370A. Transfer for the second time:—When a case has already been transferred, very strong grounds are required to transfer it a second time. If accused or his counsel are so unfortunate as to have a reasonable apprehension that the second Magistrate will not give them justice and want to get their case transferred to a third Magistrate, it may well be supposed that the accused or his counsel are to blame in part—Mirza Jaffar Beg v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 354 (355), 41 Cr.L.J. 948, 190 I.C. 561.

1371. Grounds for transfer:—It must be that the accused must have a fair trial—Amrit Mandal, 1 P.L.J. 399, 18 Cr.L.J. 95. Before the High Court would take into consideration an apprehension, it must be satisfied that the apprehension is not a fanciful one—Ko Ko Gyi, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 114, 37 Cr.L.J. 436, 161 I.C. 240, 1936 Cr.C. 181. When there are circumstances existing to create a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that he will not receive a fair and unprejudiced trial, a transfer should be directed, though there is really no bias in the mind of the Court from which the transfer is sought and though the circumstances may be capable of explanation—Baktu Singh v. Kali Prasad, 28 Cal. 297; Dupeyon v. Driver, 23 Cal. 495; Kali Churn, 33 Cal. 1183; Wilson, 18 Cal. 247; Ram Kishan, 35 All. 5; Farzani v. Hanuman, 19 All. 64; Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179 (183); Sardari Lal, 3 Lah. 443, 24 Cr.L.J. 283; Rang Bahadur v. Kariman, 2 P.L.T. 297, 63 I.C. 868; Benode Behari, 5 P.L.T. 63, 25 Cr.L.J. 590. Confidence i the administration of justice is an essential element of good government, and reasonable apprehension of failure of justice in the mind of the accused person should, therefore, be taken into serious consideration on an application for transfer—Kali Churn, 33 Cal. 1183, 10 C.W.N. 793; Sardari Lal, 3 Lah. 443, 24 Cr.L.J. 286. It is not so much a matter of convenience nor of possible injustice, which has to be considered, but it is the apprehension in the mind of the accused person—and incidentally the public—which ought to be taken into account. It is, of course, most undesirable that there should be any feeling on the part of the accused persons or of the general body of citizens, that any trial which may lead to a conviction should have been tainted with the slightest suspicion of unfairness—Pateshwari, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 9, 147 I.C. 126, 1933 Cr.C. 179, 35 Cr.L.J. 272. It is necessary to avoid not only any partiality on the part of a Magistrate, but any circumstances that might lead to a reasonable apprehension of a partiality in the mind of an accused person; that is to say, it is desirable not only that justice should be done but that it should be manifest to all the world that justice is being done—Kunja Sahu, 36 Cr.L.J. 1266, 157 I.C. 758, 1 B.R. 811, 8 R.P. 161, 16 P.L.T. 587; Lal Bahadur Raut v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 527 (529), 175 I.C. 110, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 238, 10 R.P. 581, 4 B.R. 533. In a criminal case, it is not enough that justice is done but what is more important, the parties must feel that justice has been done. Where the accused's apprehensions, however foolish, appear to be real and genuine and he has moved for transfer at the earliest opportunity and no prejudice is likely to be caused to the complainant, the case should be transferred to another Magistrate for trial—Balaji Bari v. Punabai, 37 Cr.L.J. 855, 163 I.C. 677, 18 N.L.J. 293.

When a transfer is asked for, it is not sufficient merely to allege that the applicant would not get an impartial trial, but he must place before the Courts the facts which give rise to this belief in his mind—Amar Singh v. Sadhu Singh, 6 Lah. 396, 26 Cr.L.J. 853, 86 I.C. 709, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 361, 7 Lah.L.J. 241.

When sufficient grounds are made out for a transfer, the High Court is bound to act under this section. It is precluded from considering the possible effect which the transfer may have on the reputation or authority of the Magistrate concerned—Narain v. Howrah Municipality, 10 C.W.N. 441, 3 Cr.L.J. 379. One of the most important duties of the High Court is to create and maintain confidence in the administration of justice, and this can be done by giving to every citizen an assurance that so far as practicable he will never be forced to undergo a trial by a Judge or Magistrate, when he has reasonable apprehension that a fair and impartial trial cannot be obtained from that Judge or Magistrate—Mahomed Shah, 1 S.L.R. 8, 9 Cr.L.J. 251 (253). In transferring a case from one Magistrate to another, the High Court ought not to be guided by the impressions produced in its own mind as to the impartiality of the Magistrate, but must look to the effect likely to be produced in the minds of the parties and their witnesses by the selection of a Magistrate whose personal antecedents or circumstances have, however, unavoidably connected him with either one party or the other—Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179 (183).

If the duty of the Magistrate not only to conduct the case impartially, but also to conduct himself in such a manner that the parties may have absolute confidence in him that only full justice will be dealt out to them. If the Magistrate, though not actually biased, still conducts himself in such a manner and utters such words as to impair the confidence of any of the parties, then there is good ground for the transfer of the case from his file to that of some other Magistrate—Bhairab Chandra, 25 Cal. 727; Lalit Mohan v. Surya Kanta, 28 Cal. 709 (718), 5 C.W.N. 749; Muhammad Akbar, 47 All. 288, 23 A.L.J. 133; Sikandar Lal, 10 Lah. 778, 30 Cr.L.J. 129; Vellu Thevar, 10 Rang. 180, 1932 Cr.C. 472 (473), Ind Rul 1932 Rang. 152, 137 I.C. 675, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 90, 33 Cr.L.J. 550; Samuel, 35 Cr.L.J. 411, 147 I.C. 289, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 17, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 39, 1934 Cr.C. 152; M. De Carmo Lobo v. G. C. Bhattacharjee, 38 Cr.L.J. 882, 170 I.C. 270, 10 R.R. 71, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 272. Judicial officers should be careful to avoid the opportunity of having imputations made against them. If a Magistrate offers a seat on the dais to a gentleman not necessarily having any connection with the case, while he is hearing it, receives visits from the complainant and the defendant during the hearing of the proceedings, thereby laying himself open to an imputation, and accepts a lift in the complainant's car and sits in with the complainant's brother, it is advisable to transfer the hearing of the case—Ganpat v. Kashalendra, 3 O.W.N. 245, 13 O.L.J. 644, 27 Cr.L.J. 498. Magistrates should not fail to remember that it is their duty no less to preserve an outward appearance of impartiality than to maintain the internal freedom from bias, which is incumbent on all judicial officers, and that if they allow their executive zeal to appear to outturn their judicial discretion, their action is certain to induce the party to make an application to the High Court for transfer—Mahomed Shah, 1 S.L.R. 8, 9 Cr.L.J. 251 (253). "The trial of a case should be in atmosphere which does not create even a suspicion that there has been or is likely to be an improper interference with the course of justice. It is not merely of some importance but of fundamental importance that justice should not only be done but should manifestly be seen to be done"—per Lord Hewart, C.J., in R. v. Sussex Justices, Ex parte McCarthy, [1921] 1 K.B. 256; Muzzaffar Khan v. Ahmad Khan, 36 Cr.L.J. 192, 152 I.C. 896, 35 P.L.R. 874, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 541, 1934 Cr.C. 820; Hemanta Kumar v. Nanda Kumar, 41 C.W.N. 188 (190), A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 54, 64 C.L.J. 532. It cannot be impressed too strongly on all judicial officers that they should deal at arm's length with persons engaged or interested in cases pending before them and should so conduct themselves as not to allow an impression to be created that they are on terms of undue familiarity with one of them—Muzzaffar Khan v. Ahmad Khan, supra.

What is a reasonable apprehension should be decided according to the incidents of the case and in reference to the special circumstances. It is difficult to lay down any hard and fast rule under which a transfer should be made, for the circumstances in one case might differ from those of the other—Kali Churn, 33 Cal. 1183; Benode Behari, 5 P.L.T. 63, 25 Cr.L.J. 590; Rajani Kanta, 36 Cal. 904; Rekha Ahir, 1 P.L.T. 494, 56 I.C. 664. It is not sufficient if the accused merely alleges that a fair and impartial trial cannot be had. He should also place before the Court the facts and circumstances from which he is led to entertain such belief, and if these will reasonably give rise to that belief, a transfer will be made—Sant Bakhsh, 10 O.C. 165, 6 Cr.L.J. 254 (256); Aligullah, 1917 P.W.R. 13, 18 Cr.L.J. 719. Where the accused honestly entertained an apprehension, the case should be transferred, specially where the trial had not yet commenced, as no administrative inconvenience would be caused by such transfer but the accused could not be permitted to choose their own Court—Abdul Hakim, 145 I.C. 524, 34 Cr.L.J. 1025, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 597, 1933 Cr.C. 1360; Deo Dutt Bharati, 35 Cr.L.J. 1483 (1485), 151 I.C. 1003, 11 O.W.N. 1193, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 452, 1934 Cr.C. 1311. The allegation by the accused that he distrusts the tribunal and that he believes that he will not get a fair trial, must be examined and found true before it can be accepted; otherwise the accused person has only to say that he distrusts the Magistrate in order to get the case transferred, and he will go on doing so indefinitely—Abdulla, 22 N.L.R. 99, 27 Cr.L.J. 835. It is not every kind of apprehension that will entitle an accused person to get a transfer of the case; the apprehension of the accused must be shown to be reasonable—Rekha Ahir, supra; Pulin v. Asutosh, 39 C.L.J. 330, 25 Cr.L.J. 944, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 981; Narain Chandra v. Howrah Municipality, 10 C.W.N. 441, 3 Cr.L.J. 379. The transfer of a criminal case should not be necessarily ordered simply because an accused person thinks that he would not get an impartial trial, but the real question to be considered is whether on the facts disclosed in the application for transfer, there arises a reasonable inference that the Magistrate who is seized of the case may be prejudiced willingly or unwillingly against the accused—Sumeshwar, 12 A.L.J. 33, 14 Cr.L.J. 666; Jagan, 36 All. 239 (243). Although it may be the case that where an applicant has a reasonable apprehension that the mind of the trial Magistrate is biased against him, the High Court will order a transfer, although in fact it might appear that so far as the Magistrate is concerned, there is no real ground for supposing that the applicant would not get a fair and impartial trial—the reason being that the existence of such an apprehension might militate against the applicant's being able to defend himself to the best advantage, yet before such an order will be made, the High Court must be convinced that the apprehension is reasonable and bona fide—Suppaya Chettyar v. Karuppaya Pillay, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 528 (530). What is a reasonable apprehension must, of course, depend on the degree of intelligence of the accused—Ahmad Din, 81 I.C. 126, - Lah. Cas. 8, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 101, 25 Cr.L.J. 638; Sardari, 3 Lah. 443, 24 Cr.L.J. 286; Machal v. Matru, 10 N.L.R. 15, 15 Cr.L.J. 196 (197). The possibility or probability of his entertaining a reasonable apprehension must also be determined from the circumstances which might give rise to such apprehension and from the conduct of the accused, after taking into consideration the accused's position in life, his conduct and behaviour, his character, social status and mental development—Fasiuddin, 30 Cr.L.J. 728 (731), 117 I.C. 213, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 172, Ind. Rul. 1929 Nag. 197. Where there have been a good many irregularities in the trial which are calculated to prejudice the accused, the accused has good reason for thinking that the Magistrate is prejudicial against them and it is unnecessary to find that he is in fact prejudiced—Durga Das, 34 Cr.L.J. 900, 145 I.C. 173, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 914, 1933 Cr.C. 1375. Where there is no reason to suppose that the trial Magistrate has any real bias against the petitioner but the circumstances of the case are such that the petitioner is bound to entertain a reasonable apprehension in his mind that he will not get a fair trial in the Court of the Magistrate, the case should be transferred to some other Magistrate—Allah Ditta, 35 Cr.L.J. 1380, 151 I.C. 669, 35 P.L.R. 702. Where the attitude and orders of the Magistrate have created a reasonable apprehension in the minds of the accused that they would not get a fair and impartial trial at his hands, ends of justice require that the case should be transferred from his file—Lal Bahadur Raut v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 527 (529), 175 I.C. 110, 4 B.R. 533, 10 R.P. 581, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 238. In determining whether an application is reasonable, it is the duty of the High Court to place itself in the position of the accused and to consider the facts and circumstances attending his position. Abstract reasonableness ought not to be the standard—Kali Churn, 33 Cal. 1183; Gayitri Prosunno, 15 Cal. 455; Kishori Gir v. Ram Narayan, 8 C.W.N. 77; Surat Lall, 29 Cal. 211, 6 C.W.N. 251; Pulin v. Ashutosh, 39 C.L.J. 330, 25 Cr.L.J. 944; Tofa Sahu, 34 Cr.L.J. 1024, 145 I.C. 521, 6 R.P. 189. The important point is the fact which is then created in the mind of the accused—Vellachami v. Murugappa, 34 Cr.L.J. 832, 144 I.C. 677, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 89, 1933 Cr.C. 573. The Nagpur Court, however, goes further and holds that if an accused person does in fact believe that he will not have a fair and impartial trial in a certain tribunal, it is inexpedient that he should be tried by it, however high the certainty of impartiality of that tribunal may be in the mind of all right-thinking men. That the belief is entirely wrong and does not do him any credit is immaterial. The question is not whether the belief is reasonable or unreasonable, but whether it exists or not, though the only way of deciding whether it exists or not is to see whether it might reasonably be expected to exist in a person of the standard of intelligence or honesty common in the class to which the accused belongs—Abdulla, 22 N.L.R. 99, 27 Cr.L.J. 835; Machal v. Matra, supra. What the Court has to consider is not merely the question whether there has been any real bias in the mind of the presiding Judge against the applicant, but also the further question whether incidents may not have happened which, though they may be susceptible of explanation and may have happened without there being any real bias in the mind of the Judge, are nevertheless such as are calculated to create in the mind of the applicant a justifiable apprehension that he would not have an impartial trial—Amar Singh v. Sadhu Singh, 6 Lah. 396; Hemanta Kumar v. Nanda Kumar, 41 C.W.N. 188 (190), A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 64, 64 C.L.J. 532, 167 I.C. 251, 38 Cr.L.J. 344, 9 R.C. 660. In a Sind case it is laid down that the apprehension to be established must be an apprehension reasonable in the opinion of the Court, and not such apprehension as would appear reasonable in the mind of the accused. The Court itself should be satisfied on that point, and the real test is not what the accused may reasonably have been led to think about it—Wali Mahomed, A.I.R. 1917 Sind 45, 18 Cr.L.J. 644, 10 S.L.R. 183; followed in Abdullah, 26 S.L.R. 255, 33 Cr.L.J. 908 (911), 139 I.C. 791, Ind. Rul. 1932 Sind 151, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 17, 1933 Cr.C. 17; Sugnomal v. Phatandas, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 237 (239), 38 Cr.L.J. 133, 166 I.C. 83. But this would be putting a wrong construction on the section. For, it is not so much the mind of the Magistrate that determines the question, but it is the impression that is reasonably created in the mind of the accused by the conduct of the Magistrate—Sikandar Lal, 10 Lah. 778, 30 Cr.L.J. 129 (131). It has been observed in an oft quoted English case, that the law of transfer of cases is based not so much upon the motives which might be supposed to bias the Judge as upon the susceptibilities of the litigant parties. One important object at all events is to clear away everything which might engender suspicion and distrust of the tribunal and so to promote the feeling of confidence in the administration of justice which is so essential to social order and security—Serjeant v. Dale, 2 Q.B.D. 558 (567); Satindra Nath Sen, 1929 Cr.C. 597 (600), A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 809; Awadh Singh v. Puran, 2 P.L.T. 198, 22 Cr.L.J. 726, A.I.R. 1921 Pat. 413; Machal v. Matru, 10 N.L.R. 15, 15 Cr.L.J. 196; Deo Dutt Bharati, supra; Ali Reza Beg, 37 Cr.L.J. 386, 160 I.C. 965, O.W.N. 254.

Where good grounds are made out for a transfer, the application ought not to be refused merely because the case had reached an advanced stage or that the transfer might entail expenses and trouble—Sikander Lal, 10 Lah. 778, 30 Cr.L.J. 129. But see Fakra v. Goma, 37 Cr.L.J. 861, 163 I.C. 694, 18 N.L.J. 279 in Note 1382.

The transfer of a case from one Court to another is not a thing lightly to be done. If a Magistrate transfers a case from one Court to another at his whim and caprice, it would seriously interfere with the working of the Courts and would shake the confidence of the public in those Courts—Sugnomal v. Phatandas, A.I.R. 1936 Snd 237 (240), 38 Cr.L.J. 133, 166 I.C. 83.

1372. Instances of reasonable apprehension:—When the District Magistrate and the Sessions Judge expressed an opinion that an impartial jury could not be obtained if the case was tried in the district, it was held that the expression of such belief was sufficient to shake the confidence of the public and of the parties in the fairness and impartiality of the jury, and to create in their minds a reasonable apprehension that a fair and impartial trial could not be had if the case was tried there, and therefore an order for transfer was expedient for the ends of justice—Bhairab Chandra, 25 Cal. 727. Where there is material in the affidavits on the record showing that there is an atmosphere in a district which either is unfavourable to the accused or about which there are reasonable apprehensions in his mind, it is desirable in the interests of justice to transfer the case for trial to some other district—Amrit Lal, 32 Cr.L.J. 1188 (1190), 134 I.C. 519, 32 P.L.R. 471, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 540, 1931 Cr.C. 780, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 951. See also Gurdial, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 654. When in a case of petty theft, the Magistrate issued non-bailable warrants against the accused in the first instance, and then exacted a very heavy bail from them, there was a sufficient ground for apprehension that a trial could not be had from him, and therefore a transfer should be directed—Girish Chandra v. Chandramoni, 8 C.W.N. 589. Where a Magistrate before disposing of a bail application consulted the District Magistrate, and refused the application as advised by the latter, held that though the subordinate Magistrate in consulting the District Magistrate and the latter in advising him in the matter of the bail might have acted with the best of intentions, still it cannot be denied that such action on their part was wholly unjustified, and was certainly calculated to raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused—Chiranjil Lal, 9 Lah. 537, 29 Cr.L.J. 815. Where the Magistrate refused to grant bail to some of the accused person after the High Court had granted bail to those who had applied to that Court, held that this action of the Magistrates disclosed a certain amount of bias against the accused—Mohandas Joyramdas, 20 S.L.R. 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 1333 (1335). Where the application for bail is refused unlawfully and the trial of the case is deliberately postponed by the granting of unnecessarily lengthy adjournments, there is sufficient reason for the transfer of the case to the Court of some other Magistrate—M. A. Azeez v. The King, 41 Cr.L.J. 252, 186 I.C. 147, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 26. Where the trial Magistrate for erroneous reason twice refused to accept the bail-bond and unnecessarily prolonged the proceedings until the Sessions Judge accepted the same bail-bonds and ordered their release, held that though there was no reason to suppose that the Magistrate had any real bias in his mind against the accused, there could be no doubt that the procedure adopted by him was such as was likely to raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that they should not have a fair trial in his Court—Natha Singh, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 440, 33 P.L.R. 416, 1932 Cr.C. 519, 34 Cr.L.J. 89, 141 I.C. 43. Where a Magistrate rejected the various sureties for appearance offered by the applicant and demanded an enhanced security from him, the circumstances are such as might reasonably cause an apprehension in the mind of an accused person and the case should be transferred—Sukhai, 36 Cr.L.J. 1285, 157 I.C. 1048, A.I.R. 1935 All. 517, 1935 Cr.C. 543. See also Brij Mohan Pande, 38 Cr.L.J. 105, 165 I.C. 873, 1936 O.W.N. 1232, 9 R.O. 266, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 79, 1936 O.L.R. 691. Where the Magistrate wrongly refuses to give certified copies of the statement of a prosecution witness and the order of the District Magistrate dismissing an application for transfer, the accused have a reasonable apprehension that they may not receive a fair trial in his Court and the case should be transferred—Gurdas Ram v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 283, 189 I.C. 605, 41 Cr.L.J. 756, 42 P.L.R. 192. Where in a summons case the Magistrate had issued a warrant without any apparent reason, and there was reason to believe that in other proceedings connected with the case the Magistrate had formed an opinion unfavourable to the accused, there ought to be a transfer of the case—Wilson, 18 Cal. 247. See also Nanjandiah, 1933 M.W.N. 1427 and Badaruddin v. Balocho, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 342, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 110. Where the complainants obtained an order of the High Court staying further proceedings, and on the date fixed for hearing, one of the complainants appeared before the Magistrate and apprised him of that order, but the Magistrate instead of staying the proceedings issued a warrant for the arrest of the complainant who had not appeared, held that this action on the part of the Magistrate was a sufficient ground for transfer of the case from his file—Fazal Ahmed v. Abdullah, 26 P.L.R. 701, 27 Cr.L.J. 104, 91 I.C. 536, 7 L.L.J. 571, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 151. Where the Magistrate makes inordinate delay in examining the complainant, or awaits the consideration of the evidence in another case with which the accused has no concern, in order to decide whether any action should be taken upon the complaint, these may give rise to a reasonable apprehension that a fair trial cannot be had, and the case should be transferred—Rekha Ahir, 1 P.L.T. 494, 21 Cr.L.J. 504, 56 I.C. 664. See also Tyab Ali v. Hussainali, in Note 1378. Where the complainant made a verbal statement in chambers before the District Magistrate who at once arrested the accused before making any inquiry, and there was a likelihood of the Magistrates of the district figuring as witnesses in the case, held that the case should be transferred to a different district altogether—Din Dayal, 1 P.L.T. 522, 21 Cr.L.J. 795, 58 I.C. 523. A Court of Justice is not justified in exercising any pressure upon an accused person before it with the object of coercing him to produce persons who are fugitives from justice. When such steps were taken by a Magistrate in order to secure the attendance of the absconding co-accused, he should not be permitted to go on with the trial of the case, however open his mind may be—Fakir Mohammad, 32 Cr.L.J. 344, 129 I.C. 485, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 953, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 197, 1930 Cr.C. 1049. Where after the application of the accused for adjournment of the case to enable them to move the High Court for transfer, the Magistrate raised the amount of bail of some of the accused from Rs. 100 to Rs. 250, and cancelled the bail-bonds of others, it was held that the action of the Magistrate might be absolutely bona fide, but it was sufficient to create a reasonable apprehension in the minds of the accused that they would not have a fair trial before him—Tittu Sahu, 1 P.L.T. 652, 21 Cr.L.J. 530, 57 I.C. 454. See also Takaya Ram, 32 P.L.R. 96, 1930 Cr.C. 1054 (1055), 32 Cr.L.J. 569, 130 I.C. 501, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 958; Sitla Prasad, 35 Cr.L.J. 292, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 480, 147 I.C. 96, 1933 Cr.C. 1397, 10 O.W.N. 906; Durgadas, 34 Cr.L.J. 900, 6 R.O. 218, 145 I.C. 173, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 914, 1933 Cr.C. 1375 and Mt. Lalan v. Emp., A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 20, 38 Cr.L.J. 387, 167 I.C. 175, 9 R.Pesh. 82. Where the Magistrate exhibits haste in recording the statement of an accused person before all the evidence for the prosecution is concluded, this fact may create an apprehension in the mind of the accused that he will not get a fair trial, and entitles him to a transfer of the case—Abdul Rab v. Azmat Ali, 18 A.L.J. 1145, 59 I.C.

876. Where in a proceeding under sec. 107, the persons against whom the proceeding was taken were appointed special constables, it might arouse a reasonable apprehension that they would not have a fair and impartial trial, and a transfer ought to be allowed—Bibi Kulsum v. Umatul, 4 Cr.L.J. 455, 11 C.W.N. 121; Gopinath Paryah, 10 C.W.N. 82, 3 Cr.L.J. 169. Where it was alleged by the accused that the District Magistrate had cancelled his license for arms and refused to see him when he called to pay his respects, it was held that these incidents were likely to lead the accused to believe that the District Magistrate was displeased with him and there was a reasonable apprehension of his not having a fair trial from the Magistrate—Ram Krishna, 35 All. 5, 17 I.C. 567, 10 A.L.J. 357, 13 Cr.L.J. 823. Where the trying Magistrate stopped the cross-examination of the complainant in a case because in his view the complainant had been fully cross-examined for one hour, it was held that the act of the Magistrate was indiscreet and might reasonably lead the accused to believe that they would not get a fair trial at his hand. The principle to be kept in view by Magistrates is that they should not increase the grave anxiety of the accused—Yusuf v. Bupi Lal, 20 Cr.L.J. 559 (Pat.), 51 I.C. 347. But see Note 1379. Where there was an order of the Superintendent of Police that the accused was to be allowed facilities for instructing legal advisers only on application to him, it was held that there might be a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that his movements are unduly restricted by that order, and the High Court therefore allowed a transfer of the case to another place—Hanikar, 23 C.W.N. 481, 20 Cr.L.J. 675; Hanikar Roy, 46 Cal. 807 (815) (Footnote), 23 C.W.N. 479. Where the Magistrate was entirely acting on Police reports and under the influence of the Police officials of the district and accepted all the allegations of the Court Prosecuting Officer without any material to support them, these allegations taken in conjunction with the conduct of the Magistrate in cancelling the bail and thereafter in calling upon the applicants to furnish security while they were applying to the High Court for transfer, would undoubtedly raise apprehension in the minds of the applicants that they would not get a fair and impartial trial in his Court—Maung Saw Hlaing, 34 Cr.L.J. 1195, 146 I.C. 23, A.I.R. 1933 Rang. 165, 1933 Cr.C. 764. Where a Magistrate, during the course of the trial, received a letter from the witness for the defence, which was calculated to create an apprehension in the mind of the petitioner that the witness was a friend of the Magistrate; where the witnesses for the petitioner were treated in a manner different from that in which the witnesses of the opposite party were treated; and where the Magistrate while complying with the prayer for postponement when the petitioner wanted to move for transfer to another Court, passed an illegal order imposing condition when he had no discretion but to postpone; held that a strong ground was made out for transfer—Dayawanti v. Bitanand, 119 I.C. 327, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 702, Ind. Cr.L.J. 1048. Where the proceedings of the warrant against the accused's wife, who was arraigned the case from the Magistrate—Hari Kishen v. Polo Ram, 27 P.L.R. 604, 28 Cr.L.J. 225 (226). Where the Magistrate refused to dispense with the personal appearance of pardanashin ladies belonging to respectable families, and repeatedly insisted on their appearance in Court, the High Court transferred the case from that Magistrate—Raj Rajeswar, 17 C.W.N. 1248, 15 Cr.L.J. 281 (283). Where a complaint of murder had been preferred against the accused before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, and during the pendency of the complaint, the Deputy Commissioner of the District made a speech in the presence of all the Magistrates including the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, that the accused was innocent and that baseless charges had been imputed from malicious motives, held that under the circumstances, the apprehension on the part of the complainant that he would not get justice at the hands of the Magistrate was reasonable, and that there was a sufficient ground for transfer—sent for and detained by the Magistrate so as to delay the decision in the civil suit, held that this was a good ground for apprehension that the accused would not get a fair trial from the Magistrate—Faqir Singh, 10 Lah. 223, 29 Cr.L.J. 769 (770). An examination of the accused by the Magistrate under sec. 342 amounting practically to a lengthy cross-examination by a series of searching questions is injudicious, and may raise an apprehension in the mind of the accused about the fairness of the trial and is a valid ground for transfer—Faqir Singh, supra. Where the Magistrate based his examination of an accused on detailed instructions given by the prosecuting Counsel and, during such examination, made use of a document which he obtained from the same Counsel and the record of evidence contained a good deal of material which he should not have done, it was expedient for the ends of justice to direct a transfer of the case—Krishna Murari-lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 1172, 146 I.C. 149, 16 N.L.J. 158, 1933 Cr.C. 1003, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 269. Where the Magistrate sent for a party in a case pending before him, and pressed upon him the desirability of a compromise, held that such a course was likely to raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the party that the Magistrate was showing favour to the other side, and the case should be transferred to some other Magistrate—Rahim Bakshsh v. Dula, 32 P.L.R. 358, 1931 Cr.C. 96, 32 Cr.L.J. 537, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 32, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 302; Gaya Charan v. Kunwar Bahadur, 25 Cr.L.J. 570, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 179. See Note 1377. Where a subordinate Magistrate before whom a case was pending was written to and influenced by the District Magistrate regarding an order to be passed in the case (e.g., where the trying Magistrate at first granted bail but afterwards cancelled the bail under the order or influence of the District Magistrate), held that the action of both the Magistrates, specially of the District Magistrate was to be highly condemned, and the case should be transferred to another District—Vellu Thevar, 10 Rang. 180, 1932 Cr.C. 472 (474), Ind. Rul. 1932 Rang. 152, 137 I.C. 675, 33 Cr.L.J. 550, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 90. Where a Magistrate allowed the judicial record of a pending case to be removed from the Court and handed over to a person who was to be examined as a witness in the case, held that this was a sufficient ground for transfer—Brahmo Dutt, 33 Cr.L.J. 223, 136 I.C. 9, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 185, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 294, 33 P.L.R. 438, 1932 Cr.C. 442. The Lahore High Court transferred a case in which the trying Magistrate admitted to have examined some of the prosecution witnesses after 9 P.M. in contravention of the directions contained in the High Court Circular—Shamshad Ali Khan v. Mohommad Amin Khan, 34 Cr.L.J. 383, 142 I.C. 696, 33 P.L.R. 1032, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 96, 1933 Cr.C. 211, 14 Lah. 201, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 245. Where the Magistrate fixed 11-30 A.M. to 5 P.M. and again from 5-30 to 10 P.M. for the hearing of the case although the defence lawyers, who were Muhammadans, protested owing to Ramzan and, by an earlier order, refused to adjourn the case for a reasonable opportunity of engaging and instructing another lawyer on the ground of illness of the lawyer who had conducted the cross-examination for the accused on the previous day and was to continue it, there are sufficient grounds for an order of transfer—Lal Bahadur Raul v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 527, 175 I.C. 110, 4 B.R. 533, 10 R.P. 581, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 238.

Where the trying Magistrate issued summons to the defence witnesses including the District Magistrate and subsequently modified his previous order of summoning the defence witnesses, unknown to the applicant and his Counsel, after some correspondence between himself and the District Magistrate, which was not kept on the record but was destroyed, the High Court directed the trying Magistrate to commit the applicant to take his trial before the Court of Session on the charges already framed under cl. (1) (iv) of this section—Samuel, 35 Cr.L.J. 411, 147 I.C. 289, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 17, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 39, 1934 Cr.C. 152.

For a transfer of a case on the ground of bias on the part of the Magistrate it is not necessary for an accused person to prove actual bias; it is sufficient to show circumstances which may raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of an accused person that he will not have a fair and impartial trial, although the circumstances may be susceptible of explanation and may have happened without any real bias in the mind of the Magistrate—Wilson, 18 Cal. 247; DuPeyon v. Driver, 23 Cal. 495; Bhairab Chandra, 25 Cal. 727; Lolit v. Surya, 28 Cal. 709 (719); Baktu v. Kali, 28 Cal. 297; Kali Churn, e a. 1183; Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179; Rang Bahadur v. Kariman, 2 P.L.T. 297, 63 I.C. 523; Dayal, 1 P.L.T. 522, 58 I.C. 523; Fazand v. Hanuman, 19 All. 64; Amar

Singh v. Sodhu Singh, 6 Lah. 396, 26 Cr.L.J. 853; Faqir Singh, 10 Lah. 223, 29 Cr.L.J. 769 (771); Sikandar, 10 Lah. 778, 30 Cr.L.J. 129; In re Vakils, 26 A.L.J. 1250, 29 Cr.L.J. 750 (752); Amrit Lal, 32 Cr.L.J. 1188 (1190), 134 I.C. 519, 32 P.L.R. 471, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 540, 1931 Cr.C. 780, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 951; Ali Raza Beg, 37 Cr.L.J. 386, 160 I.C. 965, 1936 O.W.N. 254. The question whether sufficient grounds are made out for a transfer is often a matter of opinion and depends on inferences to be drawn from facts which have happened. If the application for transfer is made in good faith, the mere fact that it turns out subsequently that there are not sufficient grounds of transfer would not amount to casting an aspersion on the Magistrate personally so as to lead to inference that there was misconduct on the part of the legal practitioners (under the Legal Practitioners' Act) who were responsible for the application—In re Vakils, supra.

Where the Magistrate orders the payment of subsistence allowances for the witnesses by the accused when he applies for an adjournment to move the High Court for transfer, this in itself is sufficient to raise an apprehension in the mind of the accused that he will not get a fair and impartial trial in the Court of the Magistrate and on this ground alone the case should be transferred—Lay Tin Ngar v. Emp, 38 Cr.L.J. 963, 170 I.C. 841, 10 R.R. 105, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 311.

Where in an anonymous letter it is stated that some Civil and Police Officers are in the pay of the accused, anybody placed in the position of the accused will apprehend that the Civil Officers knowing that some allegation has been made against them will try to clear their character by convicting him and this is an apprehension which it is reasonable to hold will be raised in the mind of the accused. The case should be transferred on this ground—Lay Tin Ngar v. Emp, supra.

Where the Sessions Judge declined to allow the pleaders for the defence to see the records of statements of prosecution witnesses to a Magistrate under the provisions of sec. 164, Cr. P. C., or to cross-examine the witnesses thereon, refused to permit reference in cross-examination to the contents of the charge-sheet and disallowed a material question in the course of the cross-examination of a prosecution witness, there was in the minds of the accused or their legal advisers a reasonable apprehension that they might not have a fair and impartial trial in his Court and hence the case should be transferred—Brahmayya v. The King, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 442 (446), 179 I.C. 783, 11 R.R. 347, 40 Cr.L.J. 265.

Where the Magistrate has displayed far too much haste in the trial of the case and has wrongly failed to give the accused opportunity to engage such legal assistance as he thought proper, the conduct of the Magistrate, although not inspired by any unfair motives, is such as to fill the mind of the accused with an apprehension that he will not secure a fair and impartial trial before him and the accused therefore can get his case transferred to another Magistrate—U Po Mya v. The King, 39 Cr.L.J. 576, 175 I.C. 350, 10 R.R. 483, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 198.

Where the trying Magistrate refuses to supply a copy of the order of the District Magistrate under sec. 528, Cr. P. C., on the ground that the District Magistrate's sanction is necessary and also wrongly refuses to give a certified copy of the statement of a prosecution witness, the party has a reasonable apprehension from all that has happened that he may not receive a fair trial in the Court of the trying Magistrate and the case should be transferred—Gurdas Ram v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 756 (757), 189 I.C. 605, A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 283, 42 P.L.R. 192.

Although each of the circumstances alleged may not by itself be sufficient to show that there was a bias on the part of the Magistrate, a transfer would nevertheless be justified, where having regard to all the circumstances taken together, the accused might reasonably apprehend that he would not have a fair trial—Nityanand Kanarar, 2 Cr.L.J. 339, 9 C.W.N. 619; Titu Sahu, 1 P.L.T. 652, 57 I.C. 454; Din Dayal, 1 P.L.T. 522, 58 I.C. 523.

1373. Expression of opinion or remarks:—A Magistrate who has already formed a decided opinion about the case before him and has expressed a strong opinion as to the guilt of the accused, is precluded from trying the case and a transfer ought to be directed—Harischandra, 10 Bom.L.R. 201, 7 Cr.L.J. 194; Wahid Ali, 32 All 642 (643), 6 I.C. 874, 7 A.L.J. 813; Sartaj Singh, 22 A.L.J. 430, 26 Cr.L.J. 139; Grish Chunder, 20 Cal. 857; Wilson, 18 Cal. 247; Alexander v. Connor, 20 C.W.N. 698, 17 Cr.L.J. 193; Sitanath, 8 C.W.N. 641; Maung Po Thit v. Maung Pyu, 8 Rang 654, 32 Cr.L.J. 938, 132 I.C. 556, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 87, Ind. Rul. 1931 Rang. 188, 1931 Cr.C. 375; Rang Bahadur v. Kariman, 2 P.L.T. 297, 63 I.C. 868; In re Virji, 6 Bom.L.R. 856; Rehmani, 78 P.L.R. 1916; Motumal v. Md. Ramzan, 19 S.L.R. 117, 27 Cr.L.J. 802. Where a case was sent to a Magistrate for disposal with a remark by the District Magistrate that it was quite a clear case and the defence was ridiculous, it was a good ground for transfer of the case to another district—Muhammad Yakub, 2 O.W.N. 688, 26 Cr.L.J. 1525. A transfer was ordered where in the course of the examination of the prosecution witnesses, the Magistrate made certain observations which went to show that he was not favourable to the prosecution—Shcodhari v. Jhingur, 7 P.L.T. 49, 26 Cr.L.J. 1249. Where a Magistrate made certain premature and ill-advised remarks regarding the evidence of certain defence witnesses, and held out threats to the accused regarding the sentence and the effect of his transfer application, held that the case was a fit one for transfer—Sikandar Lal, 10 Lah. 778, 30 Cr.L.J. 129 (131). Where a Magistrate had already formed a very strong opinion and passed strong remarks on the conduct of the Sub-Inspector, the case should be transferred from his Court—Sartaj Singh, 22 A.L.J. 430, 26 Cr.L.J. 139 (140). A Magistrate in recording the evidence of a witness made a note regarding the demeanour of the witness (sec. 363) to the effect that the witness faltered and that from his demeanour it appeared that he had not told the truth; held that as the witness was altogether disbelieved by the Magistrate, this was a sufficient ground for transfer of the case to some other Magistrate—Golam Bari v. Yar Ali, 29 C.W.N. 316, 26 Cr.L.J. 852. But where the Magistrate has noted some observations as regards the demeanour of the witness which go against his credibility, this fact by itself is not sufficient to show that there will be no impartial or fair trial—Abdul Naseer v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 33, 171 I.C. 934, A.I.R. 1937 All. 664, 1937 A.L.J. 845, 10 R.A. 349, 1937 A.L.R. 919, 1937 A.Cr.C. 117, 1937 A.W.R. (H.C.) 729. Where a Magistrate, in recording the examination of the accused under sec. 364, added a note which amounted to an expression of opinion that he had already made up his mind as to the value of the defence, held that this was a good ground for transfer—Faqir Singh, 10 Lah. 233, 29 Cr.L.J. 769 (771). Where a Magistrate has by reason of an order passed in the course of the proceedings used words which indicate that before the case is finished and the accused has been heard in his defence, the Magistrate had found the charge against him to be established, it may reasonably give just ground for apprehension in the mind of the accused and it is only proper in the circumstances that the case should be transferred—Bagomal, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 223, 37 Cr.L.J. 152, 159 I.C. 687, 1935 Cr.C. 1312.

Expression of opinion in the same case:—Where the Sessions Judge set aside the conviction under sec. 363, I. P. C., and remanded the case for re-trial on the ground that there was a prima facie case against the accused persons under sec. 366 or 366A, I. P. C., it is expedient, in the interests of justice, that the appeal from conviction under sec. 366A, I. P. C., on re-trial, be heard by the Court of some other Sessions Judge—Allah Bakhsh v. Emp.; A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 652, 39 P.L.R. 78, 171 I.C. 791, 39 Cr.L.J. 28, 10 R.L. 231.

Expression of opinion in a connected or counter case:—The fact that a Magistrate is trying or has tried one case against an accused person is no reason why he should not try any subsequent case against the same person, especially when no allegation of prejudice or unfair treatment has been made against him—Sadasheo, 34 Cr.L.J. 1035, 145 I.C. 445, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 201, 1933 Cr.C. 97, 29 N.L.R. 338. A Judge is not disqualified from trying a case of rioting merely because he has decided a counter-case of rioting and expressed an opinion. But the Judge should be careful to confine himself in the trial to the evidence before him and should not let his mind be influenced by the evidence given in the former case—Asimaddi v. Govinda, 1 C.W.N. 426. So also, the mere fact that in another analogous case on other evidence the Judge has come to a particular conclusion is not in itself a sufficient ground of transfer of the present case—Ramyad Singh, 11 P.L.T. 248, 1930 Cr.C. 709 (following Rajani Kanta, 36 Cal 904). Judges are presumed to be upright men who will approach each case from the point of view of that case alone and not permit their minds to be affected in any way by anything that has gone before that case. The mere fact that the Judge, in a former proceeding arising out of a counter case to the one now coming before him, expressed certain views upon the evidence in the former case as to which of the two versions is correct, is not a reasonable ground of apprehension that the accused will not have a fair trial—Amrit Mandal, 1 P.L.J. 399, 18 Cr.L.J. 95; Hargobind, 33 All. 583. Interest or bias on the part of the Magistrate is not to be inferred from opinions formed on evidence judicially recorded; otherwise a Magistrate would, after disposing of one of two counter cases, be disqualified from trying the other—Kamil, 1 S.L.R. 37, 9 Cr.L.J. 275; In re Vaddal, 6 Bom.L.R. 1092; Crown v. Methram, 15 IC 804, 5 S.L.R. 264, 13 Cr.L.J. 532; Ghulamali, 36 Cr.L.J. 866, 155 I.C. 994, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 7. The mere fact that the complaint of one party is dismissed and he is apprehensive of a conviction is by itself no good grounds for transfer—Wahidad v. Nizam-ud-din, 111 I.C. 854, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 48, 29 Cr.L.J. 934. But when in a case and a counter case, the Magistrate in discharging the accused in one case expressed a strong opinion on the guilt of the accused in the other case, a transfer of the case pending will be directed—Rangasami, 30 Mad. 233. See also Manla Khan, 140 IC 685, 9 O.W.N. 963, 34 Cr.L.J. 46, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 21, 1933 Cr.C. 159, Ind. Rul. 1933 Oudh 8; Balu, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 458, 36 Cr.L.J. 238, 152 I.C. 1060, 35 P.L.R. 427, 1934 Cr.C. 704. Where in a proceeding it appeared that the Magistrate had expressed his opinion in a very strong language against the petitioner in a connected case, a transfer should be directed—Rehmani, 1916 P.L.R. 78; Viswanath, 27 Cr.L.J. 210, 92 IC 162, A.I.R. 1926 Nag. 98; Chaudhuri Zahiruddin, 11 O.L.J. 556, 26 Cr.L.J. 158.

Where an accused in a particular case was examined as a defence witness in another case before the same Magistrate who, in the course of his judgment in that case, said that in the circumstances it appeared that the accused was dealing in illicit sale of salt, held that although the Magistrate might have honestly intended to confine the remark to the position of the accused as a witness in the other trial without any prejudice to his position, in the trial in which he was an accused, yet it was too plain that a remark of that kind would suffice to raise a reasonable apprehension in the mind of the accused that he was not likely to receive an impartial trial from the Magistrate and that the case should be transferred—Mohamed Isahuck, 37 Cr.L.J. 220, 160 IC 85, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 446, 1935 Cr.C. 1242.

Proceedings for contempt:—Where the Judge has already convicted the accused for contempt of Court, it cannot be said that he cannot be trusted to bring to bear on the facts of the case an impartial mind so far as the accused is concerned. It may be that the Judge erred in taking proceedings for contempt of Court and in convicting the accused for that offence, but the mere conviction of the accused by the Judge does not warrant the transfer of the case from his Court. To hold otherwise would be to concede the privilege to a party to a case to secure the transfer of a case from a particular Court by being unnecessarily offensive and insolent and thus courting proceedings for contempt of Court—Salag Ram v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 416 (420), 167 I.C. 515, 9 R.A. 550, 1937 A.L.R. 201, A.I.R. 1937 All. 171.

Re-trial:—When a case is remanded on appeal it is advisable that it should be sent to some other Magistrate. The position of a Magistrate who had decided against the accused before remand is indeed difficult, since, however fair he may be, in fact, he cannot remove the vague fear in the mind of the accused as to his own attitude and impose confidence in him—Mushrital, 37 Cr.L.J. 459, 161 IC 317, 18 N.L.J. 199. Where it is possible, it is desirable that such a retrial should not be taken by the officer who has already expressed his final opinion upon the matter. It is quite true that an endeavour may be made to keep the mind entirely free from bias, and to ject from it any preconceived ideas which may have been formed in general by what has taken place at the earlier trial. But those are after all counsels of perfection—Mahadev v. Kishun Lal, 3 P.L.T. 147, 72 I.C. 339, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 60, 24 Cr.L.J. 339; Muhammad Kaisar v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 229, 166 I.C. 466, 9 R.P. 299, 3 B.R. 170. Any accused person who has once been convicted by a Magistrate to whom the case is sent back because of errors in procedure has a reasonable apprehension that he is likely to be convicted again by that Magistrate. Prima facie the case ought to be sent to another Magistrate—Kanwar Sam v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 27, 179 I.C. 819, 11 R.L. 640, 41 P.L.R. 213.

1374. Inspection by Magistrate:—The inspection of a locality by the Magistrate acting fairly and judiciously during the inspection is not only not illegal, but under certain circumstances proper for the right understanding of the evidence. The Magistrate does not constitute himself a witness by a mere local inspection, and such inspection is no ground for transferring the case—Harsa Singh, 1901 P.L.R. 89, 1901 P.R. 13. It is not only not objectionable but in many cases highly advisable that a Magistrate trying a criminal case should himself inspect the scene of occurrence in order to understand fully the bearing of the evidence given in Court. But if he does so, he should be careful not to allow any person on either side to say anything to him which might prejudice his mind one way or another. If the Magistrate goes out of his way in making a local inspection and makes the inspection with the complainant without notice to several of the accused and in their absence, the accused may very rightly apply for a transfer under this section—Faquiray Lal, 21 Cr.L.J. 166, 6 O.L.J. 680, 54 I.C. 774; In re Lalji, 19 All 302; Atiar Rai, 39 Cal 476; Bhai Gopal, 1901 P.L.R. 165; Kardan Ullah v. Azmat, 12 C.W.N. 748. Section 539B clearly lays down that if a Magistrate visits the scene of occurrence, he should do so after due notice to the parties. Where the Magistrate visited the place without notice to the parties, made inquiries, and as a result of his inquiry he summoned several persons as witnesses, held that the Magistrate by his action placed himself in the position of a witness to corroborate or contradict the other evidence, and was therefore disqualified from completing the trial of the case—Pakir Muhammad, 4 Rang 106, 27 Cr.L.J. 1084. See also Note 1432 under sec. 556, under heading "Local Inspection."

Magistrate being a witness in the case:—The fact that the Magistrate may be a witness in the case for the defence is a ground of transfer, but in applying to the High Court for a transfer on that ground, it must be shown that the Magistrate will be a necessary and essential witness for the defence—Srilal Chamarla, 19 Cr.L.J. 632, 45 I.C. 680 (Cal.). When in a criminal case the evidence of the Magistrate is found necessary by the defence, it is proper that the case should be transferred to another Magistrate—Abdul Latif, 26 All. 536.

1375. Magistrate having personal knowledge of the case:—If a Magistrate has knowledge in respect of matters which form the subject matter of the proceedings, and he derives such knowledge from outside the Court and not from evidence on the record, the case should be transferred from him—Satindra Nath Sen, 1929 Cr.C. 597 (600), A.I.R. 1929 Cal 809. The mere fact that the Magistrate is unable to deny that he has had an interview with the opposite party in the litigation privately and out of Court and has heard from that party his version of the facts, is sufficient to disqualify him from subsequently trying the case in his magisterial capacity even if there are no reasons for ascribing any prejudice or undue interest in the case to the Magistrate—Pran Nath v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 606, 175 I.C. 520, 40 P.L.R. 157, 10 R.L. 734, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 346. When a Magistrate initiates proceedings under sec. 110 on information within his own knowledge, he is not the proper person to conduct the inquiry under sec. 117; the case must be transferred to some other Magistrate—Alimuddin Howladar, 29 Cal 392; Lolit Mohan v. Surya Kanta, 28 Cal. 709. But in an Allahabad case it has been held that there is nothing to limit the source or the nature of the information on which a Magistrate can act under sec. 110; and therefore the mere fact that the Magistrate has initiated proceedings on information based upon his own personal knowledge is not a ground for transfer—Mithu Khan, 27 All. 172 (173). Where a Magistrate became aware of some of the facts in connection with a case by his taking part, or at any rate by his being present, at a search made by the Police during the investigation, it was expedient that the case should be transferred to the file of some other Magistrate—Gya Singh v. Mahomed Soliman, 5 C.W.N. 864. Where a Magistrate had dealt with the dispute in an informal manner as a private arbitrator, it is desirable that the case should be transferred to another Court, as his previous informal knowledge would necessarily hamper him at every turn—Gobinda Chandra v. Gopal Chandra, 18 Cr.L.J. 150, 14 Cr.L.J. 602.

As a general rule the mere fact that a Magistrate has, in his capacity as a Magistrate, exercised the powers given to him under section 127 (1), Cr. P. C., in relation to a particular disturbance or series of disturbances affords no ground for the transfer from the cognizance of that Magistrate of a case arising out of that disturbance or series of disturbances. If, on the other hand, a Magistrate, in the course of the performance of his duties in relation to any particular disturbance, were to acquire any particular knowledge by his own observation or otherwise which might, in the hearing of any case, tend to embarrass him, it is possible that a transfer, either at the instance of the Magistrate himself or at the instance of the accused person, might in some cases be desirable in the interests of justice—Maung Ba Chien v. The King, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 454 (455), 178 I.C. 942, 40 Cr.L.J. 154, 11 R.R. 287.

1376. Magistrate being master, subordinate, friend or relation of complainant:—The mere fact that the Magistrate is the master of the complainant does not deprive him of his jurisdiction, but in such a case it would generally be expedient for him to refer the complainant to another Magistrate—Basappa, 9 Bom. 172. It is not a ground of transfer that the Magistrate is a subordinate to the officer making the complaint—Wasudeo, 26 Cr.L.J. 1425, 89 I.C. 897, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 433. An application cannot be granted as a matter of course and to agree to transfer a case from a Magistrate's Court merely because his official superior is the complainant, would be to cast a reflection upon the integrity and impartiality of the Magistrate which even an apprehension of an accused person would not justify; because before an application for transfer should succeed there must be some reasonable basis for the apprehension of the accused person—Bagomal v. Noor Nabi Khan, 36 Cr.L.J. 1480, 158 I.C. 809, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 195, 1935 Cr.C. 1060. But it is not inconceivable that a subordinate, prosecuted at the instance of the head of the district, might feel a little nervousness on his trial taking place before a Magistrate who is in immediate subordination to the head of the district. No doubt an apprehension that he would not receive an impartial trial might actually be groundless, but it is not unlikely that a fear might arise in the accused's mind. It is therefore proper for the ends of justice to transfer the case to a Magistrate of the district who is not under the immediate control of the Deputy Commissioner and this can be done by transferring the case to a Civil Judge invested with the powers of the Magistrate in the same district—Maung Than Shwe v. Deputy Commissioner, Hanthawaddy, 38 Cr.L.J. 923, 170 I.C. 420, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 284, 10 R.R. 81. The mere fact alone that it is the Deputy Commissioner who has laid the complaint does not afford a reasonable ground for apprehension in the mind of any person that he will not receive a fair trial in the district of the Deputy Commissioner. He must further show that the Subordinate Magistrates in that district are in awe of the Deputy Commissioner and look upon him as a person who must, on no account, be crossed. But cases of this nature which have been instituted by the Deputy Commissioner or District Magistrate of a district should not be tried by the Magistrate who is in such immediate touch with the Deputy Commissioner or District Magistrate as is the Headquarters Magistrate of the district. Where there are Magistrates who are not executive officers, it is desirable that they should be chosen to try such cases. It cannot be denied that an accused person might feel some apprehension that a subordinate executive officer might be unduly influenced by the expressed opinion of the Deputy Commissioner, and might be ready to pay too much deference to that opinion and might even be inclined to follow it in preference to his own. Such an apprehension could scarcely exist in regard to a Magistrate who belongs to the judicial service, and is in no likelihood of being unduly impressed by the authority of the executive head of the district—Maung Ba Gou v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 532 (533), 181 I.C. 315, 11 R.R. 458, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 88. But where the Deputy Commissioner has himself lodged the first information report and will have to be examined as a witness for the prosecution, it would, no doubt, be somewhat embarrassing to the trial Magistrate to have his Deputy Commissioner as a witness before him, especially when the accused is inclined to criticize the manner of the investigation made against him and, therefore, the case should be transferred beyond the district—Harmusji Harjibhoy v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 275, 1940 N.L.J. 335, 190 I.C. 153.

Where the Magistrate is in rather an embarrassing position in having before him an accused person, a high officer of the Government, who is his superior officer in respect of a considerable amount of his duties, the complainant might reasonably, albeit quite wrongly, have the apprehension that the particular relationship that the Magistrate has to the accused in the case might have some influence on him; and even if it merely embarrasses him, it would be sufficient to justify the complainant's apprehension that the trial might not be all that could be desired. Where a party to a case has such an apprehension with reasonable grounds, it has always been considered right that the case in question should be transferred to some other Court: for the existence of such an apprehension in the mind of one of the parties must militate against a proper trial, if for no other reason than that it places the party concerned under a very serious handicap—Maung Chit Tin v. H. O. Reynolds, 39 Cr.L.J. 415, 174 I.C. 400, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 68, 10 R.R. 403.

The fact that the Magistrate is a friend or remote relation of the complainant is no ground whatever for transfer. Magistrates and Judges quite appreciate the duty of impartiality—Damodar Babuji, 33 Bom.L.R. 311, 1931 Cr.C. 350, 32 Cr.L.J. 806, 131 I.C. 891, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 206, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 315; Sitaram v. Govind, 1912 P.L.R. 16, 13 Cr.L.J. 474. But where the complainant, being an old friend of the Magistrate, came into his chamber to pay 'a formal complimentary call', it was very unfortunate that the Magistrate should ever have allowed him, knowing that he was the complainant in the case before him, to make 'a complimentary call'. He should have known that his action in receiving the complainant in his chamber would undoubtedly raise an apprehension in the mind of the accused that he would not have a fair and impartial trial and, therefore, the transfer of the case to another Magistrate was proper—M. De Carmo Lobo v. G. C. Bhattacharjee, 38 Cr.L.J. 882, 170 I.C. 270, 10 R.R. 71, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 272. Where the trying Magistrate was a friend of a person, who was also a Magistrate, to whom the petitioner attributed the institution of the case, the case should be transferred to some other Magistrate as the petitioner honestly entertained an apprehension and it was desirable that he should have confidence in the Court by which he was to be tried. The petitioner must not, however, be permitted to choose his own Court—Abdul Hakim, 34 Cr.L.J. 1025, 145 I.C. 524, A.I.R. 1933 Pat. 597, 1933 Cr.C. 1360. So also the fact that the accused was a class-fellow of the Magistrate some 15 years previously is not a sufficient ground for transfer. If a case had to be transferred on every occasion in which the Magistrate fifteen years before had rubbed shoulders with somebody who was a complainant or respondent or advocate in the case, the whole of judicial work would come to an end—Gokul Prasad, 27 A.L.J. 616, 30 Cr.L.J. 522. The fact that both the complainant and the accused are acquainted with the Magistrate who sometimes gets medical help from each, is not a ground of transfer—Aliquallah, 1917 P.W.R. 13, 18 Cr.L.J. 719. So also, the fact that the Magistrate is a relation of the Sub-Inspector of Police or that he is in private life a guardian of a person who has a claim to the estate whose manager or servant instituted the proceeding, is not a valid ground of transfer—Baktu Singh v. Kalli, 28 Cal 297. But in Abbas, 13 C.W.N. 50 (note), where the prosecution witness was a relation of the Magistrate, it was held that though it did not strictly fall within the grounds mentioned in sec. 526, still it was expedient in the interests of justice that the case should be tried by another Magistrate. Where the Magistrate is a great friend of a prosecution witness, who is himself a friend of the complainant, the complaint should be transferred from the file of that Magistrate—Trilok Singh, 8 Lah.L.J. 257, 27 Cr.L.J. 782.

The mere fact that the Magistrate's son was a Pleader and was engaged in a criminal case before that Magistrate, was no ground for granting a transfer to another Magistrate—Pearay Lal v. Puttan, 85 I.C. 56, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 348, 26 Cr.L.J. 440. Put in a Calcutta case the fact that the complainant's mukhtar was a near relation of the Magistrate was held to be a ground for transfer—Nityaranjan, 29 C.W.N. 648, 26 Cr.L.J. 1183, 88 I.C. 607, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 806. It is not very seemly or suitable that a practising lawyer should pursue his practice in the Court of a near relative; it gives rise to ideas in the mind of the public which should not have the opportunity of being thus engendered. But where a Crown case was being concluded by the Court Inspector and the complainant engaged to watch the case a Barrister who was the brother of the Magistrate, there was no ground for ordering any transfer so long as he confined his attention to watching the case without taking any active part in the conduct of the prosecution—Dwarika, 27 Cr.L.J. 844, 95 I.C. 764, A.I.R. 1926 Pat. 464, 7 P.L.T. 770, 1926 Pat.H.C.C. 383, dissenting from Pearay Lal v. Puttan, supra.

The position of a Magistrate may be of some difficulty when the Magistrate has before him as an Advocate, one who, as President of a Municipality, is the official superior of his own brother who is the Assistant Chief Officer and whose promotion, it may be said, depends upon the goodwill of the Advocate who may directly or indirectly influence the brother of the Magistrate or the Magistrate himself. In such a case the matter, as to whether he should or should not try the case himself, should better be left to the good sense of the Magistrate. If by reason of the relationship of his brother to the Advocate, as a Municipal subordinate to a Municipal President, he feels himself in any way embarrassed in dealing with the matter (i.e., proceedings under sec. 476, Cr. P. C.), he should send the papers to the Sessions Court which under sec. 195, Cr. P. C., will be the "superior Court" for the purpose of the section and which can, in the inquiry held by itself, make any necessary complaint—Jethanand Hemandas v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 750, 183 I.C. 195, 12 R.S. 47, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 181.

It is undesirable that the Magistrate should be putting up with a person, who endorsed the complaint, while trying a case which started on that complaint. An order of transfer should be made in such a case to avoid apprehension of prejudice from his connection with the case and with the Magistrate—Bindeshwari Missir v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 517, 179 I.C. 49, 4 B.R. 519, 10 R.P. 571, 1938 P.W.N. 518, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 376.

If a complaint is filed against a near relation of the District Magistrate, it should only be inquired into by a Magistrate who cannot, in any reasonable sense of the word, be described as a subordinate of the District Magistrate. As a rule it should be transferred for disposal to a Magistrate who is entirely independent of the District Magistrate (i.e., the Additional District Magistrate)—J. W. Atkinson v. S. W. H. Xavier, A.I.R. 1936 Rang. 242 (243), 37 Cr.L.J. 723, 162 I.C. 988, 1936 Cr.C. 519.

1377. Magistrate being interested in the case:—Where the District Magistrate had taken a keen personal interest in the matter which had led up to the proceedings (under sec. 107) being taken against the accused and that he had even taken part in the inquiry and has himself instituted the proceedings and was more or less convinced of the accused's guilt, and the case had aroused some commotion in the district, held that the proceedings ought to be transferred to another district—Wakil Ali, 7 A.L.J. 813, 32 All. 642 (643). Where the accused was connected with a Raj estate which was under the management of the District Magistrate as Collector and Agent to the Court of Wards, the High Court granted the application for transfer of the case from the file of the District Magistrate, lest there might be some bias in the the Magistrate inducing him to look with favour upon the interests of any party—Kishori Gir v. Ram Narayan, 8 C.W.N. 77. Where a Magistrate has interested himself in a case pending before him in the way of obtaining a settlement by the parties, it is to the interest of both the parties and it is but fair to the Magistrate himself that he should not hear the case—Muzaffer Husain v. Md. Yakub, 47 All 411, 23 A.L.J. 191, 26 Cr.L.J. 869; Gobinda Chandra v. Gopal, 18 C.L.J. 150, 14 Cr.L.J. 602. See Note 1372. But the mere fact that the District Magistrate in his capacity as Collector is concerned in the management of an estate under the Court of Wards is no ground for transfer of a case instituted by a servant of the estate against a tenant of the estate and pending before a Subordinate Magistrate in the district, especially where there was not even a suggestion that the Collector or Magistrate knew of the institution of the case—Baktu Singh v. Kali Prasad, 28 Cal. 297. See also Notes under section 556.

Where a Magistrate in his capacity as an executive officer, has been taking steps to put down picketing of certain shops, it would be very desirable and would promote that confidence in the administration of justice which is all important, that such a Magistrate should not as far as possible hear cases arising out of picketing, in his judicial capacity—Asa Nand, 32 Cr.L.J. 491, 130 I.C. 330, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 30, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 266, 32 P.L.R. 272, 1931 Cr.C. 91. Where the trying Magistrate was the Honorary Secretary of the Co-operative Society which was interested in the prosecution and members of which were material witnesses, one of them being the complainant, held that the relationship of the Magistrate with the bank and the connection of the prosecution witnesses with the bank provided the petitioners with a ground, which was not unreasonable, that they would not receive a fair trial at his hands—Toja Sahu, 34 Cr.L.J. 1024, 145 I.C. 521.

Where a son of the trying Magistrate was a salesman attached to a firm with which the complainant was carrying on business transactions and when these allegations were brought to the notice of the Magistrate he proceeded to make enquiries and nowhere said that he asked his son whether these allegations were true and that the son denied them, held that, in circumstances such as these, it would be highly undesirable for that particular Magistrate to try the case, unless there were other more weighty considerations in favour of the opposite course—Hemanta Kumar v. Nanda Kumar, 41 C.W.N. 188 (192), A.I.R. 1937 Cal. 64, 64 C.L.J. 532, 9 R.C. 660, 167 I.C. 251, 38 Cr.L.J. 344.

It is ordinarily undesirable that a Magistrate who believes that the information that a house has been used as a public gaming house is credible and issues a search warrant under section 5 of the Public Gambling Act (III of 1867) should not try the case, but he cannot be said to be personally interested in the case and section 526, Cr.P.C., would not apply. He merely comes to the conclusion that the information given to him is credible and he has subsequently to decide the case on the evidence given in it. Even if the case is tried by another Magistrate, there would be the same presumption and the result would be the same—Khemchand Girdharilal v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 55, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 63, 171 I.C. 1007, 10 R.N. 150.

Magistrate proceeding with the case after issue of rule for transfer:—See Note 1388, infra.

1378. Other cases:—Where from the number of witnesses on both sides the case could not be finished in one day but the Judge insisted on finishing the case in one day and was unwilling to grant an adjournment to another date—Ram Sarub, 17 A.L.J. 48, 20 Cr.L.J. 127, 49 I.C. 111; where the trying Magistrate ordered that he would examine only one witness a day during the trial and would devote no more time each day, and thus prolonged the trial of the case—Narain Das, 26 Cr.L.J. 1363, 89 I.C. 451, 1 Lah. Cas. 525, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 78; where the Magistrate threatened the accused that he would be dealt with severely and sent to jail unless he admitted his guilt and furnished security (under section 110)—Gudar Singh, 19 All 291 (292); where the Magistrate conducted the trial on a public holiday at the request of the police-officer—Ram Diya, 29 Cr.L.J. 294, 107 I.C. 779; these were sufficient grounds for transfer to another Magistrate. It is always desirable that in his anxiety to dispose of a case the Magistrate should not act in a manner which may raise a fear in the mind of the accused that he has already made up his mind—Ishar Singh v. Shama Dسادh, 38 Cr.L.J. 484 (485), 167 I.C. 881, 17 P.L.T. 627, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 131, 3 B.R. 379, 9 R.P. 449. During a trial a prosecution witness made certain statements which showed his complicity in the offence and the Magistrate ordered him to be put on trial along with the accused, held that the action taken by the Magistrate was quite legal, but inasmuch as the witness had been examined on oath before the Magistrate who might to a certain extent have been prejudiced, the case against him should be tried by a different Magistrate—Radharaman v. Kamakshya, 20 Cr.L.J. 385, 50 I.C. 993 (Cal). Where in a case of rioting and murder committed to the Sessions Court, which had apparently aroused considerable local interest, it appeared that the Civil Surgeon had been discussing the case at the local club with the officers of the station including the Sessions Judge, held that this fact by itself was sufficient to justify an order of transfer of the case from the Sessions Judge—Muhammad Daraz, 19 A.L.J. 946, 23 Cr.L.J. 126. Where the Magistrate had asked the pleader for the defence not to defend the accused, held that under such circumstances the accused could not have confidence in the impartiality of the Magistrate and the case should be transferred—Dhara Singh v. Ram Singh, 3 Lah L.J. 528. Where no practitioner in a district ordinarily employed in criminal cases is willing to act for the accused, for fear of incurring the displeasure of the District Magistrate and the Police, it is a ground for transfer of the case to another district—Lalla v. Zahoor Ahmed, 2 O.W.N. 682, 26 Cr.L.J. 1272; Mutsuddi Lal, 28 Cr.L.J. 787, 104 I.C. 227, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 709. Where at the request of the complainant, his case is sent to a particular Magistrate for trial, the accused will be justified in asking for a transfer from the Court—Gharsi Mal v. Debi Sahai, 25 Cr.L.J. 989, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 121. The petitioner is bound to entertain a reasonable apprehension in his mind that he will not get a fair trial in the Court of a Magistrate who had made a report against his father and had got him dismissed from the post of a Lambardar and is entitled to get his case transferred from his file—Allah Ditta, 35 Cr.L.J. 1380, 151 I.C. 669, 35 P.L.R. 702.

Where the Magistrate begins a fresh inquiry on his own account under sec. 202, Cr. P. C., after having sent the case for inquiry to a Magistrate and receiving his report and, apart from the irregularity of conducting a second inquiry, there is also inordinate delay in either dismissing the case or directing the issue of process, the complainant may well feel some apprehension that the fate of his case, so far as the admission of the complaint is concerned, will not rest entirely on the consideration of the report and the Magistrate's conclusions thereon and his application for transfer is justified—Tyab Ali v. Hussaini, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 389, 172 I.C. 203, 39 Cr.L.J. 80, 10 R.N. 174.

The mere fact that the Magistrate lives in a bungalow which is owned by the father of one of the accused persons and was taken on rent fixed long before the institution of the case in his Court is not a ground for transfer at the instance of the complainant in a cognizable case when the landlord lives in another town and has no financial hold on the tenant, especially if the Crown opposes the transfer—Dhana, 39 Cr.L.J. 853, 177 I.C. 187, 40 P.L.R. 468, 11 R.L. 274, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 569.

1379. What are not grounds of transfer:—Want of temper and discretion on the part of the Magistrate in dealing with the petitioner's written statement and failure to give satisfactory explanation to the High Court are not, by themselves, sufficient grounds for granting an application for transfer—Kisto Chunder, 2 W.R. 58. The mere fact that the complainant is a man of importance in the place where the trial is held is not sufficient to justify a transfer to another place—In re Ratanji, Ratanlal 474.

A bona fide mistake of law is not a ground of transfer. Thus, in a case under sec. 380, I. P. C., the Magistrate should at once give the accused an opportunity to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses if he so desires, even though the charge may not be framed, but a refusal to give such opportunity, when the Magistrate acts bona fide under a mistaken view of the law, is not a good ground for transferring the case—Asirbad Muchi v. Maju, 8 C.W.N. 838; Fasiuddin, 30 Cr.L.J. 728, 117 I.C. 213, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 172; Sadashiv, 22 Bom. 549; Narayan v. Bala, 37 Cr.L.J. 1146, 165 I.C. 425, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 146, 1936 Cr.C. 693. The mere fact that certain orders passed by the trying Magistrate are erroneous or illegal is by itself insufficient to justify transfer of the case from his Court. But where the procedure adopted by him is such as to justify a reasonable apprehension in the minds of the accused persons that they would not have a fair and impartial trial in his Court, there is sufficient ground for transferring the case—Hari Chand, 32 Cr.L.J. 253 (255), 129 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 59, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 129, 1931 Cr.C. 139. Where the whole procedure was extremely arbitrary and in direct contravention of law and the Magistrate displayed plenty of zeal but betrayed a grievous lack of discretion and judicial spirit, the apprehension entertained by the applicant that he will not have a fair trial is perfectly reasonable and the case must be transferred—Ajodhya Prosad v. Municipal Com., Khurai, 37 Cr.L.J. 837, 163 I.C. 413, 18 N.L.J. 320. But the mere mistake of law committed by a Court during the trial of a case is no ground for the transfer of a case unless it is made to appear that the Court with a view to prejudice the party applying for transfer passed an illegal order—Salag Ram v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 416 (420), 167 I.C. 515, 9 R.A. 550, 1937 A.L.R. 201, A.I.R. 1937 All. 171. Magistrates must inevitably make mistakes sometimes in the course of the trial of one or other of the cases before them. The fact that they have made a mistake cannot possibly in itself induce any reasonable person to believe that the Magistrate is prejudiced against him. There must be some other circumstances in the light of which the apprehension in the accused's mind arises—Suppaya Chettyar v. Karuppaya Pillay, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 528 (530). Courts may pass orders which may either be legal or illegal, but the mere passing of an illegal order will not justify an inference against their honesty or impartiality—K. L. Gauba v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 955 (957), 170 I.C. 586, 18 Lah. 114, 10 R.L. 135, 39 P.L.R. 643, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 411. The mere fact that a trial Court has committed an error of judgment in admitting an evidence is no ground for transferring a case from such Court—Bahir Ali, 20 Cr.L.J. 609, 52 I.C. 273 (Pat.). It is true the duty lies upon the Court to exclude evidence which is inadmissible in law but the fact that the Magistrate wrongly admits evidence, an error of law, is not of itself necessarily good ground to transfer a case—Om Radhe v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 803 (805), 183 I.C. 460, 12 R.S. 55, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 238. So also, errors of judgment in refusing to summon a prosecution witness for cross-examination, insisting on his being summoned as a witness for the defence, disallowing the objections as to the fitness of a person to serve as assessor, and permitting the prosecution to examine-in-chief a witness on the substantive case of the prosecution after the defence has disclosed its case in the cross-examination of the witnesses, are insufficient by themselves to justify a transfer of the case—Shivadhin, 3 P.L.T. 32, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 116 (119). The fact that a Magistrate erroneously refused to admit a document in evidence or asked party to deposit the probable expenses for summoning a person as witness is no ground for transferring a case—Nand Kishore v. Kalka, 5 P.L.T. 487, 25 Cr.L.J. 458. No apprehension should arise from the ordinary acts of a Magistrate performed in the course of a case. Thus, during a protracted trial of a case it necessarily happens that many points arise upon which the Magistrate has to give a decision, and the fact that he makes a decision against the accused is not sufficient to warrant an apprehension that he will not get an impartial trial, if the order is passed in good faith and the reasons for the order are duly stated—Fasiuddin, 30 Cr.L.J. 728 (731), 117 I.C. 213, A.I.R. 1929 Nag. 172.

The fact that the Magistrate has released the accused on bail (and has thus shown a tendency to treat the accused with undue leniency) is not a ground of transfer, for it is a discretion vested in him by law—Sadashiv Narayan, 22 Bom. 549. Similarly, the fact that the Magistrate has refused to grant bail in a case of non-bailable offence does not show that he has been biased against the accused—Jumo, 20 S.L.R. 136, 27 Cr.L.J.

859 (860). The mere fact that the accused is called upon to submit the list of defence witnesses in a warrant case before the cross-examination of all prosecution witnesses is not an irregularity which will afford sufficient ground for transfer—Ishar Singh v. Shama Dسادh, 38 Cr.L.J. 484 (487), 167 I.C. 881, 17 P.L.T. 627, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 131, 3 B.R. 379, 9 R.P. 449. The Magistrate has a discretion under sec. 244 to refuse to summon any of the witnesses named by the accused; and the fact that he has refused to summon some of the witnesses is not a ground of transfer—Mangal, 36 All. 13 (15). The fact that the Magistrate was under a misapprehension as to the purpose for which the witnesses were called, and as to his being justified under section 257, Cr. P. C., in refusing to issue summons, should not indicate to any reasonable person, in the absence of any other factors, that the Magistrate is prejudiced against him—Suppaya Chettyar v. Karuppaya Pillay, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 528 (530); Minza Jaffar Beg v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 354, 41 Cr.L.J. 948, 190 I.C. 561. Because a Magistrate refused to issue summons but directed only that witnesses should be examined on commission does not give any reasonable grounds for the apprehension that the Magistrate would not listen to the accused's defence with an open mind—Suppaya Chettyar v. Karuppaya Pillay, supra. The mere fact that the Magistrate has granted several unnecessary adjournments to enable the complainant to appear is not a ground for transferring the case from the Magistrate—Maula Bakhsh v. Marshall, 27 Cr.L.J. 1022 (1023), 96 I.C. 878, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 628. So also, a Magistrate who has tried one set of accused is not thereby debarred from trying another set of accused on the same facts—Joharuddin, 31 Cal. 715; Dalsher, 24 Cr.L.J. 800 (Oudh).

The High Court did not transfer a case from the Court of a Magistrate who said to the complainant that he was determined that the case should be finished within six weeks and he would so finish it in some way or other either by dismissing it for default or discharging the accused or any other way—Kamni Begam v. Bashir Ulzaman Khan, 37 Cr.L.J. 1100, 165 I.C. 20, A.I.R. 1936 All. 695, 1936 A.L.J. 975, 1936 Cr.C. 891. The fact that a Magistrate has a lot of work and cannot find time to dispose of the case quickly, alone is no ground why a case in which almost the entire prosecution evidence has been recorded by the Magistrate should be transferred from his Court to another Court—Baij Nath v. Ram Sarup, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 827, 38 Cr.L.J. 181, 166 I.C. 373, 1936 Cr.C. 795.

If in fact the case is a sensational one and arouses a certain amount of public interest or public feeling, that is no reason why the accused or the High Court should lose faith in the Court and the case should be transferred—Sugnomai v. Phatandas, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 237 (239), 1936 Cr.C. 1093, 166 I.C. 83, 38 Cr.L.J. 133. Where the challan does not disclose that the facts of the case are of any extraordinary complexity or involve any specially difficult questions of law, the mere fact that public interest and some excitement are aroused at the time is no reason for taking the case away from the Magistrate—Pruthvinath, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 56 (59), 20 N.L.J. 151, 1 L.R. 1938 Nag. 248, 175 I.C. 935, 39 Cr.L.J. 660.

The possibility that some officials of a higher rank than the trying Magistrate might be cited as witnesses is also not an adequate ground for transferring the case—Pruthvinath, supra.

It is undesirable to transfer a case from a district because police officers of the district are witnesses in that case—Devan Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Lah. 527 (528), 42 P.L.R. 589.

Refusal by the Magistrate to allow the accused to cross-examine the complainant, although improper, is not a ground of transfer, especially when the case has reached a very advanced stage—Sujan Singh v. Jia Lal 1917 P.W.R. 29, 18 Cr.L.J. 690. See also Salag Ram v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 416 (418), 167 I.C. 515, A.I.R. 1937 All. 171, 1937 A.L.R. 201, 9 R.A. 550. Where the Magistrate gave a proper warning to counsel that he would have to bring the cross-examination to an end in a minute or two but he did not, as a matter of fact, stop cross-examination, there was no ground for transferring the case—Tara Chand, A.I.R. 1933 All. 949 (952), 1933 Cr.C. 1550.

But see Yusuf v. Bupi Lal in Note 1372. The mere fact that the trial Magistrate frequently cross-examined the witnesses of the complainant or disallowed questions as irrelevant is no ground for a transfer of the case—Abdul Aziz v. Ganesh, 25 Cr.L.J. 1185, 82 I.C. 49, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 52. A witness who had been examined by the Police can reasonably be asked whether a particular version which he was giving in Court was given by him to the Police. The question would be perfectly relevant and legitimate. However, the rejection of the question cannot be a ground for transfer—Lal Bahadur Raut v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 527 (528), 175 I.C. 110, 4 B.R. 533, 10 R.P. 581, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 238. The fact that when the Magistrate disallowed questions in cross-examination he made no note of the same on the record is no ground for transfer under this section—Dewan Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1910 Lah. 527 (528), 42 P.L.R. 589.

A Judge or Magistrate who conscientiously tries a case in a judicial proceeding has a legal duty to apply, to the best of his ability, the rules of evidence, as those rules are laid down in the Evidence Act. And his judicial duty is to exclude irrelevant evidence, whether in examination-in-chief or in cross-examination. The allowance or disallowance of questions by a Judge in pursuance of a judicial duty cannot ever by itself afford a ground upon which to base an application for a transfer of a case, unless it is either shown affirmatively that there exists some improper motive or unless upon the face of the questions themselves, disallowed or allowed as the case may be, the only possible inference must be that they have been allowed or disallowed for some ulterior and improper reason—U Saw v. The King, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 456 (457), 179 I.C. 72, 40 Cr.L.J. 162, 11 R.R. 298.

The Additional District Magistrate of Rangoon was trying a case against the accused who was editor-in-chief of the "Sun". He made an application for transfer on the ground that the Additional District Magistrate, having been the object of an unfavourable comment by the "Sun" newspaper while Deputy Commissioner of Myingyan, might harbour a resentment against him which would prevent him doing justice in the case. Held that this could not be accepted as a ground for transfer because there was no reason whatever to impute any such frailty to the Magistrate—U Saw v. The King, supra.

The fact that the Magistrate accepted the complaint at a late hour in the evening and issued warrant forthwith, or the fact that the Magistrate recorded statements of only one of the accused persons, or the fact that the complainant and the accused are both acquainted with the Magistrate who sometimes gets medical help from each, is not a sufficient ground for transfer—Atiqullah, 1917 P.W.R. 13, 18 Cr.L.J. 719. When a case is adjourned, the Court can award costs of adjournment, whenever it thinks proper; and the passing of such order of costs against a party does not disclose any prejudice on the part of the Magistrate and is not a valid ground for the transfer of the case to another Magistrate—Raghunandan v. Ramdin, 2 P.L.W. 218, 19 Cr.L.J. 6, 42 I.C. 918. See also Ishar Singh v. Shama Dسادh, 38 Cr.L.J. 484 (486), 167 I.C. 881, 17 P.L.T. 627, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 131, 3 B.R. 379, 9 R.P. 449. When the District Magistrate refuses to produce the papers called for by the defence on the ground that some are missing and others are confidential, it cannot be said that the trial Court entertains any bias against the accused or that the accused should reasonably apprehend any such bias—Bahir Ali, 20 Cr.L.J. 609, 52 I.C. 273 (Pat.). The mere fact that the Magistrate's son is a pleader and that he has been engaged by the other side is no ground for granting a transfer to another Court—Peary Lal v. Puttan, 26 Cr.L.J. 440, 85 I.C. 56, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 318. But see 29 C.W.N. 648 and 27 Cr.L.J. 844 cited in Note 1376.

That the Magistrate is himself unwilling to proceed with the case is certainly no reason for removing the case from his file—Fakira v. Goma, 37 Cr.L.J. 861, 163 I.C. 694, 18 N.L.J. 279.

An accused is not entitled to have his case transferred from the Court of a Magistrate who is seised of it merely because he chooses to place a sinister interpretation on an innocent act of the Magistrate. Otherwise, an accused person endowed with a suspicious nature will make the administration of justice impossible—K. L. Gauba, 38 Cr.L.J. 955 (958), 170 I.C. 586, 18 Lah. 114, 10 R.L. 135, 39 P.L.R. 643, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 411. Any Magistrate who seeks inspiration from any Counsel for the Crown, even if he be of the position of Government Advocate, or from any Police Officer, however highly placed he may be is unworthy of his office—Ibid.

Suppression of facts:—Where the applicants induced the High Court to issue a rule by suppression of facts and by making certain allegations which were absolutely unfounded, the application for transfer was dismissed and they were ordered to pay costs of the Public Prosecutor under cl. (6A) of this section—Abdullah v. Chandoomal, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 361, 35 Cr.L.J. 147, 146 I.C. 586, 1933 Cr.C. 1337.

Provocation to the Magistrate:—The method adopted by a counsel in attempting to provoke the Magistrate trying a case into some unguarded expression and then applying for a transfer is a method which is neither in the interest of client nor in the interest of justice—Tara Chand, A.I.R. 1933 All. 949 (952), 1933 Cr.C. 1569.

1380. Onus of proof:—The applicant who wants the transfer of the case on the ground of bias in the mind of the Magistrate must show the very clearest grounds for believing that the Magistrate is likely to be prejudiced or influenced by an improper motive in the decision of the case. In the absence of such ground it is highly improper to transfer a case from his Court and thus to throw a gratuitous slight upon the Magistrate—Shankar Abaji, 6 B.H.C.R. 69; Vishnu, Ratanlal 323; Ganga D., 1887 A.W.N. 139. When an application for transfer is objected to by the accused, the prosecution must bring forward the very best evidence to prove that a fair trial cannot be held in the district in which the case is ordinarily triable—Nobogopal, 6 Cal. 491.

See Note 1386.

Clause (b):—Since the Code allows appeals and revision applications from convictions, and since the verdict of the jury is not in all cases final, the High Court is loth to transfer a case to itself on the ground of any difficult question of law arising in the case. If the Lower Court errs in any point of law, it can be set right afterwards by the High Court in appeal or revision. See Ameer Khan, 15 W.R. 69 (per Phear, J.).

1381. Clause (d)—Convenience of parties:—When all the acts constituting the offence took place in Bombay, but the complainant chose to lodge his complaint in the Ratnagiri Sessions Court and the accused also wished to be tried there, the High Court ordered the trial to proceed before the Sessions Judge of Ratnagiri—2 Bom.L.R. 394. In transferring a case no consideration should be had to the fact that by the transfer to a particular district the accused will have the benefit of a trial by a jury, where previously he had none. The real question is that of convenience of parties—Durga Charan, 8 Cr.L.J. 121, 8 C.L.J. 59. See also Lakshman, 55 Bom. 576, 1931 Cr.C. 569. Where with reference to a case which stood committed to the Court of Session at Thana, the Government by a Notification directed that the case should be tried at Alibag by Mr. G., the Sessions Judge of Thana, and the accused applied to the High Court to have the case transferred to Thana on the ground of convenience of the parties and their witnesses, held that the case should be transferred to the Sessions Judge sitting at Thana in the interests of justice and the convenience of parties, and the powers of transfer vested in the High Court under sec 526 were in no way affected by the Notification of the Local Government—Lakshyan Chavvi, 55 Bom. 576, 1931 Cr.C. 569 (578), 32 Cr.L.J. 1147, 33 Bom.L.R. 675, 134 I.C. 347, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 459, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 313. The convenience of defence witnesses when they are numerous will outweigh the convenience of the prosecution witnesses especially when they are few, and a transfer will be directed to suit the convenience of the former—Ratanlal 927. The convenience of the accused has to be considered rather than that of the complainant, for transferring a case—Sohan Lal v. Gopal, 27 Cr.L.J. 563. But when the convenience of the complainant or witnesses is not concerned, the case will not be transferred for the sole convenience of the accused—Ghulam Kader, 20 S.L.R. 310, 27 Cr.L.J. 1261. The fact that an accused person and his defence witnesses reside at a considerable distance from where the being tried is ordinarily no ground for transfer. But where it will be highly inconvenient and risky for the applicant to appear either as an accused person or as a witness in a certain district, the case should be transferred to the district where the accused and his witnesses reside—Satbhari v. Muhammad Sidik, 36 Cr.L.J. 869, 155 I.C. 1010, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 68. A transfer will be allowed from one Court to another, where the accused are residents within the jurisdiction of the latter Court, and all the witnesses belong to the same place, so that it will be conducive to the convenience of parties if the case is inquired into in the latter place—Bansi v. Lakshmi, 45 All. 700 (701), 25 Cr.L.J. 72. The High Court transferred a case from one subdivision to another subdivision where both the complainant and the accused lived in the latter place, but on this understanding that the accused must not ask for a de novo trial, and that the evidence recorded by the Magistrate of the former subdivision should continue to be the evidence in the case—Hari Kishen v. Polo Ram, 27 P.L.R. 604, 28 Cr.L.J. 233 (234). Where a case has given rise to communal feeling to such an extent that one of the parties find it difficult to persuade his witnesses to appear in Court, owing to the fear that they might render themselves liable to injury at the hands of the members of the opposite community, it is desirable that the case should be transferred to some other locality—Halim, 8 P.L.T. 153, 27 Cr.L.J. 1391.

Unnecessary delay in the disposal of a petty case is a good ground for transfer—Mangalam v. Abdul, 2 Weir 679; Gorind Sahai, 12 A.L.J. 262, 15 Cr.L.J. 363 (364).

It is inexpedient to transfer a case when it is mature for judgment; unless it be for purely administrative reasons—Fakira v. Goma, 37 Cr.L.J. 861, 163 I.C. 861, 18 N.L.J. 279. But see Sikandar Lal, 10 Lah. 778, 30 Cr.L.J. 129 in Note 1371.

The fact that the accused is an acquaintance of the Magistrate, and that it would be in the interests of justice if the trial were held by a stranger Magistrate who knew nothing about either party, is not a ground of transfer—Mewa Ram v. Narain, 16 A.L.J. 490, 19 Cr.L.J. 702, 46 I.C. 158.

The general principle that it is desirable that a Magistrate who has heard the greater part of a case should conclude it, should not be allowed to outweigh the prejudice and loss likely to result to the accused by acceding to the transfer of the case to a different district where the Magistrate, who heard the case, was transferred—Tarachand, 36 Cr.L.J. 1495, 158 I.C. 964, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 197, 1935 Cr.C. 1062. See also Murugappa, cited in Note 1390.

While it is true that convenience and expedition are factors to be considered in the trial of a case, it must be remembered that beyond even these considerations is the even more important consideration that justice should be done, and the necessity for expedition should not be allowed to deprive the accused of a reasonable opportunity to call evidence in defence on a charge of an offence of which, at the outset of the proceedings, he had no knowledge he would be called upon to meet—Jashanmal J. Gulrajani v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 818 (822), 183 I.C. 619, 12 R.S. 64, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 222.

Where the committing Magistrate has not sufficiently appreciated the responsibility that rests upon him under section 495, Cr. P. C., and has permitted an advocate privately engaged by the complainant to conduct the prosecution in a case under section 302, I. P. C., it is expedient in the interests of justice that the case should be transferred from the Court of the committing Magistrate—Ahmed Mahomed v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Sind 220, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 482.

Communal dispute:—Where the case was relating to a dispute between Hindus and Mahomedans in respect of a mosque or graveyard, it is desirable that the case should

Ordinarily, it is not a correct proposition that merely because the case is between Hindus and Mahomedans, either a Hindu or a Mahomedan Judge or Magistrate is ipso facto debarred from hearing it. But where the petitions for transfer have unfortunately given the communal aspect of the case an importance which it really does not deserve on the merits, it is useless to shut one's eyes to the fact that the question has cropped up and become a prominent issue and it is desirable in the interests of everybody concerned to transfer the case—Amba Parshad v. Imam Ali, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 706, 178 I.C. 507, 40 Cr.L.J. 79.

A Magistrate is not barred by reason of belonging to one community or the other from trying cases between members of those two communities. But when a Magistrate finds himself placed in such a position, it is incumbent upon him to exercise the greatest tact and discretion in handling the case. Where he commits errors of procedure so as to give rise to an apprehension in the minds of petitioners that they would not get an impartial trial, the case should be transferred—Lal Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 888, 177 I.C. 507, 40 P.L.R. 505, 11 R.L. 333, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 576.

1383. Clause (ii)—“From a Criminal Court subordinate to its authority”.—The High Court has no jurisdiction to direct the transfer of a case from a Court not subordinate to its jurisdiction. Sec. 185 does not empower such a transfer. Thus, Presidency Magistrate of Bombay to the Court of the Presidency Magistrate at Madras—Mahomed Ghouse v. Nathu, 40 Mad. 835, 18 Cr.L.J. 148.

The Courts of the District Magistrate and Sessions Judge of Bangalore are subordinate to the High Court of Madras, and the High Court can transfer the cases pending before those Courts—Scott v. Ricketts, 9 Mad. 356. The Perim Sessions Court and the Court of the Cantonment Magistrate at Secunderabad are subject to the Bombay High Court, and that High Court can transfer any case pending before those Courts to any other Court of equal or superior jurisdiction—Mangel Tekchand, 10 Bom. 274; Eduards, 9 Bom. 333.

In an Allahabad case it has been held that powers under this section cannot be exercised to transfer a proceeding pending in one Panchayat Court consuetudo.

under the provisions of the United Provinces Act VI of 1920 to another—Sat Narain v. Sarju, 46 All. 167 (168, 169). In this case, Kanhaiya Lal, J., is of opinion that the High Court cannot transfer a case from one village Panchayat to another under the provisions of this section, but it can do so under section 22 of the Letters Patent—Ibid (p. 170). In a later case of the same High Court, however, it has been laid down that as Panchayat Courts are Criminal Courts, the High Court has jurisdiction to transfer cases pending before a Panchayat Court—Basdeo v. Badal, 49 All. 188, 28 Cr.L.J. 94. In this case the learned Judge did not enter into the question whether the Panchayat Courts were subordinate to the High Court.

1383A. Clause (iv):—This jurisdiction clearly covers both classes of cases, that is, cases exclusively triable by a Court of Session and also cases not exclusively triable by such a Court. It follows that the Legislature contemplated that for the ends of justice a case of the latter description may forthwith be ordered by the High Court to be committed to a Court of Session for trial—Bolting, 35 Cr.L.J. 928 (930), A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 220, 149 I.C. 235, 11 O.W.N. 780, 1934 Cr.C. 1018, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 349.

The transfer must be to a Court of competent authority and of equal or superior jurisdiction. Where the High Court directed the District Magistrate to transfer a case (under sec. 107) to another Magistrate, and the District Magistrate transferred the case to a 2nd Class Magistrate, the transfer was illegal because the 2nd Class Magistrate was not competent to hear the case under sec. 107, and also because he was of inferior jurisdiction to the District Magistrate—Gobind Sahai, 37 All. 20. The transfer should have been made to a First Class Magistrate as in Munna, 24 All. 151.

In selecting a Court to which the case is to be transferred regard must be had to the gravity of the offence. Where a case under sec. 211, I. P. C., was transferred from the Court of a Joint Magistrate to that of an Honorary Magistrate with first class powers, where the case remained pending for four months, it was held that the case, being of a serious nature, ought to have been transferred to the Court of Session or to the Court of a more experienced Magistrate—Magan Lal v. Ganesh, 16 A.L.J. 294, 45 I.C. 515, 19 Cr.L.J. 611.

As for transfer of any preventive proceeding, from one district to another see Note 277A.

Power of Court to which case is transferred :—See Note 606 under sec. 192.

1385. Sub-section (3)—‘A party interested’:—Ordinarily, the only persons who are recognised by the Code as parties to a criminal case are the persons who have the right to control the proceedings; these are the Crown, the accused and the parties engaged in conducting certain proceedings within the meaning of this Code. The Code does not recognise a private prosecutor, who is a complainant, as a party to the case, and he, consequently, is not competent to apply for a transfer as a party interested—Jamuna v. Rudra Kumar, 4 P.L.J. 656, 20 Cr.L.J. 648 (per Mullick, J.). But Jwala Prasad, J. held in this case that the person at whose instance a criminal case is lodged (i.e., the complainant) is a person interested in the prosecution and is entitled to apply for transfer but his rights are subordinate to those of the Crown; that is, if the Public Prosecutor or the person who is conducting the case on behalf of the Crown is unwilling to have the case transferred, the private prosecutor has no right to get the case transferred. The opinion of Jwala Prasad, J. has been followed in a recent case of the Patna High Court in Sheodhari v. Jhingur, 7 P.L.T. 49, 88 I.C. 993, A.I.R. 1925 Pat. 818, 26 Cr.L.J. 1249; by the Lahore High Court in Bagh Ali v. Md. Din, 6 Lah. 541, 27 P.L.R. 80, 27 Cr.L.J. 411, 93 I.C. 75, A.I.R. 1926 Lah. 156; and by the Allahabad High Court in Abdul Naseer v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 33, 171 I.C. 934, A.I.R. 1937 All. 664, 1937 A.L.J. 845, 10 R.A. 349, 1937 A.L.R. 919, 1937 A.C.C. 117, 1937 A.W.R. (H.C.) 729. The expression "party interested" does not necessarily mean the complainant but may include a police informant. Moreover, where the conduct of the case is in the hands of the Public Prosecutor, and there is a conflict between the Public Prosecutor and the party interested, the right of the former must prevail—Rajagopal v. Narayan, 57 M.L.J. 547, 1929 Cr.C. 612 (613), 2 M.Cr.C. 199, 30 M.L.W. 640, 120 I.C. 80, 30 Cr.L.J. 1163. In a charge which is instituted on a Police report and in which the prosecution is in the hands of the Public Prosecutor exceptionally strong grounds would have to be shown before the High Court would exercise its power of transfer, at the instance of a private complainant when the responsible authorities are satisfied that there is no ground for withdrawing the case from the Court which is hearing it—Bhik Chand, 27 Cr.L.J. 454, 93 I.C. 246, A.I.R. 1926 All. 307; Sardar Shah v. Gurdit Singh, 36 Cr.L.J. 222, 152 I.C. 1053, 35 P.L.R. 567, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 612, 1934 Cr.C. 942. But the first informant has locus standi to make an application for transfer even in such a case—Sardar Shah v. Gurdit Singh, supra.

A person who makes a report to the Police of a certain offence is a person who is interested in the prosecution which may be started by the Police within the meaning of cl. (3) and cl. (8) of this section. He, therefore, has locus standi to make an application for a transfer under this section. Where such an application is opposed on behalf of the Crown and there is thus a conflict between the Crown and the applicant, the rights of the applicant must be subordinate to those of the Crown because the Crown is responsible for the prosecution—Abdul Naseer v. Emp., supra; Dhana, 39 Cr.L.J. 853, 177 I.C. 187, 40 P.L.R. 468, 11 R.L. 274, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 569.

One of the injured persons may perhaps be regarded as a complainant though the case is a cognizable one and is entitled to apply for transfer under this section—Dhana, supra.

A person alleging himself to be the complainant, but who in fact is not the complainant and from whose hands the prosecution has been taken away by the order of the Magistrate, is not a party interested within the meaning of this section—Gannon, 5 Bom.L.R. 869.

Under sec. 195 as amended in 1923, it is no longer open to a private person to take proceedings in respect of offences mentioned in that section; a private person may move the Court, but it is for the Court to decide whether to take proceedings or not. A person moving the Court to take action under sec. 195 cannot therefore be considered to be a party interested, and has no locus standi to apply for a transfer of the case—Ram Sarup v. Mahomed Mehr, 31 P.L.R. 840, 31 Cr.L.J. 1174.

Own initiative:—So far as the transfer of cases is concerned, however, the powers of the High Court are wide. The High Court can of its own motion under sub-sec. (3) transfer a case; it can, if it thinks proper, act upon the application of a witness and would certainly do so if it was satisfied that the process of the Court was being abused, that the proceedings were sham or bogus proceedings instituted or continued for some ulterior purpose for a purpose not within the intention and provisions of the relevant sections of the Code. But where no useful purpose, public or private, would be served by the transfer of the case nor is there any reasonable ground for apprehension on the part of the applicant that the Magistrate will not deal fairly and honestly in his final order with the questions under the provisions of the Cr. P. Code before him for decision, the case should not be transferred—Om Radhe v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 803 (804), 183 I.C. 460, 12 R.S. 55, A.I.R. 1939 Sind. 238.

1386. Sub-section (4)—Mode of making an application for transfer:—Every person, whether accused or not except the Advocate-General, who makes the application under this section must support his application by an affidavit—Sadashee, 34 Cr.L.J. 1035, 45 I.C. 445, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 201, 1933 Cr.C. 797, 29 N.L.R. 338. It is necessary for a person who claims a transfer to prove by affidavit, fully and strictly, all the facts on which he rests his claim—Maung Ba Chien v. The King, A.I.R. 1920

Rang. 454 (456), 178 I.C. 942, 40 Cr.L.J. 154; 11 R.R. 287. An application for transfer should be made by motion supported by affidavit or affirmation and not by a letter addressed by the Sessions Judge to the High Court—Zahiruddin, 1 Cal. 219; Abdool Sobhan, 8 Cal. 63; Ahmed Baksh, 1894 A.W.N. 154. An application for transfer which is not supported by an affidavit, cannot be entertained—Ujagar Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 356, 37 P.L.R. 80, 37 Cr.L.J. 510, 161 I.C. 921, 1936 Cr.C. 297. An application for transfer should not be made by a mere written statement prepared by Counsel but should be made by an application supported by affidavit or by a properly verified petition—Amrita Lal v. Lachman, 1891 A.W.N. 37.

Affidavit:—When the transfer is asked for on the ground that the appellant wishes to call the Magistrate as a witness, the application must be supported by an affidavit showing that the evidence required from the Magistrate is relevant and material—Nizam Ahmed, 1886 A.W.N. 257.

The Madras High Court holds that an application for the transfer of a criminal case by the accused is a criminal proceeding within the meaning of sec. 5 of the Indian Oaths Act, and no oath can be administered to the accused. Therefore no affidavit can be put in by the accused person. If any affidavit is put in, it is a nullity, and the accused cannot be convicted for any false statement contained therein—Ramaswami, 1 Weir 176. This is also the view of the Allahabad High Court; see Barkat, 19 All. 200; Bindeshri, 28 All. 331 and Matan, 33 All. 163. But in Ghulam Muhammad, 3 Lah. 46, 23 Cr.L.J. 399, 67 I.C. 351, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 113, it has been held that the affidavit is not a nullity; the provision in sec. 342 (4) that no oath can be administered to an accused has reference only to the statement made by him during his examination under that section; it does not preclude him from making an affidavit in support of his application under sec. 526. See also Sadasheo, supra.

See sec. 537 and the notes thereunder.

Counter-affidavit by District Magistrate:—When an application for transfer is made on the ground of partiality of the Magistrate before whom the case is pending, it is highly improper for the District Magistrate to make an affidavit swearing as to the impartiality of that Magistrate—Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179.

Explanation of the Magistrate:—The High Court has power to call for a report from the Magistrate regarding the allegations made in the affidavit in support of an application for transfer although there is no provision for it in the Cr. P. Code. Such report is not made in a judicial capacity. It is in essence a report of an administrative character and can be contradicted by the affidavit of the parties. It can even be disbelieved for sufficient reasons—Ananthachariar v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 328.

As a matter of practice the best course to adopt is that when an application for transfer is made, the Judge from whose Court the transfer is sought to be obtained should be given an opportunity of instructing the Government Advocate on the matters raised in the affidavits, but any formal explanation which is subsequently incorporated in the proceedings is not desirable—Brahmayya v. The King, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 442 (443), 179 I.C. 783, 11 R.R. 347, 40 Cr.L.J. 265.

Where in more than one paragraph of their petition for transfer the petitioners stated that the Magistrate was intimate with M and in the explanation submitted by him the Magistrate said that "what the petitioners believe is not evidence" and "purely conjectural and do not admit of any discussion", it would have been much more satisfactory if the Magistrate had denied his intimacy with M if that intimacy were not a fact—Bindeshwari Missir v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 517, 175 I.C. 49, 4 B.R. 519, 10 R.P. 571, 1938 P.W.N. 518, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 376.

Sub-section (5)—Compensation:—This sub-section as well as sub-section (6A) has been amended by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XXI of 1932; the main amendment being the substitution of the word "compensation" for "costs". The reason is thus stated: "Applications in the High Court are opposed usually by or on behalf of the Legal Remembrancer who is paid by salary and not by fees, which makes it difficult to assess his reasonable expenses incurred in opposing the application (see the judgment of Lord Williams, J. in Neamat Sha, 59 Cal. 481). The amendments made in sub-sections (5) and (6A) are aimed at meeting this criticism—"Statement of Objects and Reasons" (Gazette of India, 1932, Part V, p. 198).

Costs of transfer:—When the case is transferred at the instance of the accused, he will be ordered to pay all the complainant's costs incurred before the Magistrate from whose file the transfer was ordered—Girish Chandra v. Chandramoni, 8 C.W.N. 589. In Khetu v. Mohim Nath, 8 C.W.N. 75, the Crown bore all the expenses of the complainant's witnesses.

Sub-section (6A):—This sub-section has been added by the Amendment Act of 1923 to provide a safeguard against frivolous, vexatious or dilatory applications "We recognise that the provisions of the section, as they stand, have lent themselves to gross abuse, and therefore we feel that great safeguards are necessary. For these reasons, the new sub-section (6A) enables the High Court in cases where it is of opinion that the application was frivolous or vexatious, to award such amount by way of reasonable costs in the High Court and Court below as it thinks fit"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922). By the Amendment Act of 1932, a maximum limit (Rs. 250) has been fixed to be the amount of compensation that may be awarded.

The words "any person who has opposed the application" are comprehensive enough to include the Crown or the Local Government. The words also include any private individual who has an interest in the subject-matter of the complaint, as also all or any of the accused persons—Kanver Sen, 52 All 263, 1930 A.L.J. 209, 1930 Cr.C. 319 (321, 322).

Where an application for transfer has been made without any justification, is not supported by any good or cogent reason and is found to be vexatious and made with the view of causing delay or otherwise hindering the course of justice, an order should be made under this sub-section for payment of costs by the applicant—Sadasheo, 34 Cr L J. 1035, 145 I.C. 445, A.I.R. 1933 Nag 201, 1933 Cr.C. 97, 29 N.L.R. 338. Where the petition for transfer contained allegations attributing to the trying Magistrate remarks which, if true, would undoubtedly render him unfit to be a person to continue to exercise judicial functions and also statements regarding the Magistrate's conduct of the proceedings which, if believed, would cast serious reflection on the Magistrate's ability to preside over a criminal trial, the High Court assessed the compensation at the maximum amount allowable under this sub-section—Kali Charan, 35 Cr.L.J. 1056, 150 I.C. 79, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 120.

"(8) If, in the course of an inquiry or trial or before the commencement of the hearing of any appeal, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending his intention to make an application under this section in respect of such case or appeal, the Court shall adjourn the case or postpone the appeal for such period as will afford a reasonable time for the application to be made and an order to be obtained thereon."

The subject-matter of this sub-section has now been divided into two sub-sections, (8) and (10), of which sub-sec. (8) provides for an adjournment during the inquiry or trial, and sub-sec. (10) refers to the appellate stage.

The main changes are the following :—

Firstly, the application for adjournment, during an inquiry or trial must be made before the defence closes its case. Formerly, this could be done at any stage during the inquiry or trial. "We recognize the necessity of greater safeguards against the abuse of the section than those now existing. We think that provision should be made for a compulsory adjournment if a party notifies his intention to move for a transfer at any

Rang. 454 (456), 178 I.C. 942, 40 Cr.L.J. 154; 11 R.R. 287. An application for transfer should be made by motion supported by affidavit or affirmation and not by a letter addressed by the Sessions Judge to the High Court—Zahiruddin, 1 Cal. 219; Abdool Sobhan, 8 Cal. 63; Ahmed Baksh, 1894 A.W.N. 154. An application for transfer which is not supported by an affidavit, cannot be entertained—Ujagar Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 356, 37 P.L.R. 80, 37 Cr.L.J. 510, 161 I.C. 921, 1936 Cr.C. 297. An application for transfer should not be made by a mere written statement prepared by Counsel but should be made by an application supported by affidavit or by a properly verified petition—*Amrita Lal v. See also Sadasheo, supra.

See sec. 537 and the notes thereunder.

Counter-affidavit by District Magistrate:—When an application for transfer is made on the ground of partiality of the Magistrate before whom the case is pending, it is highly improper for the District Magistrate to make an affidavit swearing as to the impartiality of that Magistrate—Pandurang, 25 Bom. 179.

Sub-section (5)—Compensation:—This sub-section as well as sub-section (6A) has been amended by the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XXI of 1932; the main amendment being the substitution of the word "compensation" for "costs". The reason is thus stated: "Applications in the High Court are opposed usually by or on behalf of the Legal Remembrancer who is paid by salary and not by fees, which makes it difficult

The amendments made in sub-sections (5) and (6A) are aimed at meeting this criticism"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (Gazette of India, 1932, Part V, p. 198).

Costs of transfer:—When the case is transferred at the instance of the accused, he will be ordered to pay all the complainant's costs incurred before the Magistrate from whose file the transfer was ordered—*Girish Chandra v. Sub-section (6A):—This sub-section has been added by the Amendment Act of 1923 to provide a safeguard against frivolous, vexatious or dilatory applications "We recognise that the provisions of the section, as they stand, have lent themselves to gross abuse, and therefore we feel that great safeguards are necessary. For these reasons, the new sub-section (6A) enables the High Court in cases where it is of opinion that the application was frivolous or vexatious, to award such amount by way of reasonable costs in the High Court and Court below as it thinks fit"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922). By the Amendment Act of 1932, a maximum limit (Rs. 250) has been fixed to be the amount of compensation that may be awarded.

The words "any person who has opposed the application" are comprehensive enough to include the Crown or the Local Government. Where an application for transfer has been made without any justification, is not supported by any good or cogent reason and is found to be vexatious and made with the view of causing delay or otherwise hindering the course of justice, an order should be made under this sub-section for payment of costs by the applicant—Sadasheo, 34 Cr.L.J. 1035, 145 I.C. 445, A.I.R. 1933 Nag 201, 1933 Cr.C. 97, 29 N.L.R. 338. Where the petition for transfer contained allegations attributing to the trying Magistrate remarks which, if true, would undoubtedly render him unfit to be a person to continue to exercise judicial functions and also statements regarding the Magistrate's conduct of the proceedings which, if believed, would cast serious reflection on the Magistrate's ability to preside over a criminal trial, the High Court assessed the compensation at the maximum amount allowable under this sub-section—Kali Charan, 35 Cr.L.J. 1056, 150 I.C. 79, A.I.R. 1935 Pat 120.

"(8) If, in the course of an inquiry or trial or before the commencement of the hearing of any appeal, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending his intention to make an application under this section in respect of such case or appeal, the Court shall adjourn the case or postpone the appeal for such period as will afford a reasonable time for the application to be made and an order to be obtained thereon."

The subject-matter of this sub-section has now been divided into two sub-sections, (8) and (10), of which sub-sec. (8) provides for an adjournment during the inquiry or trial, and sub-sec. (10) refers to the appellate stage.

The main changes are the following:—

Firstly, the application for adjournment, during an inquiry or trial must be made before the defence closes its case. Formerly, this could be done at any stage during the inquiry or trial. "We recognize the necessity of greater safeguards against the abuse of the section than those now existing. We think that provision should be made for compulsory adjournment if a party notifies his intention to move for a transfer."

time before the arguments begin, that is to say, at any time before the defence closes its case"—Report of the Select Committee (Gazette of India, 1932, Part V, p. 199). But Mohammad Noor, J., observed: "The learned Magistrate has invited this Court to express its opinion whether an application for adjournment under sec. 526 is entertainable after the defence witnesses have been examined but before the close of the argument. I do not think I am called upon to decide this point in this case as it does not arise; any expression of my opinion will be purely obiter dictum. It may, however, be said with some justification that if the defence argument has not concluded, the defence case has not been closed. I am not prepared to say that there cannot be a case in which the accused cannot justly say that the Court became prejudiced during the hearing of the argument"—Ishar Singh v. Shama Dusadh, 38 Cr.L.J. 484 (487), 167 I.C. 881, 17 P.L.T. 627, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 131, 3 B.R. 379, 9 R.P. 449.

Secondly, the applicant is now required to execute a bond. This provision is added as a check upon applications not made bona fide. "We recognize that the power at present enjoyed of paralysing the action of the Court by repeatedly notifying an intention to make an application, sometimes without any intention of following up the notification with an application, must be checked"—Report of the Select Committee. In the case of Neamat Shah, 59 Cal. 481, 35 C.W.N. 1112, 1931 Cr.C. 810, Lord Williams, J. criticised the old sub-section (8) with the following remarks: "The position created by sec. 526 (8) is truly amazing one effect being that no accused person can be convicted except with his own consent. No discretion is given to the Court by the section. If the accused notifies his intention to make an application to the High Court for transfer, the trial must be adjourned immediately. There is no limit to the number of such notifications which may be given during the course of any trial."

Thirdly, the proviso to sub-section (8) has been added as an additional safeguard against several applications by several accused. Lord Williams, J. observed in the Calcutta case cited above: The abuse of process which sub-section (8) makes possible may be aggravated to any extent, when there is a joint trial, and each accused person is represented by a different pleader." The Select Committee has accordingly added the proviso with the following remarks: "We have accordingly provided that when once a party has secured an adjournment, the Court shall not be bound to adjourn on any subsequent intimation of an intention to apply for a transfer made by that same party, and that where there are more than one accused, it shall not be possible for different accused by a series of successive intimations to secure a series of adjournments." This was also decided in Peshori Lal, 1931 Cr.C. 530 (531), 32 Cr.L.J. 1229, 1931 Cr.C. 530, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 274, Ind Rul 1931 Lah. 978. The words "or the accused" apply to the accused as a whole, and, although any further incident might give rise to a fresh application, it would equally give rise to a fresh application on the part of the same applicant provided always that there is something to justify or form the foundation of the application—Peshori Lal, supra.

Explanation to sub-section(9):—"We note that the inherent powers of the Court to adjourn a case is not affected, but we have inserted an Explanation after sub-sec. (9) of sec. 526 to make this absolutely clear"—Report of the Select Committee.

Scope:—The words "inquiry or trial" in this sub-section do not apply to a transfer application pending before the Magistrate, but are only intended to apply to inquiries to trials which are specially referred to in the earlier portion of the Code—Muhammad Sharif v. Hari Prasad, 5 Pat. 229, 27 Cr.L.J. 1214.

It is not correct to say that an inquiry or trial does not commence before the Magistrate begins to record evidence; nor is it correct to say that the inquiry commences with the lodging of the complaint or the issue of the processes. It really commences with the appearance of the accused on such processes to answer the charges. If, therefore, the accused appeared before the Magistrate and applied for adjournment before he proceeded to record evidence, the application was not premature and the Magistrate was bound to adjourn the case—Pandurang Pundalik, 33 Bom.L.R. 668, 32 Cr.L.J. 1161 (1162), Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 473, 134 I.C. 361, 1931 Cr.C. 726, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 411.

This clause applies only to inquiries under Ch. 8 or 18, but not to proceedings under sec. 145. Probably the Legislature thought that proceedings which are quasi-civil in nature, such as inquiries into the possession of land, do not require the exercise of the very summary powers which clause (8) confers—Loka Mahton v. Kali Singh, 6 Pat. 553, 28 Cr.L.J. 1035; Jamir Sheikh v. Murari, 57 Cal. 869, 34 C.W.N. 59 (60), 50 C.L.J. 331, 1929 Cr.C. 522.

This sub-section applies only where the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case is pending his intention to make an application for transfer to the High Court under sec. 526 and the onus lies on the applicants in revision to show that the information required by this sub-section was given to the Magistrate—Ram Kunuar, 32 Cr.L.J. 363, 129 I.C. 259, 1930 A.L.J. 1320, A.I.R. 1930 All. 835, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 131, 1930 Cr.C. 1232.

Adjournment compulsory:—Under the present amendment, as well as under the amendment of 1923, an adjournment is compulsory, except that a Sessions Court may refuse to adjourn (sub-section 9) when it is of opinion that the application has been unreasonably delayed.

The Magistrate is bound to adjourn the case, and while granting the adjournment he has no power to impose any condition—Dayawanti v. Bitanand, 30 P.L.R. 657, 30 Cr.L.J. 1048. After an application is made under this clause, the Magistrate is bound to adjourn the case at once, and cannot proceed with the case and record any evidence at all—Sartaj Singh, 22 A.L.J. 430, 26 Cr.L.J. 139 (140); Chiranj Lal, 9 Lah. 537, 29 Cr.L.J. 815. If the Magistrate refuses to grant the adjournment and proceeds with the case, all the subsequent proceedings are vitiated, and the trial becomes illegal and not merely irregular—Ghulam Rasul, 29 Cr.L.J. 536, 109 I.C. 360, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 850; In re Nathan, 53 Mad. 165, 57 M.L.J. 763, 31 Cr.L.J. 715, 124 I.C. 501, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 187, 1930 Cr.C. 187, 30 M.L.W. 883, Ind. Rul. 1930 Mad. 693; Luttur, 1930 A.L.J. 547, 108 I.C. 569, A.I.R. 1928 All. 268, 31 Cr.L.J. 590 (591), 1930 Cr.C. 375; Pandurang, 33 Bom.L.R. 668, 32 Cr.L.J. 1161 (1162), Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 473, 134 I.C. 361, 1931 Cr.C. 726, A.I.R. 1931 Bom. 411; Yakoob Kassim, 36 Cr.L.J. 885, 156 I.C. 223, A.I.R. 1935 Sind. 27, 1935 Cr.C. 121. The Calcutta High Court seems to have taken a contrary view in Ncamat, 35 C.W.N. 1112 (1121), 134 I.C. 1057, 1931 Cr.C. 810, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 626, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 17, 55 C.L.J. 34, 59 Cal. 478, 33 Cr.L.J. 31, where it has been laid down that the refusal of the Magistrate to adjourn is an irregularity which can be cured by applying the provisions of sec. 537, Cr. P. C., and that the High Court is not bound to set aside the proceedings as invalid where the notification was given mala fide for the purpose of delay and to defeat the ends of justice, the accused had no intention of applying to the High Court and no grounds existed upon which an order for transfer could have been made. See also Ram Piara Lal, 32 Cr.L.J. 146 (147), 128 I.C. 543, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 882, 1931 Cr.C. 978, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 79.

But it is not correct to say that as an effect of the application the Magistrate ceases to have jurisdiction in the case. In spite of the application he can pass emergent order which the law requires him to pass, e.g., an order under sub-sec. (3) of sec. 117—Haji Baquid, 26 A.L.J. 398, 29 Cr.L.J. 448 (449), 108 I.C. 569, A.I.R. 1928 All. 268. Excepting such emergent orders, the Court cannot pass any other order, e.g., an order directing the accused to appear on the next day and forfeiting the recognizance bond on default of appearance—Pandurang Pundalik, supra. This does not mean that the trial Magistrate loses seisin of the case by reason of his having granted adjournment or is rendered incapable of even disposing of miscellaneous applications for grant of copies, inspection of records, etc.—Hari Chand, 32 Cr.L.J. 253 (255), 129 I.C. 193, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 59, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 129, 1931 Cr.C. 139.

An application for adjournment cannot, however, be granted if no ground is stated therein and the application is made at a very late stage, e.g., after the evidence on behalf of the opposite party has been closed—Jamir Sheikh v. Murari, 57 Cal. 869, C.W.N. 59 (61), 1929 Cr.C. 522; or if it is made after the arguments have and when nothing remains to be 'done' by the Court except to deliver judgment—Chockalingam, 52 Mad. 355, 30 Cr.L.J. 908; Murugappa, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 163, 1935 M.W.N. 1281, 160 I.C. 104, 43 M.L.W. 257, 37 Cr.L.J. 223. But the question whether there is or is not good ground upon which the High Court might order a transfer is not a question for the Judge himself—Yakoob Kassim, supra. The present amendment expressly provides that the application must be made before the defence closes its case.

When an application is made under this clause, it is not for the Magistrate to decide whether the applicant has an apprehension that he will not receive a fair trial at his hands. That is the function of the High Court. The Magistrate is bound to adjourn the case, unless in his judgment he is bona fide satisfied that the application is a mere pretext to obtain an adjournment, and that the applicant has no intention of making an application for transfer, in which case the application must be refused—Jatoi, 20 S.L.R. 122, 27 Cr.L.J. 935 (1937); Nathoomal, 20 S.L.R. 54, 27 Cr.L.J. 40 (42, 43). Once the petitioner had informed the trial Magistrate that she intended to apply for transfer, he should have stayed all further proceedings immediately. It was not for him to consider whether the application for transfer was frivolous or not—Mt. Lalan, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 20. The present amendment provides an additional safeguard by requiring the applicant to execute a bond.

A refusal to adjourn the case without just cause is by itself a sufficient ground for transfer of the case—Waliid Khan, 26 A.L.J. 1321, 29 Cr.L.J. 671; Jatoi, supra; Shewa Uka, 3 S.L.R. 155, 10 Cr.L.J. 570; Olandas, 8 S.L.R. 341, 16 Cr.L.J. 476; Nenumal v. Fida Ali, 34 Cr.L.J. 1144, 146 I.C. 20, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 307, 1933 Cr.C. 1041; Baliram v. Marubai, 37 Cr.L.J. 1054, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 233, 164 I.C. 165, where it has also been laid down that sec. 526 (8), Cr. P. C., is mandatory; Narayan v. Bala, 37 Cr.L.J. 1146, 165 I.C. 425, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 146, 1936 Cr.C. 693; Janki Prasad v. Mst. Sukh Rani, 1938 N.L.J. 36. The fact that the application is defective or not in proper form is no ground for declining to adjourn the case—Janki Prasad v. Mst. Sukh Rani, supra.

The postponement should be for a reasonable time to allow the party to move the High Court for transfer. A postponement for too short a time is useless—Virasami, 19 Mad 375. An adjournment for one day is quite inadequate—Pandurang Pundalik, 23 Bom.L.R. 668, 32 Cr.L.J. 1161 (1162). An adjournment for six days is not a reasonable time within which to move the High Court—Syed Ahmad, 2 Weir 686.

Adjournment costs:—See Note 990 and Note 1388 under the heading "Explanation".

Where the hasty action of the Magistrate in not giving a short adjournment in accordance with the provisions of this clause resulted in the transfer of the case, the High Court directed that the costs of the complainant in the future would be borne by the Crown—Baliram v. Marubai, supra.

Any party interested:—See Note 1385. It is true that sub-sec. (8) before amendment referred to "the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused" as persons competent to move a Court to stay proceedings under sec. 526 (8), Cr. P. C., but that section has been amended and for the words "the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused" the words "any party interested" have been substituted, and this amendment was made not in order to bring sub-sec. (8) in harmony with sub-sec. (3) in which these words already occurred but to cover cases under Chap. VIII where the informant wishes to move the Court. Therefore, the word "party" within the meaning of sec. 526 (8), Cr. P. C., does include an informant under sec. 107. Cr. P. C.—Om Radhe v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 803 (804), 183 I.C. 460, 12 R.S. 55, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 238, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 113.

If a doubt exists whether the applicant is or is not a party within the meaning of sub-sec. (8) of sec. 526, the Magistrate should err on the safe side and grant the adjournment, for otherwise, he may find all the proceedings from the date of his refusal declared illegal—Om Radhe v. Emp., supra, following Surat, 29 Cal. 211, 6 C.W.N. 251.

Before the defence closes its case:—See Notes above under the heading "Change in the law."

Section 526 (8), Cr. P. C., clearly lays down that the intimation of an intention to make an application under this section must be made before the defence closes its case. Where an application intimating such an intention is made not only after the defence has closed its case but after the judgment has been written and signed, it is not maintainable—Gian Singh-Munsha Singh v. Amar Singh-Jaimal Singh, 40 Cr L J. 288, 179 I.C. 990, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 21, 40 P.L.R. 996, I.L.R. 1938 Lah. 567.

1388. Magistrate proceeding with the case after issue of rule for transfer:—When an application was made under sub-sec. (8), and the Magistrate without passing any orders thereon proceeded with the case, and even though a telegram to the effect that a rule nisi by the High Court staying proceedings had been issued was shown to the Magistrate, he examined some more witnesses for the prosecution and committed the accused, it was held that the action on the part of the Magistrate was enough to show a bias, and consequently a transfer was necessary—Wahed Molla v. Basaraddi, 11 C.W.N. 507; Surya Naram, 5 C.W.N. 110 (113); Ratnessari, 2 C.W.N. 498 (500); Hem Chandra v. Mathur, 16 C.W.N. 1031, 13 Cr.L.J. 766. Magistrates should act with every loyalty towards the orders of the High Court, and if they are told that an order has been made by the High Court staying further proceedings they ought then and there to hold their hands, unless they have good grounds for believing that the information given to them is false. If the Magistrate entertained any doubt about the truth of the telegram, he could have satisfied himself by a telegram to the Registrar of the High Court—Ratneswari, 2 C.W.N. 498 (501). Where, upon the High Court having issued a rule staying further proceedings, the petitioner sent a telegram which was laid before the trying Magistrate, but the petitioner having failed to appear on the date previously fixed, the Magistrate issued a warrant upon the petitioner, it was held that the sending of the telegram did not in any way absolve the petitioner from the obligation to appear before the Court on the date fixed, and the issue of the warrant upon the petitioner was no ground for transfer of the case—Chandi Prasad, 17 C.W.N. 536 (537), 14 Cr L J 823. But where further proceedings having been stayed by the High Court's order, one of the complainants appeared before the Magistrate on the date fixed for hearing and appraised him of that order, but the Magistrate instead of staying further proceedings issued a warrant for the arrest of the complainant who had not appeared, held that the Magistrate's action was unjust and hostile to the complainants and the case must be transferred—Fazal Ahmad v. Abdulla, 7 Lah.L.J. 571, 26 P.L.R. 701, 27 Cr.L.J. 104.

Where the High Court granted a transfer on the 26th, and on the 27th a telegram to that effect was shown to the Magistrate, and the Magistrate adjourned proceedings till the 30th so that the order of the High Court might reach him; and on the 30th the Magistrate proceeded with the case and convicted the accused, and on the 31st the order of the High Court reached the Magistrate, it was held that the Magistrate's action though not illegal was indiscreet, in as much as he did not wait sufficiently for the order of the High Court to reach him—Vinayak, Ratanlal 46.

Stay of proceedings:—When the High Court admits an application for transfer, invariably there is an order of stay of proceedings. Even if the order is not expressly made it is implied, because it will be meaningless to issue a Rule and send for the record and then allow the proceedings in the lower Court to continue—Ishar Singh v. Shama Dasadh, 38 Cr.L.J. 484 (487), 167 I.C. 881, 17 P.L.T. 627, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 131, 3 B.R. 379, 9 R.P. 449.

With regard to stay applications in criminal matters, the stay order operates only from the date on which the order is communicated to the Court whose proceedings are stayed. But the order of prohibition does not take away the jurisdiction of the trial Court, it merely suspends it. If, therefore, the order has not been received the Court does not lose its jurisdiction because the order has been passed. It, therefore, follows that any act done after the order of stay is passed is still valid unless the order of the higher Court has been disobeyed. This reasoning would not, however, apply to an application for transfer. The ordinary rule is that any order operates from the date on which it is passed, the rule with regard to stay proceedings and injunctions being exceptions to that general rule. The order of transfer must, however, operate from the date on which the order is passed and, therefore, any Court which continues to do any act after the order is passed even though a copy of the order has not been received by it, is acting without jurisdiction. Nevertheless it does not follow from the mere fact that the Court had no jurisdiction, that its order is void. Sec. 531, Cr. P. C., would apply to a case of this kind and so prevent the passing of this order without jurisdiction from being void. The whole principle underlying the various provisions of Chap. XLV is that no order or sentence shall be void on the mere ground of some irregularity or want of jurisdiction, unless it leads to a miscarriage of justice or prejudices the accused. Therefore the trial and conviction of an accused cannot, in the absence of a miscarriage of justice, be set aside on the ground that the trial was held after the case was ordered to be transferred from the Court which tried it—Borai Goundar v. Comr., Ootacamund Municipality, 39 Cr.L.J. 987, 178 I.C. 40, 1 L.R. 1938 Mad. 1003, 1938 M.W.N. 830, 48 M.L.W. 287, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 832, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 394, 1938 M.Cr.C. 239 referring to Venkatachalapathi v. Kameswanna, 41 Mad. 151, 43 I.C. 214, 22 M.L.T. 330, 33 M.L.J. 515, 6 M.L.W. 617, 1917 M.W.N. 785 (F.B.) and Adenama v. Venkatasubbayya, 56 Mad. 692, 144 I.C. 923, 1933 M.W.N. 789, 65 M.L.J. 137, 38 M.L.W. 133, 6 R.M. 26, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 627.

Forfeiture of the bond:—The applicant wanted to apply to the High Court for the transfer of a case from the Court of a Magistrate to another Court and the Magistrate granted an adjournment on getting a surety bond from him. Instead of applying to the High Court for transfer the applicant made an application to the Sub-divisional Magistrate who dismissed it. Thereafter he compromised the case resulting in the acquittal of the accused. The Magistrate then forfeited his bond for not moving the High Court. Held that there was no doubt that there was a technical non-compliance by the applicant with the terms of his bond, but that was not enough, that if he had gone to the High Court at once he might have been told to go to the Sub-divisional Magistrate, that the parties having compromised, there was no occasion for the applicant to go to the High Court and that, in these circumstances, the order of forfeiture of the bond should be set aside—Muhammad Ramzan, 37 Cr.L.J. 792, 162 I.C. 985, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 51, 1936 Cr.C. 489.

There is sufficient compliance with the bond if an application for transfer is made before the date mentioned in it. The fact that the application is returned because of a certain defect has not the effect of involving, as it were, a breach of the bond. There is no justification at all for directing forfeiture of the bond when the application is re-filed within time after remedying the defect—Narasimha Rao v. Emp., 1937 M.W.N. 576.

There is no doubt that the intention of the recently added provisions regarding the furnishing of security bonds is to prevent persons from obtaining adjournments in cases on the pretext of filing transfer applications where there is no real intention of making such applications, and it is equally clear that this intention is frustrated if an adjournment is obtained by a person who actually files an application in the High Court but fails to prosecute it. At the same time it cannot be denied that a person does carry out the letter of the terms of his bonds by filing an application in the High Court. If the intention of the law was that bonds should be furnished with the undertaking that not only applications should be filed but also that final orders should be obtained thereon, this should be more clearly expressed in the section itself and should also be clearly set out in the terms of the bonds themselves. Where, therefore, a person actually files an application for transfer in the High Court but does not prosecute it, his bond under this sub-section cannot be forfeited—Tara Singh v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 609, 175 I.C. 545, 10 R.L. 745, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 337.

The applicant was granted an adjournment on condition that he applied within a reasonable time to the High Court. He, through mistake but in good faith, first moved the local Court and there was some delay in moving the High Court. Held that he should, if his mistake was made for the first time, be pardoned for the delay and his bond should not be forfeited—Gajadhar Bhagchand v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 425, 174 I.C. 521, 10 R.S. 258, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 66.

Sub-section (9):—Under this sub-section the Sessions Court may refuse to adjourn when it is of opinion that the application has been unreasonably delayed. The reason is that "the calendars of Sessions Courts involving the convenience of jurors, assessors, and parties are peculiarly liable to be upset by the postponement of cases"—Statements of Objects and Reasons (1914).

In Sessions trials the provisions of sub-sec. (8) of this section are no doubt subject to the provisions of this sub-section, but unless the case falls strictly within the provisions of this sub-section the Judge is bound to grant time in accordance with the provisions of sub-sec. (8). In considering the question whether or not the applicant had ample opportunity before to file an application for transfer, regard must be had to the fact whether or not the ground on which the application for transfer is proposed to be based did exist earlier. Where an order adverse to the applicant is passed on the very date on which an adjournment is asked for with a view to move an application for transfer of the case on the ground of passing the said order, it is impossible to hold that the applicant had "reasonable opportunity" of applying for transfer of the case on an earlier date and the order of the Judge rejecting the application of the applicant for the postponement of the case cannot therefore be supported—Salag Ram v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 416 (419), 167 I.C. 515, A.I.R. 1937 All. 171, 1937 A.L.R. 201, 9 R.A. 550.

Explanation:—See Note 990. Under sec. 344, Cr. P. C., a Magistrate may adjourn a case on such terms as he thinks fit but where the adjournment is one which is covered by the provisions of sec. 526, sub-sec. (8), Cr. P. C., the Court has to grant it. It is true that the explanation to sub-sec. (9) says that nothing contained in sub-sec. (8) or sub-sec. (9) restricts the powers of a Court under sec. 344, Cr. P. C., but at the same time it is difficult to see how a Court can impose terms for granting an adjournment when it is bound to grant that adjournment whether the terms are accepted or not. Costs should not be imposed in a case of this kind—Salek Chand v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 142, 166 I.C. 198, A.I.R. 1936 All. 851, 1936 A.L.J. 1123, 1936 A.L.R. 1015, 1936 Cr.C. 1110, 1 L.R. 1937 All. 161, 9 R.A. 369, following Sorabji M. Shroff v. Erachshaw B. Katrak, 56 Bom. 536, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 470, 1932 Cr.C. 598, 139 I.C. 577, 33 Cr.L.J. 802, 34 Bom.L.R. 1106, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 509. What has been laid down in Salek Chand v. Emp., supra, is that a conditional order for an adjournment under sec. 526 is not justifiable as a Magistrate is bound to adjourn under sub-sec. (8) of that section. A Court cannot, of course, pass a conditional order of adjournment because it has to pass such an order, but it may, when passing its order of adjournment, direct that the party whose application has necessitated adjournment shall pay costs of the opposite party—Ram Rakshpal v. Ram Nath, 39 Cr.L.J. 352, 173 I.C. 385, A.I.R. 1938 All. 112, 1937 A.L.J. 1356, 1937 A.W.R. (H.C.) 1226, 1 L.R. 1938 All. 233, 1938 A Cr.C. 4, 1938 A.L.R. 133, 10 R.A. 481.

The Magistrate has no power to order the payment of subsistence allowances for the witnesses by the accused when he makes an application for an adjournment to move the High Court for transfer—Lay Tin Ngar v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 963, 170 I.C. 841, 10 R.R. 105, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 311.

Sub-section (10):—This sub-section relates to an application for adjournment of an appeal, which was originally provided for in sub-sec. (8), but the application must be made before the argument for the admission of an appeal begins, instead of before the commencement of the hearing. The applicant will have to execute a bond, as in an inquiry or trial.

526A. (1) Where any person subject to the Naval Discipline Act [other than a person to whom that Act applies by virtue of the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934] or to the High Court to transfer for trial to itself in certain cases.

Army Act or to the Air Force Act is accused of any offence such as is referred to in proviso (a) to section 41 of the Army Act, the Advocate General shall, if so instructed by the competent authority, apply to the High Court for the committal or transfer of the case to that High Court, and thereupon the High Court shall order that the case be committed for trial to or be transferred to itself and shall thereafter proceed to try the case by jury.

(2) The Central Government may, by notification in the Official Gazette, declare any officer to be competent authority for the purpose of issuing instructions under sub-section (1) in regard to any class of cases specified in the notification.

This section has been inserted by sec. 32 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923.

The words "(other than a person...Navy Discipline Act, 1934)" have been added by the Amending Act, 1934 (Act XXXV of 1934).

In sub-section (2) the words "Central Government" and "Official Gazette" have been substituted for "Governor-General in Council" and "Gazette of India" respectively by sec. 4 of the Government of India Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

527. (1) *The Provincial Government may, by notification in the official Gazette, direct the transfer of any particular * * case or appeal from the High Court to another High Court, or from any Criminal Court subordinate to one High Court, to any other Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction subordinate to another High Court, whenever it appears to it that such transfer will promote the ends of justice, or tend to the general convenience of parties or witnesses :*

Provided that no case or appeal shall be transferred to a High Court or other Court in another Province without the consent of the Provincial Government of that Province.

(2) The Court to which such case or appeal is transferred shall deal with the same as if it had been originally instituted in, or presented to, such Court.

The word "criminal" has been omitted from this section by sec. 146 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923.

The words "Provincial Government" and "official Gazette" have been substituted in place of "Governor-General in Council" and "Gazette of India" respectively, and the proviso to sub-section (1) has been inserted, by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Sections 185 and 527:—See Notes under section 185.

528. (1) Any Sessions Judge may withdraw any case from, or recall any case which he had made over to, any Assistant Sessions Judge subordinate to him.

(2) Any Chief Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate may withdraw any case from, or recall any case which he has made over to, any Magistrate subordi- nate to him, and may inquire into or try such case himself, or refer it for inquiry or trial to any other such Magistrate competent to inquire into or try the same.

(3) The Provincial Government may authorize the District Magistrate to withdraw from any Magistrate subordinate to him either such classes of cases as he thinks proper, or particular classes of cases.

Power to authorize District Magistrate to withdraw classes of cases.

(4) Any Magistrate may recall any case made over by him under section 192, sub-section (2) to any other Magistrate and may inquire into or try such case himself.

(5) A Magistrate making an order under this section shall record in writing his reasons for making the same.

(6) The head of a Village under the Madras Village-Police Regulation, 1816, or the Madras Village-Police Regulation, 1821, is a Magistrate for the purposes of this section.

Change:—Sub-section (1) and (4) have been added, and sub-section (6) has been slightly amended, by sec. 147 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923.

The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by section 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Sub-section (1):—"In order to facilitate arrangements for the disposal of sessions business, it is proposed to empower Sessions Judges to withdraw or recall cases from the file of Assistant Sessions Judges. This question does not arise in the case of appeals as they are heard by Sessions or Additional Sessions Judges"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1921).

This sub-section empowers a Sessions Judge to withdraw or recall any case from an Assistant Sessions Judge, but not from an Additional Sessions Judge. There is a distinction made between the position of an Additional Sessions Judge and that of an Assistant Sessions Judge. Section 17 (3) enacts that Assistant Sessions Judge shall be subordinate to the Sessions Judge but does not enact that the Additional Sessions Judge shall be subordinate to him—Daulat Ram, 1931 A.L.J. 591, 33 Cr.L.J. 158 (160), 1931 Cr.C. 707 (708, 709), 135 I.C. 252, A.I.R. 1931 All. 435, Ind. Ryl. 1932 All. 76.

There is nothing in this Code which gives jurisdiction to the Sessions Judge to transfer an appeal from the file of an Additional Sessions Judge to his own file. much less an Additional Sessions Judge has jurisdiction to transfer an appeal from the file of another Additional Sessions Judge to the file of the Sessions Judge. Even sec. 17 (4) does not give power to the Additional Sessions Judge to make the transfer, because the power under that section can be exercised only in urgent cases and only when there is an application, oral or written, preferred by some party—Daulat Ram, supra.

The powers of a Sessions Judge to make a transfer are expressly set out in this clause, and there is no further "inherent" power of a Sessions Judge, viz., power to transfer a case or appeal from an Additional Sessions Judge's Court to his own Court—Daulat Ram, supra.

1389. Sub-sec. (2)—Dist. Magistrate and Sub-divisional Magistrate:—Under this section, the District Magistrate and the Sub-divisional Magistrate within his sub-division have co-ordinate jurisdiction. The District Magistrate cannot set aside a section. If the District Magistrate is of opinion that the order of the Sub-divisional Magistrate is not legal or proper, he can take action under sec. 435 or 438. He can interfere with the transfer made by the Sub-divisional Magistrate only on the ground of expediency; i.e., he can withdraw the case from the Magistrate to whom it was transferred by the S. D. Magistrate, on the ground that it is inexpedient that that Magistrate should try the case; and the District Magistrate may then try the case himself or refer it to some other Magistrate—Raghunatha Pandaram, 26 Mad. 130, 2 Weir 689; Kishori Lal, 30 Cr.L.J. 654, 116 I.C. 751, A.I.R. 1928 All. 546. See also Ilaf Hossain, 17 I.C. 414, 13 Cr.L.J. 782. Magistrates of co-ordinate jurisdiction should not interfere with each other's jurisdiction. Where a District Magistrate acts on his own initiative in transferring a criminal case, his order is not vitiated by the fact that another Magistrate of co-ordinate authority (e.g., the Sub-divisional Magistrate) has refused to make the transfer. But, if the District Magistrate examines the reasons given by the S. D. Magistrates and finds them to be wrong, that amounts to interfering by way of appeal, and the order of transfer passed by him is not sustainable in law—Narayanasamy v. Kuppusamy, 5 L.W. 372, 18 Cr.L.J. 57 (58). But in Thaman v. Alagiri, 14 Mad. 399, it has been held that a Magistrate subordinate to the Sub-divisional Magistrate is also subordinate to the District Magistrate within the meaning of this section, and the District Magistrate can set aside an order of transfer made by the Sub-divisional Magistrate, if he is of opinion that there were no sufficient grounds for the transfer, and can retransfer the case to the file of the original Magistrate from whom it was transferred by the S. D. Magistrate. The better view seems to be that the District Magistrate and the Sub-divisional Magistrate have equal authority in withdrawing cases from Subordinate Magistrates and the District Magistrate should not exercise powers of an Appellate Court as regards orders passed by the Sub-divisional Magistrate. If he considers the Court to which the case is transferred by the Sub-divisional Magistrate not the proper Court for the trial of the case, for reasons to be stated by him, he should transfer the case to any Court which he thinks proper after notice to the parties concerned. While it is true that the District Magistrate has not appellate jurisdiction under this section, he has a concurrent jurisdiction and that jurisdiction is not barred merely because it has been exercised by the Sub-divisional Magistrate in the first instance—Sugnomal v. Photandas, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 237 (238), 38 Cr.L.J. 133, 166 I.C. 83, following Kishori Lal, supra. See also Ganpat, 38 Cr.L.J. 15, 165 I.C. 830, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 220, 1936 Cr.C. 937. Similarly, where a Sub-divisional Magistrate has refused to transfer certain criminal cases under sec. 528 at the instance of a party to the proceedings, it is nevertheless open to the District Magistrate at the request of the same party to transfer the cases, on any ground—Sethuraman v. Govindasawmy, 40 Mad. 791 (following Thaman v. Alagiri, 14 Mad. 399 and dissenting from 26 Mad 130).

But this section cannot be read as to imply that after a District Magistrate has transferred some cases from one file to the file to another Magistrate, a Sub-divisional Magistrate who is subordinate to the District Magistrate has jurisdiction to nullify that order by ordering a fresh transfer of the cases to his own file—Muhammad Akbar, 47 All. 288, 23 A.L.J. 133, 26 Cr.L.J. 538, A.I.R. 1925 All. 283, 85 I.C. 378.

A District Magistrate ought not to withdraw a case from the Court of a subordinate Magistrate to his own Court, merely out of a desire to inform his own mind as to the nature of the dispute which led to the criminal proceedings—Amrit Majhi, 46 Cal 854 (860), 23 C.W.N. 623.

An application made to the District Magistrate under sec. 144 (4), Cr. P. C., cannot be brought either under sec. 192 or 528, Cr. P. C., which deals with the subject of transfer of cases. So the order of the District Magistrate to whom the application was made transferring the application to a Sub-divisional Magistrate is bad—Mooka Pandaram v. Snnu Mutheriyar, 38 Cr.L.J. 125 (127), 166 I.C. 77, 1936 M.W.N. 1089, 44 M.L.W. 686, 71 M.L.J. 761.

Chief Presidency Magistrate:—The Chief Presidency Magistrate has under this section power to withdraw any case from one of the Presidency Magistrates and refer it for inquiry or trial to any other Presidency Magistrate—Nageswar, 1 Bom.L.R. 557. The Chief Presidency Magistrate has power to transfer to his own file a case which had been transferred to the Fourth Presidency Magistrate for disposal by the Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate who took cognizance of the offence—Mohini Melan v. Pandu Chaud, 51 Cal. 820, 28 C.W.N. 903, 26 Cr.L.J. 101.

Application if necessary:—There is nothing in this sub-section which disables the Magistrate from taking action unless he is set in motion by the petition of one of the parties. Orders of transfer are frequently made for reasons of administrative convenience and it is not the intention of the Legislature to make an application from either of the parties a necessary preliminary—Chakral v. Mt. Manjibai, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 205, 34 Cr.L.J. 801 (S.C.), 144 I.C. 881, 1933 Cr.C. 718.

Who can make the application:—There is nothing in the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code which would prevent any person from bringing facts to the notice of the District Magistrate which might suggest to that Magistrate that it was advisable to transfer a case from one Court to another. The mere fact that the District Magistrate received information on an application would not debar him from making an order for transfer if it appeared to be a proper order—Kamru Bigam v. Empu, 29 Cr.L.J. 878 (879), 177 I.C. 460, I.L.R. 1938 All 738, 1938 A.L.J. 703, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 477, 1938 A.Cr.C. 66, 1938 A.L.R. 764, 11 R.A. 198, A.I.R. 1938 All 517.

1390. Transfer:—Cases which can be transferred:—This section is applicable to—(1) proceedings under Chap. VIII—Dumendra, 8 Cal. 851; (2) proceedings under Chap. XII Satish v. Rajendra, 22 Cal. 898; Gurudas v. Ganendra, 2 C.L.J. 614; Raj Mohan v. Prasanna, 5 C.W.N. 686 and (3) proceedings under section 488—Gulam, 1905 P.R. 5.

The term "case" includes a proceeding upon a complaint as soon as the complaint has been received by the Magistrate who takes cognizance of the offence complained of. A case can be transferred even before the Magistrate decides to issue process against the accused—Asaram v. Bhagurath, 11 I.C. 621, 12 Cr.L.J. 437, 7 N.L.R. 97.

Case when can be transferred:—(1) A case may be transferred as soon as the complaint is filed and the Magistrate takes cognizance of the case and before he issues process. A person who apprehends that a complaint made against him will not be impartially tried by the Magistrate is entitled to have the case transferred even before issue of any process against him—Asaram v. Bhagurath, supra. But when a complaint has been dismissed by a Magistrate under sec. 203 and the Sessions Judge has directed further inquiry into the case, the District Magistrate cannot transfer the case from the file of that Magistrate to any other Magistrate—Brij Kishore v. Gopal, 11 C.W.N. 316, 5 Cr.L.J. 112. (2) A case cannot be transferred at a very late stage of the trial, when the prosecution evidence has been taken and all that remains to be done is to pass an order of commitment or discharge—Pakira, 2 Weir 691; or judgment—Fakira v. Goma, 37 Cr.L.J. 861, 163 I.C. 694, 18 N.L.J. 279. When a Magistrate, after hearing arguments and adjourning the case for judgment, was suddenly transferred to a place in the same district and the Additional District Magistrate thereupon transferred the case to that place so that the judgment might be pronounced by the Magistrate who had actually heard the arguments, held that it seems to follow from the language of sec. 528 (2) that however convenient it may be, in practice, to do what the Additional District Magistrate did, there is no warrant for this procedure in the Cr. P. C., and it must be held that the transfer is not legal—Murugappa, A.I.R. 1936 Mad. 163, 1935 M.W.N. 1221, 43 M.L.W. 257, 160 I.C. 104. (3) A District Magistrate ought not to transfer a case pending before a subordinate Magistrate after the whole of the prosecution evidence has been taken and the Magistrate has expressed an opinion that the evidence for the prosecution is not sufficient to support the charge—Nobo, 14 W.R. 12; Gobind Singh, 2 Pat. 333, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 228. (4) A case which has been disposed of by a competent authority cannot be withdrawn by the District Magistrate to his file held that —Shaik Siddik v. Shaik Chakauri, 17 C.W.N. 451, 14 Cr.L.J. 123 (124). But where several persons were charged before the police with rioting and only one of them was sent up by the police for trial and convicted, whereupon the complainant asked the Magistrate to issue process against the other persons, but the Magistrate refused, and the District Magistrate thereupon withdrew the case to his own file, it was held that the District Magistrate had ample jurisdiction to do so; the refusal of the subordinate Magistrate to issue process against the other accused did not dispose of the case finally, but the case was still pending before the subordinate Magistrate—Ayen Mahamad, 5 C.W.N. 488. (5) Where records of a case have been sent to a Head Assistant Magistrate under sec. 349 for enhancement of punishment, the case can be validly transferred at that stage by the District Magistrate to a Joint Magistrate—Chandra Sekaram, 2 Weir 690.

To whom cases may be transferred:—The Dist. Magistrate, after withdrawing a case, can refer it to any subordinate Magistrate. An additional District Magistrate is now subordinate to the District Magistrate under the express provision of sec 10 (3) and the latter can transfer cases to the former. The contrary ruling in Prakas Chunder, 34 Cal. 918 is no longer good law. When a Magistrate is gazetted to the office of the Chairman of the Municipal Board and takes charge of that office, he is thereby divested of his office as Magistrate. He ceases to be subordinate to the District Magistrate and the latter cannot transfer any criminal case to him for trial—Nathi Mal, 36 All. 513. Moreover, the case must be transferred to a Magistrate competent to try the case. A District Magistrate cannot transfer a case under sec. 107 to a second class Magistrate—Govind, 37 All. 20; or to a Magistrate who has no local jurisdiction over the matter—Konda Reddy, 41 Mad. 246.

A District Magistrate, after he has transferred a case from a Sub-divisional Magistrate, can retransfer the case to the same Sub-divisional Magistrate; such retransfer does not amount to revision of his own original order of transfer, as an order of transfer is not a final order—Ramalinga, 51 Mad. 610, 29 Cr.L.J. 734, 55 M.L.J. 217.

Transfer must be unconditional:—When a District Magistrate passes an order of transfer, he cannot impose a condition, without the consent of the accused, that the accused must not ask a de novo trial, this right of the accused being recognized by sec. 350 (1)(a)—Gowardhan v. Abbas Ali, 1930 Cr.C. 176 (178), 121 I.C. 374, 31 Cr.L.J. 257, 13 A.I.Cr.R. 347, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 168.

1391. Grounds of transfer:—The District Magistrate is bound to act generally on the principles underlying sec. 526, Cr. P. C.—Fakira v. Goma, 37 Cr.L.J. 861, 163 I.C. 694, 18 N.L.J. 279. The District Magistrate's powers under this section are very wide and undefined, and he should exercise the powers with due discretion and for really good reasons—1899 P.R. 13; Ghulam Mohiuddin, 20 Cr.L.J. 402; Jagashkar, 1929 Cr.C. 660, A.I.R. 1929 All. 932, 120 I.C. 261, 31 Cr.L.J. 30, 1930 A.L.J. 148. In this section there are no words which have the effect of fettering the discretion of the Chief Presidency Magistrate or other Magistrates in transferring cases from the files of Magistrates subordinate to them. At the same time it is beyond argument that before such an order is made the Magistrate must and should have reasons and those reasons should be such as the law regards as satisfactory from the point of view of principle—Shanta Ram v. Kanai Lal, 58 C.L.J. 214 (217), 35 Cr.L.J. 597, 148 I.C. 121, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 137, 1934 Cr.C. 177.

When personal allegations are made against a Magistrate as grounds of transfer, the District Magistrate must require strict proof of the allegations—In re Mohadhu, Ratanlal 590. To move a case from one Magistrate to another on grounds personal to such Magistrate is tantamount to a severe censure on such officer, and the very clearest grounds must exist before a transfer can be allowed—Shankar Abaji, 6 B.H.C.R. 69; and moreover the Magistrate must be given an opportunity of answering the allegations made against him by the applicant—Vedu Bapu v. Bhagwandas, 5 Bom.L.R. 28.

Where a Magistrate in the course of an investigation held a prolonged inquiry during which he made a number of notes, and collected a large amount of information which by reason of the way in which it was acquired he could not properly or legally consider in arriving at a judicial determination, and the notes made by the Magistrate were of such a nature that he ought to be examined as a witness in respect thereto, it was held that in such a case, the Magistrate ought not to try the case, but that it must be transferred to some other Magistrate—Hari Kishore v. Abdul, 21 Cal. 920. The fact that a Magistrate before whom a case is pending is also the Treasury Officer and has very little time at his disposal by virtue of his duties as a Treasury Officer is not a sufficient ground for directing a transfer of a case from his Court—Ghulam Moh.uddin, 20 Cr.L.J. 402, 51 I.C. 162. Where a Magistrate tried and convicted an accused in a case and expressed an opinion that the evidence of the accused was not believable, it was held that the expressed opinion in itself was no ground for a transfer of another case against the same accused by a different complainant under a different set of facts—Hayat Khan, 4 P.L.W. 21, 19 Cr.L.J. 121. The fact that the trial of a case before a Magistrate extended for a long time (e.g., 3 months) is not a vital ground for withdrawing the case from the file of the Magistrate—Jewraj v. Dullabji, 19 Cr.L.J. 119, 43 I.C. 407 (Pat.).

1392. Recording reasons:—See sub-section (5). The reasons for transfer of a case from one Magistrate to another must be recorded—Mahadhu, Ratanlal 590; Sardara, 5 Lah.L.J. 230; Dwarka Das, 32 Cr.L.J. 492, 130 I.C. 330, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 29, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 266, 32 P.L.R. 356, 1931 Cr.C. 92 (93); Gowardhan v. Abbas, 1930 Cr.C. 176, 121 I.C. 374, 31 Cr.L.J. 257, 13 A.I.Cr.R. 347, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 168; Venkatachalam v. Chairman, 16 Cr.L.J. 626 (Mad.), 30 I.C. 450; Mahomed Din v. Umra, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 649; Ahmad Chibhir, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 42, 37 Cr.L.J. 545, 161 I.C. 939, 1936 Cr.C. 289; and an omission to record reasons renders the order of transfer liable to be set aside—Venkata Reddy, 1924 M.W.N. 873, 26 Cr.L.J. 221. But the Calcutta, Patna, Lahore, Nagpur and Bombay High Courts are opinion that a failure to record the reasons will not vitiate the proceedings unless it has prejudiced the accused—Prakas Chunder, 34 Cal. 918; Mahomed Sharif v. Hari Prasad, 5 Pat. 229, 27 Cr.L.J. 1214; Shripad, 52 Bom. 151, 29 Cr.L.J. 317 (319); Hari Ram v. Allah Bakhsh, 34 Cr.L.J. 630, 143 I.C. 474, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 385, 1933 Cr.C. 639, 34 P.L.R. 577, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 358; Hari Chand, 34 Cr.L.J. 1174, 146 I.C. 166, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 807, 1933 Cr.C. 1040; Chotemiya v. Asrafmiya, 37 Cr.L.J. 1006, 164 I.C. 692, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 181, I.L.R. 1936 Nag. 87, 1936 Cr.C. 705. Where by virtue of a Government order the District Magistrate had been directed to withdraw all cases in which complaints had been made against a police officer, the omission to record reasons therefor was a mere irregularity and did not vitiate the subsequent proceedings—Dukki Kewat, 28 All. 421.

The method of giving reasons by reference to other papers is inconvenient and is not to be recommended. But where the Magistrate applied his mind to the questions requiring his consideration and the order which he made was made in the exercise of a discretion neither capricious nor arbitrary, there is no necessity of interfering upon this ground—Uddomal v. Mt. Majnubai, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 205, 34 Cr.L.J. 861 (823), 116 I.C. 881, 1933 Cr.C. 718.

A.I.R. 1928 Mad. 560, 55 M.L.J. 217, 28 M.L.W. 303, 29 Cr.L.J. 734; Mahomed Din v. Umra, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 649; Udhomal v. Mt. Majnibai, supra; Jageshwar v. Emp., 1930 A.L.J. 148, 120 I.C. 261, A.I.R. 1929 All. 932, 1929 Cr.C. 660, 31 Cr.L.J. 30, Ind. Rul. 1930 All. 37. See also Ahmad Chibhir, A.I.R. 1936 Sind 42, 37 Cr.L.J. 545, 1936 Cr.C. 289, 161 I.C. 939; Fakira v. Goma, 37 Cr.L.J. 861, 163 I.C. 694, 18 N.L.J. 279. Where a transfer is made at a late stage of the trial (e.g., when all the witnesses have been examined), the Magistrate does not exercise a sound discretion in not giving notice to the complainant or to the accused—Syed Lala Mian, 6 M.L.T. 14, 9 Cr.L.J. 407; Mahadhu, Ratanlal 590. Where at the instance of the complainant a Sub-divisional Magistrate after hearing the parties has transferred a case from the file of one Sub-Magistrate to that of another, it is incumbent upon the District Magistrate when retransferring the case at the instance of the accused, to give notice to the complainant—Manikkam, 39 M.L.J. 714, 60 I.C. 55, 22 Cr.L.J. 199.

But in several other cases it has been held that the issue of a notice is not mandatory, and the want of notice is not an illegality but a mere impropriety. The question of propriety is one to be decided on the facts of each case—Hawaji, 21 Bom.L.R. 276, 50 I.C. 496, 20 Cr.L.J. 320; Virji, 6 Bom.L.R. 856; Nur Mahomed v. Allahdino, 5 S.L.R. 190, 13 Cr.L.J. 32; Udhomal v. Mt. Majnibai, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 205, 34 Cr.L.J. 861 (863), 144 I.C. 881, 1933 Cr.C. 718; Hari Ram v. Allah Bakhsh, 34 Cr.L.J. 630, 143 I.C. 474, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 385, 1933 Cr.C. 639, 34 P.L.R. 577. The question is general in its terms, and although as a rule of practice it is desirable that notice should be issued, still it cannot be said that the omission to issue notice is in itself a reason for setting aside the order of transfer—Gobinda, 2 Pat. 333, A.I.R. 1923 Pat. 228; Bagh Ali v. Muhammad Din, 6 Lah. 541, 27 Cr.L.J. 411; Chhotey Lal v. Tinki Lal, 36 Cr.L.J. 918, A.I.R. 1935 All. 815, 156 I.C. 163; Chotemiya v. Aerafoniya, 37 Cr.L.J. 1006, 164 I.C. 692, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 181, I.L.R. 1936 Nag. 87, 1936 Cr.C. 705. There is no authority for a general proposition of law that no District Magistrate can transfer a case without the issue of notice to the accused or complainant or both. It may well be that it is advisable for a District Magistrate ordinarily to do so, but there is certainly no law which requires him to do so—Kamni Begam v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 878, 177 I.C. 460, A.I.R. 1938 All. 517, 1938 A.L.J. 703, 1938 A.L.R. 764, I.L.R. 1938 All. 738, 11 R.A. 198, 1938 A.W.R. (H.C.) 477, 1938 A.Cr.C. 66. If the opposite party acquiesces in the transfer, he cannot complain on the ground of absence of notice—Asaram v. Bhagirath, 7 N.L.R. 97, 12 Cr.L.J. 437. Where absence of notice led to miscarriage of justice the order transferring the case should be set aside—Kesho Datt v. Ram Kishen, 35 Cr.L.J. 1439, 151 I.C. 839, 1934 Cr.C. 436, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 194, 36 P.L.R. 274. When the District Magistrate transferred a case suo motu on administrative grounds, no notice was held to be necessary—Abdullah, 1910 P.R. 3, 11 Cr.L.J. 150 (151). When the order of transfer was made at the request of the trying Magistrate, no notice need be given to either party—Kuppaumuthu, 24 Mad. 317. Where there was great delay in disposing of a petty case, an order of transfer could be made without notice to the accused to shew cause against the order—Masha Sabjee, 2 Weir 692. When by virtue of a Government order the District Magistrate was directed to withdraw all cases in which complaints had been made against a police officer, no notice to the complainant was necessary before making a transfer—In re Dukhi, 28 All. 421.

1394. Power of District Magistrate after transfer:—The District Magistrate after he has transferred the case to a subordinate Magistrate has no jurisdiction relating to the case, so long as the transfer subsists. But he can again withdraw the case to his own file if he thinks fit—Mrs. Belil's, 12 W.R. 53. When a District Magistrate makes an order of transfer, the case is out of his hands, and the District Magistrate has no jurisdiction to make any order in the case when it is properly seised of by a subordinate Magistrate—Ajab Lal, 32 Cal. 783. He cannot dismiss the complaints, much less prosecute the complainant—Shaik Kutab Ali, 3 C.W.N. 490; nor can he issue process for the apprehension of the absconding accused—Golapdy Sheikh, 27 Cal 979. He can make no order in the case except such order as may be made by him by way of revision—Radhabullabh v. Benode, 30 Cal. 449.

Powers and duties of Magistrates to whom case is transferred:—When a case has been transferred after process has been issued to the accused, the Magistrate to whom the case has been transferred should proceed from the stage in which the proceedings were left. He cannot go back and dismiss the complaint under sec. 203—Raghoo Parra, 19 WR 28.

The Magistrate to whom a case is transferred can act upon the evidence already recorded by the Magistrate from whom the case is withdrawn. See Notes under sub-section (3) of section 350.

The Magistrate to whom a case is transferred cannot further transfer the case to some other Magistrate subordinate to him—Bashir Husain v. Ali Hussain, 36 All. 166; Darra v. Mukat, 12 ALJ 277, 15 Cr.L.J. 357.

1394A. Sub-section (6):—This sub-section supersedes Madhavarayachar v. Subba Row, 15 Mad. 94 (decided under the 1882 Code) in which it was held that the village Headman not being a Magistrate, no case from his file could be transferred to the file of another Magistrate.

Prior to its present amendment, this sub-section applied only to village Headman appointed under Madras Regulation IV of 1821; and therefore a District Magistrate was not competent to transfer a case from a village Headman appointed under any other Regulation (e.g., Reg. I of 1816)—Sevakolandai v. Ammayan, 26 Mad. 394. This case is now overruled as the present sub-section expressly mentions the Regulation of 1816.

1394B. Costs:—A Magistrate has no power to award costs in an application under this section—District Magistrate, Kurnool v. Chandra Tirumal Reddy, 40 Cr.L.J. 46, 178 IC. 126, AIR 1938 Mad 909, 48 MLW 381, (1938) 2 M.L.J. 531, 1938 M.W.N. 1105.

1394C. Copy:—An order under this section dismissing an application for transfer is a judicial order a copy of which ought to be given to a party on requisition—Gurdas Ram v. Emp., AIR 1940 Lah 283, 42 PLR. 192, 41 Cr.L.J. 756, 189 IC 605.

1395. Revision:—The High Court will not interfere in revision with an order of the District Magistrate dismissing an application under sec. 528 for the transfer of a case. The High Court's powers of revision are in express terms limited to those conferred by certain sections mentioned in sec. 439; section 526 is not one of those. The Letters Patent does not confer any power of transfer over and above that conferred by section 526. The remedy of the applicant is to make an independent petition for transfer under sec. 526 supported by affidavit or affirmation—Ashu v. Maung Po Kha, 1 Rang 632, 77 IC. 885, 25 Cr.L.J. 485, AIR. 1924 Rang. 100. The Sessions Judge has no authority to revise the order of a District Magistrate passed under the provisions of this section, any more than the High Court has any such authority—Mohamed Isahuck, 37 Cr.L.J. 220, 160 IC. 85, AIR. 1935 Rang 446, 1935 Cr.C. 1242. But when the High Court is not, strictly speaking, asked to transfer any case from one Court to another but to pronounce that an order making such a transfer under this section was made on improper and inadequate grounds and ought for these reasons to be set aside, the High Court has ample powers to deal with such an application under sec. 439, Cr. P. C.—Udhamal v. Mt. Majnubai, AIR. 1933 Sind 205 (207), 34 Cr.L.J. 861, 144 IC. 881, 1933 Cr.C. 718; Vellachami v. Murugappa, 34 Cr.L.J. 832, 144 IC. 677, AIR. 1933 Rang. 89, 1933 Cr.C. 573, dissenting from Ashu v. Maung Po Kha, supra.

CHAPTER XLIV-A.

SUPPLEMENTARY PROVISIONS RELATING TO EUROPEAN AND INDIAN BRITISH SUBJECTS AND OTHERS.

This Chapter has been inserted by section 33 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XVII of 1923.

528A. (1) Where, in any case to which the provisions of Chapter XXXIII do not apply, any person claims to be dealt with as an European or Indian British subject, or where any person claims to be dealt with as an European (other than an European British subject) or an American, he shall state the grounds of such claims to the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purpose of the inquiry or trial; and such Magistrate shall inquire into the truth of such statement and allow the person making it a reasonable time within which to prove that it is true, and shall then decide whether he is or is not an European British Subject or an Indian British subject, or an European or an American, as the case may be, and shall deal with him accordingly.

(2) When any such claim is rejected by the Magistrate and the person by whom it was made is committed by the Magistrate for trial before the Court of Session, and such person repeats the claim before such Court, such Court shall, after such further inquiry, if any, as it thinks fit, decide the claim, and shall deal with such person accordingly.

(3) When any Court before which any person is tried rejects any such claims as aforesaid, the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial.

This is the old section 453 with certain alterations.

1396. Analysis of section:—(a) An Indian British subject claiming to be dealt with as such must put in his claim before the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purpose of inquiry or trial, according to the provisions of sub-section (1). This sub-section applies to Presidency Magistrates as well as Magistrates in the mufassal. (b) If the Magistrate rejects the claim and tries him, the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such appeal. See sub-section (3). This sub-section applies to Presidency Magistrates as well as to Magistrates in the mufassal. (c) If the Magistrate rejects the claim and commits the accused to the Court of Sessions, he may repeat the claim before the latter Court. See sub-section (2). It should be noted that under sub-section (2) such repetition may only be made before a Court of Session (in the mufassal) and not before the High Court Sessions. (d) If the Court of Session rejects the claim and tries the accused, the decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial. (e) If a claim is made before a Presidency Magistrate and rejected by him, and the accused is committed to the High Court, there is no provision for repetition of the claim before the High Court, and the accused will not be entitled to put in, under sec. 275 of the Code, before the High Court a further claim for being tried by a jury the majority of whom should be Indians. But the decision of the Presidency Magistrate rejecting the claim is not final, and is subject to revision by the High Court—Harendra Chandra, 51 Cal. 980 (1989, 990), 29 C.W.N. 384, 26 Cr.L.J. 385, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 384, 84 I.C. 929.

1397. Claim as to status:—Evidence:—The plea that the accused is an European British subject must be substantiated by ample evidence. Where the prisoner pleaded that he was an European British subject, but evidence as to nationality was incomplete, it was held that the plea was not made out—Turnbull, 2 Weir 11, 6 M.H.C.R. 7. So also, a mere statement by the prisoner that he is an European British subject cannot be acted upon—Clarke v. Beane, 5 W.R. 53. The Judge may be satisfied by the appearance of the prisoner and the circumstances brought forward at the time that the plea is true, but if he is not so satisfied, and the plea is persisted in, it must be substantiated by sufficient evidence—Turnbull, 6 M.H.C.R. 7. A statement in an affidavit by the accused's wife that she heard from their grandparents while they were all living together that the accused's grandfather was born in England of English parents, though not controverted by the Crown by a counter affidavit, is hearsay evidence, and is not sufficient to establish the status of the accused as an European British subject—Thomas, 53 Cal. 746, 27 Cr.L.J. 1304 (1306).

Opportunity to plead must be given:—The Magistrate trying the prisoner ought to give him an opportunity of pleading that he is an European British subject—Clarke v. Beane, 5 W.R. 53. But the Magistrate is not obliged to ask an accused, who apparently is a European British subject, whether he claims to be tried as such. Such a procedure is no longer necessary so far as a case which comes within Chapter XLIV-A of the Cr. P. C., is concerned—Carmen v. O'Brien, 54 Cal. 1041 (1044), 29 Cr.L.J. 245, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 97.

Time for making claim:—A claim on the ground of status may be put forward before a committing Magistrate at any time up till the time when the commitment is made—Harendra Chandra, 51 Cal. 980 (991). But in a later case, it has been held that the claim to be tried as an European British subject must be made when the accused is first brought before the Magistrate for inquiry or trial, i.e., before the inquiry or trial actually begins. If the claim is not made at that stage, it cannot be made at any subsequent stage—Carmen v. O'Brien, 54 Cal. 1041, 29 Cr.L.J. 245 (247), A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 97.

528B. If in any such case an European or Indian British subject or an European (other than an European British subject) or an American does not claim to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried or by whom he is committed, or if, when such claim has been made before and rejected by the committing Magistrate, it is not repeated before the Court to which such person is committed, he shall be held to have relinquished his right to be dealt with as an European British Subject or an Indian British subject, or an European or an American, as the case may be, and shall not assert it in any subsequent stage of the case.

Failure to plead status

This is the old section 545 with certain alterations.

1398. Waiver:—An European British subject can relinquish his rights. The provisions of this Code give certain rights and privileges to the European British subjects, which rights they are at liberty to give up—Quirros, 6 Cal. 83; Nulty, 7 N.L.R. 93, 12 Cr.L.J. 436. Failure to make a claim amounts to a relinquishment of rights—Alexander Ruffe, 1912 P.R. 6, 13 Cr.L.J. 197. Where the Magistrate explained to the accused his rights under this Code and then asked him if he claimed to be dealt with as such, and the accused stated that he did not claim the rights, it was held that he had relinquished the rights—Barindra Kumar Ghosh, 37 Cal. 467. If no claim is put forward before the committing Presidency Magistrate, the accused will not be allowed to assert before the High Court any claim to be tried by a jury the majority of whom should belong to his own nationality—Harendra Chandra, 51 Cal. 980 (191), 26 Cr.L.J. 385, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 384, 84 I.C. 929, 29 C.W.N. 384. But the omission of the accused to avail himself of his right to claim the benefit of section 528A does not conclude the matter and he is not debarred from urging that the conditions mentioned in clause (a) or (b) of section 443 exist—Martindale, 52 Cal. 347, 29 C.W.N. 447, 26 Cr.L.J. 401.

The expression "any subsequent stage of the case" includes the stages of appeal and revision—Jeremiah v. Johnson, 45 M.L.J. 800, 76 I.C. 695, A.I.R. 1924 Mad. 373, 18 M.L.W. 895, 33 M.L.T. 194, 1924 M.W.N. 60, 25 Cr.L.J. 231. See Grant, 12 Bom. 561. But the Allahabad High Court observes that an application in revision is not a subsequent stage of the same case, but is a totally independent matter giving a right to apply to a superior Court independently of any proceedings necessarily subsequent or consequent upon the hearing of the original case—Harris v. Peal, 17 A.L.J. 896, 58 I.C. 351, 21 Cr.L.J. 767. Therefore the High Court can interfere in revision in the case of an European British subject even though he had not pleaded that he was European British subject in the trial Court—H. S. Bolton, 34 Cr.L.J. 671, 143 I.C. 892, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 240, 1933 Cr.C. 325, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 492, 60 Cal. 676.

Discussing all the rulings mentioned above the Madras High Court has held that proceeding in revision before the High Court on a conviction by a trial Court or an Appellate Court is a subsequent stage of the same case—H. B. Babington, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 14 (16), 1936 M.W.N. 1091, 44 M.L.W. 755, 71 M.L.J. 827, 1936 M.Cr.C. 386, 167 I.C. 160, 38 Cr.L.J. 336, I.L.R. 1937 Mad. 339. See also Note 18.

Magistrate whether bound to inform accused of his right:—The Calcutta High Court was formerly of opinion that before an European British subject could be considered to have waived the privileges conferred upon him by this Code it must appear that his rights were distinctly made known and explained to him to enable him to exercise his choice and judgment whether he would or would not claim those rights—Quiros, 6 Cal. 83, and if this was not done, the conviction was liable to be set aside—Baladev v. Clarke, 18 C.W.N. 385. This was also the view of the Nagpur Court—Nully, 7 N.L.R. 93, 12 Cr.L.J. 436 (following 6 Cal. 83). But the Calcutta High Court has changed its view, and is now of opinion that a Magistrate is not required to ask the accused, who is apparently an European British subject, whether he claims to be tried as such. It is the accused who is to put forward his claim to be dealt with as an European British subject—Carmen v. O'Brien, 54 Cal. 1041, 29 Cr.L.J. 245, A.I.R. 1928 Cal. 97. The Punjab Chief Court holds that it is not the duty of the Magistrate to ask categorically whether the accused claims his right as an European British subject, much less his duty to explain his right to him as such subject. The Legislature appears to presume that a person entitled to a privilege knows of its existence, and that if he desires to assert it he will assert it—Tobin, 1885 P.R. 5.

Revocation of waiver:—The waiver is not irrevocable. If the withdrawal of the waiver is made promptly and shortly after the waiver had been made, and if substantially nothing had been done in the interval on the waiver, the withdrawal should be allowed—Sterling, 1908 P.R. 1, 7 Cr.L.J. 274; Keough, 1878 P.R. 17.

528C. Where a person, not being an European British subject, is dealt with as an European British subject or, not being an Indian British subject, is dealt with as an Indian British subject, or, not being an European (other than an European British subject) or American, is dealt with as an European or American, and such person does not object, the inquiry, commitment, trial or sentence, as the case may be, shall not, by reason of such dealing, be invalid.

This is the old section 455 with certain alterations.

528D. (1) Unless there is something repugnant in the context, all enactments made by the the Central Legislature which confer on Magistrate or on the Court of Session jurisdiction over offences shall be deemed to apply to European British subjects, although such persons are not expressly referred to therein.

Application of Acts conferring jurisdiction on Magistrates or Courts of Session.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise any Court to exceed the limits prescribed by this Code as to the amount of punishment which it may inflict on an European British subject or to confer jurisdiction on any Magistrate of the second or third class for the trial of such subjects.

This is the old section 459 with certain alterations.

The words "the Central Legislature" have been substituted for "the Governor-General in Council or the Indian Legislature" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

CHAPTER XLV.

OF IRREGULAR PROCEEDINGS.

529. If any Magistrate not empowered by law to do any of the following things, namely:—

Irregularities which do not vitiate proceedings.

- (a) to issue a search-warrant under section 98;
- (b) to order, under section 155, the police to investigate an offence;
- (c) to hold an inquest under section 176;
- (d) to issue process, under section 186, for the apprehension of a person within the local limits of his jurisdiction who has committed an offence outside such limits;
- (e) to take cognizance of an offence under section 190, sub-section (1), clause (a) or clause (b);
- (f) to transfer case under section 192;
- (g) to tender a pardon under section 337 or section 338;
- (h) to sell property under section 524 or section 525; or
- (i) to withdraw a case and try it himself under section 528;

erroneously in good faith does that thing, his proceedings shall not be set aside merely on the ground of his not being so empowered.

1399. Scope:—The provisions of sections 529 and 530, Cr. P. C., do not apply to the village Panchayat under the U. P. Village Panchayat Act (VI of 1920)—Mehdi Husain v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 827 (828), 175 I.C. 662, 1938 O.W.N. 596, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 183, 1938 O.L.R. 303, 11 R.O. 2.

Clause (e):—If a Magistrate who is empowered to take cognizance of offences under clauses (a) and (b) of sec. 190, erroneously and in good faith, takes cognizance of a case under clause (b) instead of taking cognizance under clause (a), his proceedings cannot be set aside. Section 529 will cure the defect—Sivasami, 51 Bom. 498, 28 Cr.L.J. 939 (942). If a police-report does not contain a sufficiently specific statement of facts as required by clause (b) of section 190, but only a certain number of facts, still the Magistrate can take cognizance upon such report, the defect being cured by this section—Raghunath, 34 Bom.L.R. 901, 1932 Cr.C. 868 (869), 139 I.C. 281, 33 Cr.L.J. 733, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 610, Ind. Rul. 1932 Bom. 484.

It may be said with reference to clause (e) of this section, and sec. 530 (k) and sec. 531, that unless it appears that the proceedings wrongly held have in fact occasioned a failure of justice, they cannot be set aside—Lalit Chandra, 39 Cal. 119 (127), 13 Cr.L.J. 433. See also Chuni Lal, 34 Cr.L.J. 761 (762), Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 420, 144 I.C. 380, 1933 A.L.J. 735, 1933 Cr.C. 682, A.I.R. 1933 All. 399; Chunnu Sonar v. Kripa Sankar, 34 Cr.L.J. 923 (924), 145 I.C. 280.

Where the Sub-divisional Magistrate directed the complainant to prove his case before another Magistrate, calling for a report from him by the fixed date and the latter, misunderstanding his position in respect of the case, ordered summons to be issued on the accused and proceeded to try the case, he could not be said to have acted in good faith (i.e., with due care and caution) within the meaning of this section as he ignored the order that he was directed to make a report and overlooked it and the proceeding before him could not be allowed to stand—Udit Narayan Patwari v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 778 (779), 176 I.C. 715, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 369, 19 P.L.T. 336, 1938 P.W.N. 542, 4 B.R. 750, 11 R.P. 100. See Note 670.

Where in consequence of a wrongly given sanction under section 197, Cr. P. C., a Magistrate otherwise competent to entertain the case is specially appointed under section 197 (2), Cr. P. C., to try the particular case, the provisions of section 529, Cr. P. C., cannot apply—Pearey Lal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pesh. 41 (43), 42 Cr.L.J. 68, 191 I.C. 91.

Clause (f):—'A case' includes cases under Chapter VIII or XII. See Notes under sec 192. The irregularity of transfer under sec 192 by a Magistrate not empowered to do so is cured by this section—Dasarath, 36 Cal. 869; Kishori v. Srinath, 26 Cal. 370.

Where a case has been transferred to a First Class Magistrate by a Sub-divisional Magistrate, the former cannot again transfer the case to a subordinate Magistrate. If, however, he transfers the case erroneously and in good faith, to a subordinate Magistrate, believing that he has power to transfer, section 529 (f) applies, and the trial of the case by the subordinate Magistrate is not invalid—Hasanali, 30 Bom.L.R. 653, 30 Cr.L.J. 467, 115 I.C. 399, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 286, Ind. Rul. 1929 Bom. 303. See Note 599.

When an application is made to the District Magistrate under sub-section 4 of sec. 144, Cr. P. C., there is no power of transfer in respect of an order passed under sec. 144. However, even assuming that there is no power of transfer, the order of transfer cannot be regarded as void and cannot be set aside merely on that ground in view of sec. 529 (f), Cr. P. C., and also of sec. 531 of the same Code—Sevugan Chettiar v. Karuppan Chettiar, 38 Cr.L.J. 864 (865), 170 I.C. 193, 1937 M.W.N. 210, 45 M.L.W. 367, A.I.R. 1937 Mad. 487, 10 R.M. 152. See Note 380.

530. If any Magistrate, not being empowered by law in this behalf, does any of the following things, Irregularities which vitiate proceedings, namely:—

- (a) attaches and sells property under section 88;
- (b) issues a search-warrant for a letter, parcel or other thing in the Post Office, or a telegram in the Telegraph Department;
- (c) demands security to keep the peace;
- (d) demands security for good behaviour;
- (e) discharges a person lawfully bound to be of good behaviour;
- (f) cancels a bond to keep the peace;
- (g) makes an order under section 133, as to a local nuisance;
- (h) prohibits, under section 143, the repetition or continuance of a public nuisance;
- (i) issues an order under section 144;
- (j) makes an order under Chapter XII;
- (k) takes cognizance, under section 190, sub-section (1) clause (c), of an offence;
- (l) passes a sentence, under section 349, on proceedings recorded by another Magistrate;
- (m) calls, under section 435, for proceedings;
- (n) makes an order for maintenance;
- (o) revises, under section 515, an order passed under section 514;
- (p) tries an offender;
- (q) tries an offender summarily; or
- (r) decides an appeal;

his proceedings shall be void.

Clause (i):—See Note 380.

1400. Clause (j):—This clause refers only to a case where a Magistrate is not competent, by virtue of the position he holds or the powers vested in him, to try a case of the character mentioned in sec. 145. But where a Magistrate is a 1st class Magistrate and therefore competent to try a case under sec. 145, the fact that he has no local jurisdiction over the matter will not make the trial void (especially where he has not taken cognizance of the case on his own initiative, but the case has been transferred to him under the order of the District Magistrate)—Raj Mohan v. Prosunno, 5 C.W.N. 686 (689).

Clause (n):—If an order under section 488 is passed by a Magistrate who is duly empowered to try maintenance cases, the order is not vitiated by the fact that the proceedings were taken in a wrong Court. To such a case sec. 530 (n) does not apply, but sec. 531—Sitaram v. Sukia, 49 C.L.J. 205, 30 Cr.L.J. 525.

Clause (p):—Section 530 (p), Cr. P. C., lays down that if any Magistrate not being empowered by law in this behalf tries an offender, his proceedings shall be void. The word "proceedings" is not defined in the Code, but is frequently used therein and, from the nature of its use throughout the Code, it includes, in connection with a trial, the whole bundle of actions taken and recorded by the Court from the moment of taking cognizance of the case until its disposal. The "proceedings" in a joint trial cannot be differentiated into separate "proceedings" against each accused person. Therefore, three persons were prosecuted jointly and one of them raised an appeal under sec. 197, Cr. P. C., after the trial was carried to a conclusion, the whole trial against all the accused was without jurisdiction as the trial Magistrate was not empowered to take cognizance in it—Faisal Rahman, 38 Cr.L.J. 1042 (1045), 170 I.C. 772, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh. 52, 10 R.Pesh. 23.

Where the allegations made in the complaint under sec. 420, I. P. C., were that the accused owed the complainant certain amount of money, that on a false representation being made to the complainant that the accused wanted to settle their account, the complainant was induced to produce his bahi and that when the bahi was opened for the inspection of the account, the accused tore away that part of the page of the bahi which bore their thumb-impressions and decamped and the Magistrate acquitted them of an offence under sec. 420, I. P. C., held that the facts disclosed in the complaint constituted an offence under sec. 477 and not under sec. 420, I. P. C., that the acquittal of the accused was bad in law and that all proceedings taken before the trial Magistrate were void inasmuch as he had no jurisdiction to try the case—Ram Pershad v. Dhanna, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 513, 41 Cr.L.J. 184, 185 I.C. 415, 41 P.L.R. 192.

If a Third Class Magistrate, not being specially empowered by the Local Government, tries an offender under section 2 of the Bombay Public Conveyances Act (IV of 1863), the trial is void—Rama, Ratanlal 921. If a Second Class Magistrate tries an accused, who has actually committed an offence under sec. 409, I. P. C. (which is triable by a First Class Magistrate), as though for an offence under sec. 406, I. P. C., the trial and conviction are void—Sitaram, 1 Bom.L.R. 27. But where the offence consists of circumstances of aggravation which make it triable by a higher Court, and a 2nd Class Magistrate tries it, ignoring those aggravating circumstances, the proceedings are not void ab initio under this section—Gundya, 13 Bom. 502. A distinction should be drawn between proceedings which are improper and proceedings which are void. If a Magistrate tries an offender for an offence which is beyond his jurisdiction, his proceedings shall be void. But where the facts disclose an offence within the jurisdiction of the Magistrate, it is a complete fallacy to say that he is not empowered to try the person charged for the offence which is within his jurisdiction merely because the same facts disclose a more serious offence which is beyond his jurisdiction. No doubt it would be improper for a Magistrate to intentionally ignore the circumstances of aggravation which show that an offence beyond his jurisdiction has been committed, and to try the accused for a lesser offence within his jurisdiction, but his proceedings would not be void on that ground—Ayyan, 21 Mad. 675; Kuttuva Rowther v. Suppan, 25 L.W. 86, 28 Cr.L.J. 164 (165). See also Razya Bhagwanta, 4 Bom.L.R. 267, and Dawson, 2 Rang. 455, 26 Cr.L.J. 1108. If a Magistrate is competent to try the accused for the offences named in the complaint, and he tries accordingly, it cannot be said that, because another offence under another section could also be charged in the complaint, therefore, the trial of the offence named in the complaint is void—Sirpat Rai, 1930 A.L.J. 1422, 1931 Cr.C. 10 (11), 32 Cr.L.J. 360, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 129, 129 I.C. 257, A.I.R. 1931 All. 10. See Note 62.

If a 2nd Class Magistrate, who has no jurisdiction to try an offence under sec. 471, I. P. C. (which is triable by a 1st Class Magistrate or Court of Session) holds the trial, his proceedings are void. Even if he does not hold the entire trial, but merely records some evidence, and then the case is transferred to a First Class Magistrate, the evidence recorded by the 2nd Class Magistrate cannot be legally considered by the 1st Class Magistrate. If he does so, the conviction will be set aside and the case must be retried—Budhu Totua, 55 Cal. 65, 29 Cr.L.J. 464, 47 C.L.J. 122.

Where a trial is void under this section, sec. 403 does not bar a retrial—Hussain Gaibu, 8 Bom. 307; Abdul Ghani, 29 Cal. 412.

Clause (q):—Trying an offender summarily under sec. 530 (q), Cr. P. C., means trying the particular offender in a particular case summarily and trying that offender for that offence of which he is accused. The words "offender" and "offence" are not always used in the Cr. P. Code with great precision. Hence if a Magistrate tries an offence under sec. 4, Bombay Gambling Act, summarily, sec. 530 (q) applies—

Mahanand Kherajmal, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 341 (342), 41 Cr.L.J. 190, 185, I.C. 543, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 123.

Where a Magistrate deliberately disregards the offence actually complained of, viz., an offence not triable summarily, and tries it summarily, his proceedings are absolutely void—Kalash v. Joynuddi, 5 C.W.N. 252; Bishnu Shah v. Jaber, 29 Cal. 409; Abdool Karim, 4 Cal. 18; Ram Naram, 46 All. 446.

See Note 857.

Clause (r):—The word 'Magistrate' in this section includes a Sessions Judge; therefore, if a Sessions Judge hears an appeal which ought to have been presented to the High Court, the proceedings before the Sessions Judge are absolutely void—Abdulla, 2 Rang 386 (387), 26 Cr.L.J. 293.

If a Subdivisional Magistrate, not exercising the powers of a District Magistrate but having powers to hear appeals under sec. 407 (2), Cr. P. C., hears an appeal from an order passed under sec. 514, Cr. P. C., his proceedings are void—Muhammad Shah, A.I.R. 1934 Lah 294, 1934 Cr.C 525, 36 Cr.L.J. 557, 154 I.C. 522.

The accused was convicted by the Sub-divisional Magistrate and then he appealed to the Sessions Judge and the appeal was dismissed. He subsequently came to learn that the Sub-divisional Magistrate was exercising powers of a Magistrate of the Second Class and he then filed an appeal in the Court of the District Magistrate. The District Magistrate then made a reference to the High Court, really asking its advice on the question whether he ought to hear the appeal or whether he ought to dismiss it. Held that the reference was misconceived and irregular, that technically it might fail on the ground that the District Magistrate did not send up, for the consideration of the High Court, some proceedings that arose in another Court subordinate to him, that, in view of the provisions of sec. 530, Cr. P. C., the proceedings before the Sessions Judge were void and that strictly speaking, before filing appeal in the Court of the District Magistrate the accused ought first to have applied to the High Court to set aside the order of the Sessions Judge. To avoid mere waste of time the High Court set aside the order of the Sessions Judge dismissing the appeal and directed the District Magistrate to hear the appeal and dispose of it in accordance with law—Rakhu Sarif v. Panchanon Mondal, 38 Cr.L.J. 688, 169 I.C. 34, A.I.R. 1937 Cal 256, 9 R.C. 888, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 116.

Void:—An order which was void for want of jurisdiction must nevertheless be regarded as valid unless it is set aside by a Court of competent jurisdiction—Rakhu Sarif v. Panchanon Mondal, 38 Cr.L.J. 688, 169 I.C. 34, I.L.R. (1937) 2 Cal. 116, 9 R.C. 88, A.I.R. 1937 Cal 256, following Yena, 4 L.B.R. 49, 6 Cr.L.J. 287.

531. No finding, sentence or order of any Criminal Court Proceedings in wrong place shall be set aside merely on the ground that the inquiry, trial or other proceeding in the course of which it was arrived at or passed, took place in a wrong sessions division, district, sub-division or other local area, unless it appears that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

1401. Object and scope of section:—The policy of this Code as shown by secs. 531-538 is to uphold in most cases orders passed by a Criminal Court which was lacking in local jurisdiction or which has committed illegalities or irregularities, unless failure of justice has been occasioned or is likely to be occasioned through such want of jurisdiction or such illegalities or irregularities—Ganapathi, 42 Mad 791.

"Other local area":—The expression "local area" used in this section is not confined to a province but includes all local areas governed by the Cr. P. C., which extends to the whole of British India. The words "other local area" were inserted to remove a defect pointed out in 21 W.R. 66 (Cr.) (Peter v. Mr. C. D. Field) in the case of sec. 70, Criminal Procedure Code, 1872, and to bring the offence committed in British India within the scope of that section to which sec. 531 now corresponds. Where, therefore, although the offence was committed at Delhi but was wrongly tried at Hoshangabad, the conviction should not, in view of this section, be set aside—Diwan Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 55 (63), 37 Cr.L.J. 474 (482).

There is nothing in the language of this section to confine its operation to cases where offences committed within the jurisdiction of the Court are tried by such Court outside the limits of the local area of its jurisdiction—Doraiswamy Mudali, 30 Mad. 94 (95), 1 M.L.T. 345, 4 Cr.L.J. 253.

This section only refers to districts, sub-divisions and local area governed by this Code, and not to tributary Mahals like Keonjhar or Mourbhanj to which the Code does not extend—Bichitranund v. Bhugbut, 16 Cal. 667 (675); Keshub, 8 Cal. 985. See also Ali Muhamed Kassim, 32 Cr.L.J. 1120 (1124), 9 Rang. 338, Ind. Rul. 1931 Rang. 273, 134 I.C. 209, 1931 Cr.C. 660, A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 164.

The 'order' under this section includes an order of committal—Bhagwantia, 3 Pat. 417 (421), 26 Cr.L.J. 49.

Offence in one place, trial or commitment in another:—See Notes 549 and 552.

Sections 403 and 531, Cr. P. C., must be read together and a Court is of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of sec. 403, Cr. P. C., where the finding, sentence or order of the Court could have been set aside under the provisions of sec. 531, Cr. P. C., but has not in fact been set aside. Section 531, Cr. P. C., must be deemed to give jurisdiction to a Court which would otherwise lack it unless it appears that such lack of jurisdiction has in fact occasioned a failure of justice. Clearly it is not competent for a Court not acting under the provisions of sec. 531, Cr. P. C., to say whether a failure of justice has or has not been occasioned. Where, therefore, the accused was tried in the S. Sessions Court for the offence of cheating in L as well as for the offence of abduction which offence was committed within the territorial jurisdiction of the S. Court and was acquitted and was subsequently proceeded against on a charge of cheating in the Court of a Magistrate at L, the proceedings must be quashed—Dhingano Khoso v. Gulsher Kambir Khan, 38 Cr.L.J. 959, 170 I.C. 314, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 179, 10 R.S. 57, following Ratnavelu v. K. S. Iyer, 56 Mad. 996, A.I.R. 1933 Mad. 765, 1933 Cr.C. 1372, 145 I.C. 878, 65 M.L.J. 529, 34 Cr.L.J. 1080, 1933 M.W.N. 743, 6 R.M. 143, 38 M.L.W. 562 (F.B.), and not following Shankar Tulsiram v. Kundalik Anyaba, 53 Bom.L.R. 69, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 530, 113 I.C. 70, 30 Bom.L.R. 1435, 30 Cr.L.J. 54.

Where the charge under sec. 6 of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889), is not tried at the place where the offence of applying the false trade description was committed, the defect is one curable under this section—A. K. Sen v. Madhu Mongal, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 583.

A commitment by a Magistrate who had no territorial jurisdiction over the place where the offence was committed, will not be set aside, unless there has been a failure of justice occasioned by such commitment—Abbi Reddi, 17 Mad. 402 (403); Nga Taung, 7 Bur L.T. 26, 15 Cr.L.J. 270. If the Sessions Judge who tried the case had territorial jurisdiction, the irregularity in the commitment was immaterial—Abbi Reddi, supra.

Commitments to wrong Sessions:—See Notes 549 and 552.

Trial at a place outside jurisdiction:—Where a criminal appeal was heard and disposed of at a place which was outside the local limits of his criminal jurisdiction, but where he had civil jurisdiction, it was held that the procedure was an irregularity, but no failure of justice being occasioned thereby, the trial was not a nullity—Fazl Azim, 17 All 36.

Jurisdiction of Court to order forfeiture:—This section applies only to proceedings in a wrong place and cures defects as to local jurisdiction. But it cannot cure a defect where a bond of appearance taken from the accused by one Magistrate is forfeited by another Magistrate, for it is a defect not of local jurisdiction but of personal jurisdiction—Mir Husen, 16 Bom.L.R. 84, 15 Cr.L.J. 295 (cited under sec. 514).

Failure of justice:—Where objection as to the jurisdiction of the Court was not seriously taken in the Lower Court, and the petitioner failed to show in the High Court that he had been prejudiced, the High Court declined to interfere—Sanatun v. Gooroo Churn, 21 W.R. 88. Even the fact that the objection to jurisdiction was taken at a comparatively early stage of the proceedings was not a conclusive proof that the accused was prejudiced by the irregularity—Kali Charan, 34 C.L.J. 200, 22 Cr.L.J. 666, 63 I.C. 458. Where it has been nobody's case throughout the prosecution either in the Court of first instance or in the Appellate Court that the wrong assumption of territorial jurisdiction has in fact occasioned a failure of justice, nor has the Judge in his judgment expressed himself to that effect, a conviction cannot be set aside by the Appellate Court on the ground of want of such jurisdiction—Abdul Shakur v. Palla Ram, 32 Cr.L.J. 828 (829), 132 I.C. 50, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 210, 14 O.L.J. 246, 8 O.W.N. 341, 1931 Cr.C. 633, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 273. See also Narain Das, A.I.R. 1936 All. 105 (107), 37 Cr.L.J. 157, 159 I.C. 808.

Section 177, Cr. P. C., only provides for the ordinary place of inquiry and trial, and there is no difficulty whatsoever in reading it along with this section, the result being that a conviction cannot be set aside merely on the ground that the trial has taken place in a wrong district but that the party aggrieved is entitled to have the conviction set aside if he shows that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice—Acharaja Singh, 15 Pat. 418 (420).

532. (1) If any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which were not so conferred, commits an accused person for trial before a Court of Session or High Court, the Court to which the commitment is made may, after perusal of the proceedings, accept the commitment if it considers that the accused has not been injured thereby, unless during the inquiry and before the order of commitment, objection was made on behalf either of the accused or of the prosecution to the jurisdiction of such Magistrate or other authority.

(2) If such Court considers that the accused was injured, or if such objection was so made, it shall quash the commitment and direct a fresh inquiry by a competent Magistrate.

1402. Scope of section:—Section 531 must be read as complete in itself and not as in any way cut down or limited by the proviso contained in the latter part of sec. 532. Sec. 531 applies only to cases in which there is no jurisdiction by reason of the inquiry, trial or other proceeding being held in a wrong local area. Sec. 532 seems to refer to cases in which the Magistrate is competent to deal with the offence as having taken place within the local limits of his jurisdiction, but has no power to commit to the Sessions either because he is a Second Class Magistrate or from some reasons other than that of want of local jurisdiction—James Ingle, 16 Bom. 200.

This section applies only to cases where the Magistrate or other authority who has assumed to commit has not been duly invested with the powers under which he has assumed to make the commitment, i.e., when the defect is one personal to the committing authority and there is no defect in his proceeding—Shantal Khan, 1890 P.R. 16. This section applies where the Magistrate purporting to exercise certain powers had really no such powers. But where the Magistrate was duly invested with the powers which he exercised (e.g., power to commit for trial), this section has no application—Abbi Reddi, 17 Mad. 402 (403). This section does not deal with cases in which the defect in the committal order arises from want of territorial jurisdiction—James Ingle, 16 Bom. 200;

in British India within the scope of that section to which sec. 531 now corresponds. Where, therefore, although the offence was committed at Delhi but was wrongly tried at Hoshangabad, the conviction should not, in view of this section, be set aside—Diwan Singh, A.I.R. 1936 Nag. 55 (63), 37 Cr.L.J. 474 (482).

There is nothing in the language of this section to confine its operation to cases where offences committed within the jurisdiction of the Court are tried by such Court outside the limits of the local area of its jurisdiction—Doraiswamy Mudali, 30 Mad. 94 (95), 1 M.L.T. 345, 4 Cr.L.J. 253.

This section only refers to districts, sub-divisions and local area governed by this Code, and not to tributary Mahals like Keonjhar or Mourbhanj to which the Code does not extend—*Bichitranund v. The 'order' under this section includes an order of committal—Bhagwantia, 3 Pat. 417 (421), 26 Cr.L.J. 49.

Offence in one place, trial or commitment in another:—See Notes 549 and 552.

Sections 403 and 531, Cr. P. C., must be read together and a Court is of competent jurisdiction within the meaning of sec. 403, Cr. P. C., where the finding, sentence or order of the Court could have been set aside under the provisions of sec. 531, Cr. P. C., but has not in fact been set aside. Section 531, Cr. P. Clearly it is not competent for a Court not acting under the provisions of sec. 531, Cr. P. C., to say whether a failure of justice has or has not been occasioned. Where the charge under sec. 6 of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889), is not tried at the place where the offence of applying the false trade description was committed, the defect is one curable under this section—A. K. Sen v. Madhu Mongol, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 583.

A commitment by a Magistrate who had no territorial jurisdiction over the place where the offence was committed, will not be set aside, unless there has been a failure of justice occasioned by such commitment—Abbi Reddi, 17 Mad. 402 (403); Nga Taung, 7 Bur.L.T. 26, 15 Cr.L.J. 270. If the Sessions Judge who tried the case had territorial jurisdiction, the irregularity in the commitment was immaterial—Abbi Reddi, supra.

Trial at a place outside jurisdiction:—Where a criminal appeal was heard and disposed of at a place which was outside the local limits of his criminal jurisdiction, but where he had civil jurisdiction, it was held that the procedure was an irregularity, but no failure of justice being occasioned thereby, the trial was not a nullity—Fazl Arim, 17 All. 36.

Failure of justice:—Where objection as to the jurisdiction of the Court was not seriously taken in the Lower Court, and the petitioner failed to show in the High Court that he had been prejudiced, the High Court declined to interfere—*Sanatun v. 532. (1) If any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which were not so conferred, commits an accused person for trial before a Court of Session or High Court, the Court to which the commitment is made may, after perusal of the proceedings, accept the commitment if it considers that the accused has not been injured thereby, unless during the inquiry and before the order of commitment, objection was made on behalf either of the accused or of the prosecution to the jurisdiction of such Magistrate or other authority.

(2) If such Court considers that the accused was injured, or if such objection was so made, it shall quash the commitment and direct a fresh inquiry by a competent Magistrate.

1402. Scope of section:—Section 531 must be read as complete in itself and not as in any way cut down or limited by the proviso contained in the latter part of sec. 532. Sec. 531 applies only to cases in which there is no jurisdiction by reason of the inquiry, trial or other proceeding being held in a wrong local area. Sec. 532 seems to refer to cases in which the Magistrate is competent to deal with the offence as having taken place within the local limits of his jurisdiction, but has no power to commit to the Sessions either because he is a Second Class Magistrate or from some reasons other than that of want of local jurisdiction—James Ingle, 16 Bom. 200.

This section applies only to cases where the Magistrate or other authority who has assumed to commit has not been duly invested with the powers under which he has assumed to make the commitment, i.e., when the defect is one personal to the committing authority and there is no defect in his proceeding—Shamal Khan, 1890 P.R. 16. This section applies where the Magistrate purporting to exercise certain powers had really no such powers. But where the Magistrate was duly invested with the powers which he exercised (e.g., power to commit for trial), this section has no application—Abbi Reddi, 17 Mad. 402 (403). This section does not deal with cases in which the defect in the committal order arises from want of territorial jurisdiction—James Ingle, 16 Bom. 200;

Abbi Reddi, 17 Mad. 402 (403); Rathiram, 20 Cr.L.J. 416, 51 I.C. 176 (Mad.). This section has no reference to a case where the Magistrate who has general powers of commitment commits an accused over which he has no jurisdiction or commits him for an offence which is not triable by a Court of Session or High Court—Girish Chandra, 1929 Cr.C. 468, A.I.R. 1929 Cal 756, 50 C.L.J. 408, 34 C.W.N. 13 (F.B.). It does not apply where the commitment is bad owing to a disqualification of the Magistrate under section 556—Maung Lat, 2 L.B.R. 209. It has no application to commitments made by Magistrates acting under section 346—Kamini v. Fakir Chand, 12 C.W.N. 136, 6 Cr.L.J. 429. But this section applies where the commitment is irregular by reason of want of sanction under sec. 196 or 197—Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 Bom. 112; Morton, 9 Bom. 288. This section does not apply to a case where the prosecution is illegal on the ground of want of permission required under sec. 83 of the Indian Registration Act. Sec. 537 also cannot cure the defect—Mohd. Mehdi, A.I.R. 1934 All. 963 (968), 1934 A.L.J. 965, 152 I.C. 667, 4 A.W.R. 524, 1934 Cr.C. 1291, 36 Cr.L.J. 137, 57 All. 412 (F.B.). It applies where the commitment of the approver (who has broken the conditions of pardon) is irregular by reason of want of the certificate of Public Prosecutor required under sec. 339—Nga Wa, 3 Rang. 55, 4 Bur.L.J. 23.

Objection to jurisdiction:—If a Magistrate being duly empowered to commit to the Sessions but having no territorial jurisdiction over the place of offence, commits a case to the Sessions, the commitment is valid under sec. 531, and there can be no objection to his jurisdiction to commit—Abbi Reddy, 17 Mad. 402 (404).

Where objection to the want of jurisdiction of the Magistrate to commit is not taken before the Magistrate, the High Court can accept the commitment under this section, if it considers that the accused has not been prejudiced thereby—Bal Gangadhar Tilak, 22 Bom. 112. See also Desaihai Khushalbai, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 50 (54), 39 Bom.L.R. 1055.

533. (1) If any Court, before which a confession or other statement of an accused person recorded or purporting to be recorded under section 164 or section 364 is tendered or has been received in evidence, finds that any of the provisions of either of such sections have not been complied with by the Magistrate recording the statement, it shall take evidence that such person duly made the statement recorded; and, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 91, such statement shall be admitted if the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits.

(2) The provisions of this section apply to Courts of Appeal, Reference and Revision.

1403. Scope of section:—What this section means is this, that where a confession or other statement of an accused person is duly made, but in recording it the provisions of the law have not been complied with, oral evidence is admissible to prove that the confession or the statement was duly made. The defect which this section intends to cure is one not of substance, but of form only, as for instance when the Magistrate has omitted to sign the certificate, or has omitted to state in the certificate that the statement was taken in his hearing—Bhairab Chunder, 2 C.W.N. 702; Balmokand, 1915 P.R. 17, 16 Cr.L.J. 354, or where the Magistrate has omitted to record that the required warning was given to the accused under sec. 164—Partap Singh, 6 Lah. 415, 7 Lah.L.J. 482; Ranai, 3 Pat. 872; Kheman, 6 Lah. 58, 26 Cr.L.J. 1074; Bawa Singh, 7 Lah.L.J. 250, 26 Cr.L.J. 1458; or where the Magistrate has recorded that the confession was voluntarily made but omitted to record the questions and answers which would show that the confession was voluntary—Rama Kariappa, 31 Bom.L.R. 565, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 327 (328). The words "purporting to be recorded" and "has been received in evidence" imply that even if a statement be not recorded strictly in conformity with the provisions of sec. 164 (e.g., if the signature of the accused is not taken to the statement) still so long as the Magistrate purports to have recorded it under that section, and even after the statement has been received in evidence, sec. 533 can be resorted to and evidence taken that an accused person duly made the statement recorded—Ba Yin, 7 Rang 759, 31 Cr.L.J. 297 (299). But this section will not render a confession admissible when the provisions of the law have been totally disregarded, as for instance, where a statement has been neither signed by the accused nor certified by the Magistrate—Viran, 9 Mad 224; Jas Narayan, 17 Cal. 862; or where no warning was given at all under sec. 164—Partap, 6 Lah. 415, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 605; or where the Magistrate neither recorded the fact whether the confession was voluntarily made nor the questions and answers tending to show that the confession was voluntary, nor the fact whether the required warning was given to the accused—Prag, 6 Luck. 335, Ind. Rul. 1931 Oudh 23, 7 O.W.N. 909, 128 I.C. 215, 1930 Cr.C. 1073, A.I.R. 1930 Oudh 449, 32 Cr.L.J. 97 (100); or where the Magistrate did not at all question the accused as to whether he was making the confession voluntarily—Ranbir Singh, 33 P.L.R. 241, 33 Cr.L.J. 242. This section has no application where no record whatsoever has been made of a confession—Gulabu, 35 All. 260. But the Bombay High Court lays down that neither the language nor the object of sec. 533 would justify a distinction between an omission to comply with the law and an infraction or direct violation of the law. The test is that as long as the irregularity does not injure the accused as to his defence on the merits, it can be cured under sec. 533—Visram Babaji, 21 Bom. 495 (501); Raghu, 23 Bom. 221; Rama Kariappa, supra. In these cases it has been held that this section applies to omissions to comply with the law as well as to infractions of the law, i.e., to defects not only of form but of substance also.

Irregularity in record of confession:—See Notes 1037, 1038 and 1042 under sec. 364.

Omission to sign the record:—See Note 516 under sec. 164 and Note 1040 under sec. 364.

Want of memorandum or certificate:—See Note 519 under sec. 164 and Note 1041 under sec. 364.

Irregularity in recording confession:—See Note 516 under sec. 164.

534. An omission to inform under Section 447 any person of his rights under Chapter XXXIII shall not affect the validity of any proceeding.

Omission to give information under section 447.

This section has been inserted by sec. 34 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XII of 1923.

535. (1) No finding or sentence pronounced or passed shall be deemed invalid merely on the ground that no charge was framed, unless, in the opinion of the Court of appeal or revision, a failure of justice has in fact been occasioned thereby.

Effect of omission to prepare charge.

(2) If the Court of appeal or revision thinks that a failure of justice has been occasioned by an omission to frame a charge, it shall order that a charge be framed, and that the trial be recommenced from the point immediately after the framing of the charge.

1404. Omission to frame charge:—An omission to frame a charge does not invalidate an order of acquittal and render it equivalent to an order of discharge; such order is a bar to a retrial for the same offence—Gurdu, 3 All. 129. Mere omission to frame a charge will not justify a reversal of the order of the Lower Court, unless a failure of justice has been occasioned, especially where at the close of the prosecution evidence-in-chief, the Magistrate laid down the charge—Madhab, 53 Cal. 738, 27 Cr.L.J. 1295. So also, the mere omission to state the previous conviction in the charge as required by sec. 221 (7), is not a sufficient reason for interfering in appeal or revision with the enhanced sentence passed by the trial Court, if there has not been any failure of justice—Abbullu, 7 M.L.T. 77, 11 Cr.L.J. 217; Bisakhi, 29 P.R. 1917, 18 Cr.L.J. 875 (878).

Where a charge was framed under sec. 147, I. P. C., but the accused was convicted of an offence under sec. 323, I. P. C., it was held that the conviction was illegal on account of the absence of a charge under sec. 323, I. P. C., and sec. 535 of this Code did not cure the defect. The words "merely on the ground that no charge was framed" in this section must mean a case where the offence being a petty one, and the evidence being fairly taken the Court framed no charge at all. But where a charge has been framed (in this case a charge under sec. 147, I. P. C., was framed), this section does not apply and it cannot be said that the conviction 'shall not be deemed invalid merely on the ground that no charge was framed'; and the persons charged under sec. 147, I. P. C., for rioting with the common object of causing hurt to the complainant cannot be convicted under sec. 323, I. P. C., of causing hurt to another person—Sita Ahir, 40 Cal. 168. (In other words the Court held that an erroneous or misleading charge was more dangerous than no charge). But in a later case the same High Court has laid down that this section is not confined to cases where no charge at all has been framed, but also applies to cases in which no charge was framed of the particular offence of which the accused has been convicted (though a charge of another offence was framed)—Abdul Rahim, 41 C.L.J. 474, 26 Cr.L.J. 1279. Where a trial was at first begun as a warrant case for an offence under sec. 353, I. P. C., but in the course of hearing the Magistrate found that the offence under sec. 535 was not proved but that the offence was really under sec. 186, I. P. C., which was a summons case, and the Magistrate framed no charge under that section and convicted the accused, held that the trial was not vitiated as the Magistrate was not bound to frame a charge for the summons offence. Even, if the omission appears to have occasioned a failure of justice, the Court of appeal or revision would under sub-sec. (2) of this section order a frame of charge and recommencement of the trial—Ambika Prasad, 53 All. 206, 1930 A.L.J. 1314, 32 Cr.L.J. 313 (314), Ind. Rul 1931 All. 145, 129 I.C. 369, 1931 Cr.C. 7, A.I.R. 1931 All. 7.

In a summons case, the omission to state the particulars of the offence to the accused (which virtually amounts to a frame of charge) is cured by secs. 535 and 537, if there is no suggestion of any failure of justice having been occasioned by such omission—Lahani v. Khushal, 28 N.L.R. 163, 1932 Cr.C. 678 (679).

Where a Magistrate framed a charge under sec. 19 (e) and (f) of the Arms Act, and then submitted the record to the District Magistrate for his sanction and the District Magistrate sanctioned the institution of proceedings, whereupon the trial proceeded and the accused was convicted, it was held that the omission to frame a charge afresh after sanction was cured by this section—Kaka, 4 L.B.R. 247, 8 Cr.L.J. 85.

536. (1) If an offence triable with the aid of assessors is tried by a jury, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid.

(2) If an offence triable by a jury is tried with the aid of assessors, the trial shall not on that ground only be invalid, unless the objection is taken before the Court records its finding.

Trial by jury of offence triable with assessors.

Trial with assessors of offence triable by jury.

1405. Sub-section (1):—The difference between a trial by a jury and a trial with the aid of the assessors lies in the summing up of the case; and the manner in which the verdict of the jury and the opinions of the assessors are taken. It is at this latter point that there is a departure of ways, and if the accused does not put any objection at the crucial point, he cannot afterwards be heard to complain. Where no objection was taken at the trial, it was too late to take objection on appeal—Mausing, 33 Bom. 423, 11 Bom.L.R. 350; Karuppa Thevan, 1930 M.W.N. 776

Section 536, Cr. P. C., merely cures an admitted irregularity in procedure, but even so it says nothing as to whether a trial which should have been a trial with the aid of assessors but was in fact held by a jury should be deemed to have been held as a valid trial by jury, or conversely whether a trial which should have been by jury but was actually held with the aid of assessors should be deemed a valid trial with assessors. In any case sec. 536, Cr. P. C., does not and cannot affect the right of appeal which is governed by sec. 418 (1) read with sec. 410, Cr. P. C. Where the trial ends in an acquittal, and there is or is not an appeal by the Local Government, there will be obviously no prejudice, and the trial may stand. But where it ends in a conviction, and the accused appeals, and the accused is sought to be shut out of an appeal on facts, he will certainly have been prejudiced, and on a strict reading of sec. 536 (1), Cr. P. C., the trial will be incurably bad. To render the trial valid in such a case, the right of appeal on facts would indeed have to be conceded. Prejudice may arise also in another way where the Judge takes a view more favourable to the accused than the jury but is unable to give effect to it because the trial is a trial by jury. (Per Biswas, J.—Goloke Behari Takal v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 161 (175), 173 I.C. 65, A.I.R. 1938 Cal. 51, 66 C.L.J. 225, 42 C.W.N. 129, 10 R.C. 441, I.L.R. (1938) 1 Cal. 290.

Sub-section (2):—Where a case was triable by jury but was tried with the aid of assessors and no objection was taken at the trial, it was held that the trial was not invalid, even though the accused was materially injured, by reason of the fact that the Judge differed from the opinions of the assessors and convicted the accused—Ganapathi, 23 Mad. 632; Sakhawat v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 330, 167 I.C. 61, 19 N.L.J. 320, A.I.R. 1937 Nag. 50, 9 R.N. 163, I.L.R. 1937 Nag. 277. The objection must be taken at the trial and cannot be taken in appeal—Ibid.

In certain cases the failure to choose a jury is not fatal. Assessors may be chosen instead of a jury and vice versa and a failure to take objection at the time is an answer to a subsequent objection that a case triable by a jury was tried with assessors, but this is the result of special statutory provisions, and sec. 536, Cr. P. C., presumably contemplates a jury lawfully empanelled. Sec. 537, Cr. P. C., also makes provision for errors in the jury list, but an irregularity in the constitution of the jury is an irregularity in the proceedings before or during the trial within the meaning of sec. 537, Cr. P. C., for the words "other proceedings" must be read ejusdem generis with the words which precede these. Sec. 537, Cr. P. C., refers to a Court of competent jurisdiction. It does not refer to anything done in the matter of the constitution of the trial Court, and in a trial by Judge and jury the Court is the Judge and jury. Any material irregularity in the constitution of the jury affects the constitution of the Court and its competence. It must be in the public interest that a body of persons in whom lies the power to give a verdict of guilty or not guilty should be constituted strictly according to law—Sheuaram v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 28 (39), 184 I.C. 474, A.I.R. 1939 Snd 209.

537. Subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, no finding, sentence or order passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction shall be reversed or altered under Chapter XXVII or on appeal or revision on account—

Finding or sentence when reversible by reason of error or omission in charge or other proceedings.

— (a) of any error, omission or irregularity in the complaint, summons, warrant, charge, proclamation, order, judgment or other proceedings before or during trial or in any inquiry or other proceedings under this Code, or

(b) (Omitted).

(c) of the omission to revise any list of jurors or assessors in accordance with section 324, or

(d) of any misdirection in any charge to a jury, unless such error, omission, irregularity or misdirection has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

Explanation.—In determining whether any error, omission or irregularity in any proceeding under this Code has occasioned a failure of justice, the Court shall have regard to the fact whether the objection could and should have been raised at an earlier stage in the proceedings.

1405A. Change:—Clause (b) and the illustration have been omitted by sec. 148 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. Clause (b) ran as follows:—“(b) of want of, or any irregularity in, any sanction required by sec. 195 or any irregularity in proceedings taken under sec. 476.” By reason of the omission of this clause, any irregularity in a proceeding under sec. 476 can no more be condoned under sec. 537. Thus, if the Court takes action under sec. 476 in respect of an offence referred to in clause (a) of sec. 195, the proceeding is without jurisdiction, and sec. 537 cannot cure the irregularity—Dore Sah, 2 Luck. 646, 28 Cr.L.J. 681 (682), 103 I.C. 681, 4 O.W.N. 640, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 326, 8 A.I.Cr.R. 400.

The illustration ran as follows:—“A Magistrate being required by law to sign a document signs it in initials only. This is purely an irregularity and does not affect the validity of the proceeding.” This Illustration was given to show the class of irregularity contemplated by this section, as distinguished from substantial departures from law—Allu, 4 Lah. 376 (380). But as this Code nowhere lays down that the Magistrate must sign his name in full and not in initials, the Illustration was considered by the Select Committee of 1916 as “inappropriate” and has been consequently omitted. But a recent Madras case has expressed the opinion that the omission of the Illustration clearly indicates that the Legislature no longer views the defect (signing not by full name but by initials) as a mere irregularity. The inference from the omission of this Illustration is that the defect affects the validity of the proceedings. Therefore, where a judgment prepared by a Bench of Magistrates under sec. 265 was signed by the Magistrates not by full names but by their initials only, the conviction was set aside—Brahmiah, 54 Mad 252, 59 M.L.J. 674, 32 Cr.L.J. 430 (431).

1406. Scope of section:—This section applies to mere errors of procedure arising out of mere inadvertence and not to substantive errors of law, or to cases of disregard or disobedience of the mandatory provisions of this Code—Tirka v. Nanak, 49 All 475, 28 Cr.L.J. 291; Appa Subhana, 8 Bom. 200. It does not apply to cases of disregard or disobedience of the whole of some mandatory provisions of the Code, but applies only to cases of failure to comply with some part of such provisions in the course of a general compliance with the whole—Gangadhar v. Bhangi, 25 Cr.L.J. 1152, 81 I.C. 976, A.I.R. 1925 Nag. 147. When a trial is contrary to law, it is no trial at all, and a disobedience to an express provision of law as to the mode of the trial is not an irregularity which can be cured by this section, but is an illegality which vitiates the whole trial. This section has not the effect of curing material irregularities and absolute illegalities. The errors which can be cured by this section are formal defects of procedure and not substantive errors of law—

Subramanya Ayyar, 25 Mad. 61 (P.C.). This section does not apply to an infringement of statutory requirements. It only applies to errors, omissions and irregularities of a technical nature which may occur by accident or oversight in the course of proceedings conducted in the mode prescribed by statute. If in conducting a trial the Judge adopts a procedure which is a departure from the authorised procedure, it would amount to a violation of the law, which cannot be cured by sec. 537—Allu, 4 Lah. 376, 25 Cr.L.J. 68, 75 I.C. 980, 6 L.L.J. 103, A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 104; Lyme, 4 Lah. 382 (386). Thus, where two cross-cases were at first tried by the Judge separately but were afterwards tried jointly, the evidence for the prosecution in one case was treated at the request of the accused as the defence evidence in the cross-case, only one set of findings was recorded in respect of both cases, and finally one composite judgment was delivered, held that the procedure adopted by the Judge was a serious departure from the usual and proper course, and was not only irregular but grossly illegal. Sec. 537 could not apply to the case—Allup, supra. But see in this connection Sukhi Ahr, 50 All. 457, 26 A.L.J. 176, 30 Cr.L.J. 337; Madat Khan, 8 Lah. 193 (P.C.), 31 C.W.N. 393 (394) and Note 830A. The test to be applied in considering whether a particular infringement of the provisions of the Code does or does not fall within the purview of sec. 537 appears to be thus: Does the error go to the whole root of the trial? Does it in effect vitiate the proceedings? Has the Court assumed an authority which it does not possess? Has it broken the vital rules of procedure? If the error is of such a nature, then the proceedings are vitiated in their very inception and sec. 537 has no application; but the mere fact that a certain provision of this Code is imperative does not in itself indicate that a breach of the provision vitiates the whole proceedings—Bechu Chaube, 45 All. 124 (127), 20 A.L.J. 874, 24 Cr.L.J. 67; Nurmahomed, 54 Bom. 934, 32 Bom.L.R. 1279, 1930 Cr.C. 1182 (1184). A distinction should be made between a positive enactment by the Code that a certain trial shall not take place and a positive enactment that in the course of such a trial certain detailed procedure should be followed. Both are imperative provisions. But still the one is a different thing from the other. In the former case an infringement of the enactment amounts to an assumption of jurisdiction and vitiates the trial from the very beginning. In the latter case, an infringement merely amounts to an error, omission or irregularity in the procedure adopted in the course of the trial. This section aims at curing infringements of the latter type—Nga Hla U, 3 Rang. 139, 26 Cr.L.J. 1336. The bare fact of an omission or irregularity in procedure (e.g., an irregularity in reading over the depositions of witnesses to the accused according to the provisions of sec. 360) unaccompanied by any probable suggestion of any failure of justice having been thereby occasioned, is not enough to warrant the quashing of a conviction, which may be supported by the curative provisions of secs. 535 and 537—Abdul Rahman, 5 Rang. 53, 31 C.W.N. 271 (281), 52 M.L.J. 585, 29 Bom.L.R. 813 (P.C.). After Subrahmanya Ayyar's case (25 Mad. 61, P.C.), the idea prevailed that sec. 537 did not apply to the mandatory provisions of the Code, although there was nothing in the section itself to give such a restricted scope. But the ruling in Abdul Rahman has dispelled that idea, and sec. 537 may now be taken to cover any irregularity in the widest sense of that term, provided there has been no failure of justice—Annai Erappa, 31 L.W. 386, 1930 Cr.C. 186, 31 Cr.L.J. 827. In the face of the pronouncement in Abdul Rahman's case it is no longer open to the Courts in India to hold that the mere fact that an imperative statutory rule of procedure has been broken is enough to vitiate the trial or proceeding. The Court should consider the gravity of the irregularity or omission and whether it might have worked actual injustice to the accused—Kallu v Bashiruddin, 32 Cr.L.J. 372 (375), 129 I.C. 269, 1930 A.L.J. 1504, A.I.R. 1931 All. 3, 53 All. 172, 1931 Cr.C. 3, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 141. See also Rajabali, 32 Cr.L.J. 521, 1930 Cr.C. 1147, 24 S.L.R. 446, 130 I.C. 442, A.I.R. 1930 Snd. 315; and Ramaraju, 32 Cr.L.J. 30, 127 I.C. 654, 1930 M.W.N. 377, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 857, Ind. Rul. 1930 Mad. 1038, 32 M.L.W. 894, 59 M.L.J. 945, 1930 Cr.C. 1033, 53 Mad. 937. A breach of a provision, even though mandatory, cannot be said to be an illegality necessarily vitiating the proceedings. If the judgment has been passed by a Court of competent jurisdiction the sole criterion in every case is whether there has been a failure of justice. The test to be applied is to ascertain whether the accused had a fair trial in spite of the transgression of the prescribed rule of procedure. Even if there is an illegality the High Court will not interfere except in case of failure of justice—Mektar, 42 Cr.L.J. 37 (38), 190 I.C. 838, A.I.R. 1910 Nag. 375, 1940 N.L.J. 224, I.L.R. 1940 Nag. 488, following Kapoor Chand v. Suraj Prasad, 55 All. 301, 142 I.C. 537, 1933 A.L.J. 188, Ind. Rul. 1933 All. 125, 34 Cr.L.J. 414, A.I.R. 1933 All. 264, 1933 Cr.C. 431 (F.B.), Ramaraja, supra, Nga Po Min, 10 Rang. 511, 141 I.C. 89, A.I.R. 1932 Rang. 190, 1932 Cr.C. 932, Ind. Khushal*, 28 N.L.R. 163 (166), 140 I.C. 113, A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 127, 1932 Cr.C. 678, Ind. Rul. 1932 Nag. 134, 33 Cr.L.J. 938, Nayeb Sahana v. Emp. 61 Cal. 399, 152 I.C. 44, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 636, 38 C.W.N. 659, 1934 Cr.C. 929, 35 Cr.L.J. 1479, 7 R.C. 225 and Seva Subramanian v. Emp., A.I.R. 1931 Rang. 161, 133 I.C. 489, Ind. Rul. 1931 Rang. 265, 32 Cr.L.J. 1068, 1931 Cr.C. 657.

The provisions of this section are mandatory, and no Court is entitled to set aside a finding, sentence or order of a subordinate Court in direct contradiction of the terms of the section. The words "subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained" must refer to the other sections in this Chapter unless there is any specific provision in any other section of the Code which says that any particular error will vitiate proceedings in spite of the fact that no failure of justice has been occasioned by such error. There is considerable authority for making a distinction between irregularities which may be cured under the provisions of this section and illegalities which may not be so cured, but it is doubtful whether such a distinction is justified by any section in the Code of Criminal Procedure. The procedure in this country is governed by statute and it is doubtful whether it is admissible for Court to go outside the statute and proceed in a manner contrary to its provisions on general principles—Bhajja v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 549 (551), A.I.R. 1939 All. 238, 1939 A.L.J. 81, 181 I.C. 537, 1939 A.W.R. (H.C.) 1, 11 R.A. 573, 1939 A.Cr.C. 17.

'Subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained':—These words do not refer to the provisions of the entire Code preceding this section, but only to the provisions of this chapter (i.e., secs. 529 to 536)—Ram Subheg, 19 C.W.N. 972, 16 Cr.L.J. 641 (per Sharfuddin and Beachcroft, JJ.); Contra—Raj Chunder v. Gour, 22 Cal 176; Niratan v. Jogesh, 23 Cal 983; Ram Subheg, 19 C.W.N. 972 (per Fletcher, J.).

'Court of competent jurisdiction':—This means a Court of competent jurisdiction in respect of the particular offence charged—Krishnabhat, 10 Bom. 319. If a Magistrate in consequence of a personal disqualification (e.g., under sec. 556) is forbidden by law to try a particular case, though he may be authorised generally to try cases of the same class, he cannot be said to be a Court of competent jurisdiction with respect to that particular case—Sudhama, 23 Cal. 328. Thus, a Magistrate who takes cognizance of a case under sec. 190 (1) (c) is not competent to try the case, if the accused objects to it, and if in spite of such objection he proceeds to try the same himself, he cannot be said to be a Court of competent jurisdiction in respect of that case—Hawthorne, 13 All. 345. If a District Magistrate transfers to a subordinate Magistrate a case which the latter is not competent to try, a trial by the latter of that case is a defect which cannot be cured by this section, as the trial is not held by a Court of competent jurisdiction—Raghu Singh v. Abdul Wahab, 23 Cal. 442. A second class Magistrate is not competent to try an offence under sec. 420, I. P. Code. This is a matter which goes to the very root of the case and is not an irregularity which is covered by this section—Khuda Bakhsh, A.I.R. 1933 Lah 1009 (1010), 1933 Cr.C. 1554, 147 I.C. 737, following Bakhtawar, A.I.R. 1921 Lah 63, 67 I.C. 588, Jwala Prasad, 11 L.L.J. 95 and Rangayya v. Somappa, A.I.R. 1925 Mad. 367.

1407. Failure of justice:—The test in case of errors, omissions or irregularities and other matters of like nature referred to in this section is not whether the Court had acted illegally, (for in one sense every error or irregularity in so far as it contravenes the provisions of the Code is illegal) but whether there had been a failure of justice—Abdur Rahman v. Keramat, 27 Cal. 839. Moreover, the test (viz., whether the error or irregularity has occasioned a failure of justice) is one which can be properly applied only after the final result of the case is known, and cannot be applied while the case is in its preliminary stage. Thus, where a complaint is summarily dismissed under sec. 203, and a fresh complaint on the same facts is entertained by a Magistrate, but the High Court annuls the proceedings taken on the second complaint and orders a further inquiry, the question arises whether the further inquiry should commence de novo or from the stage which was reached in the proceedings taken on the second complaint, and whether the latter course would occasion a failure of justice. But this test cannot be applied at this stage of the case (when no inquiry or trial has yet taken place), and the safest course is to commence the inquiry de novo—Nisratan v. Jogesh, 23 Cal. 983 (1900). If, however, the inquiry has proceeded far enough to enable the test required by this section to be applied, this section may be called in to cure the error or irregularity—Jhamandas, 12 Cr.L.J. 320 (321) (Sind).

The question of prejudice is always a question of fact to be proved by the person raising the question and where there is no prejudice even if there is an irregularity the matter is completely covered by the provisions of this section—Pahlu, 41 Cr.L.J. 55 (58), A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 475, I.L.R. 1939 Lah. 243, 184 I.C. 549, 41 P.L.R. 731.

'In fact':—The words 'in fact' have been introduced into the Code of 1898 apparently in order to emphasize the duty of the Court to go into the merits before interfering in consequence of misdirection or other error—Smither, 26 Mad. 1 (16). The words have been added to emphasize the reality of the requirement that no failure of justice has occurred—Gangadhar, 43 Cal. 173 (177), 20 C.W.N. 63.

1408. Error, omission or irregularity—Error or irregularity in summons or warrant:—See 8 All. 293 in Note 143 under section 68; 38 Mad. 1088, and 18 A.L.J. 1149 in Note 182 under sec. 90; and Note 285 under sec. 115.

A search warrant issued illegally under sec. 96 (1) cannot, by the operation of this section be taken to have been validly issued under sec. 98. The section cannot give legal effect to a defective warrant—Resh Behary, 35 Cal. 1076.

Omission to state the name of the prosecutor or the particulars of the offence in the summons or a delay in the filing of the complaint or the hearing of the case within less than seven days from the date of the service of the summons, in contravention of sec. 15 of the U. P. Prevention of Adulteration Act (VI of 1912), would certainly be an irregularity, but that alone is not sufficient to make the conviction illegal. The irregularity is cured by this section—Kehar Singh, 36 Cr.L.J. 68, A.I.R. 1935 All. 219, 152 I.C. 367, 1934 A.L.J. 1192.

An omission in the summons cannot by itself vitiate a trial. The trial can only be vitiated by a defect in the proceedings at the trial by which the accused is prejudiced. An objection of this nature must be considered in the light of the provisions of sec. 537, Cr. P. C., and the objection must be rejected unless the person concerned can show that he has in fact been prejudiced by the defect alleged—Abdul, A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 77 (79), 1939 O.W.N. 960, 1939 O.L.R. 647, 184 I.C. 742, 41 Cr.L.J. 92, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 248; Muhammad Sadiq v. Delhi Electric Supply and Traction Co., A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 867, 1929 Cr.C. 601, 116 I.C. 889, 30 Cr.L.J. 702. See also H. B. Spiers v. Johiuddin, 33 Cr.L.J. 549, 138 I.C. 98, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 461, 36 C.W.N. 246, 59 Cal. 113, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 419, 1932 Cr.C. 451. Emp.*, 29 Cr.L.J. 799, A.I.R. 1928 All. 492, 111 I.C. 127, 50 All. 876, 26 A.L.J. 1381; Lal Chand v. Emp., 35 Cr.L.J. 1161, 11 O.W.N. 823, 150 I.C. 941, A.I.R. 1934 Oudh 340, 1934 Cr.C. 1156; Gajraj Singh v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 69, A.I.R. 1936 All. 761, 165 I.C. 716, 1936 A.L.R. 932, 1936 Cr.C. 1002, 1936 A.L.J. 1011, 1936 A.W.R. 874; Maiku Lal, 38 Cr.L.J. 326, 166 I.C. 978, 1937 O.W.N. 283, 1937 O.L.J. 79; and

Issue of fresh summons:—Where on an information a summons was issued to the accused, and owing to its disclosing no offence, a fresh summons was issued without any fresh or supplemental information, the error, omission or irregularity in the fresh summons was not sufficient to upset the finding and sentence unless it had occasioned a failure of justice—Jeevanji, 31 Bom 611.

Irregularity in arrest:—Where certain arrests were made without the substance of the warrants being notified to the persons arrested, the omission was cured by this section—Rangpal, 18 Cr.L.J. 666 (All.).

Absence of complaint:—The absence of complaint of Court required by sec. 195 of this Code goes to the root of the case and vitiates the whole trial—Girdhari Lal, 29 O.C. 1, 86 I.C. 993, 2 O.W.N. 174, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 413, 12 O.L.J. 194, 26 Cr.L.J. 929; Ameraj, 23 A.L.J. 35, 26 Cr.L.J. 751, 86 I.C. 287, A.I.R. 1925 All. 306. Although it is no longer possible to apply the provisions of this section in the case of want of sanction required by section 195, Cr. P. C., an irregularity in a complaint made by one Court to another is curable under sub-section (a), since a complaint made by a Court is, for the purposes of this section, in no wise different from a complaint made by a private individual—Vithoo Raghoji v. Emp., A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 487 (489), 1938 N.L.J. 285, 40 Cr.L.J. 388, 180 I.C. 577, 11 R.N. 373, I.L.R. 1939 Nag. 338. See Note 614A under section 195.

When a complaint under sec. 21 of the Cattle Trespass Act (I of 1871) is made by an unauthorized person there is really no complaint before the Court at all. The defect is one that cannot be cured under the provisions of this section—Hammimal v. Vinayakrao, A.I.R. 1931 Nag. 98, 32 Cr.L.J. 896, 132 I.C. 457, 27 N.L.R. 197, Ind. Rul. 1931 Nag. 105. When a complaint under sec. 22 of the Cattle Trespass Act (I of 1871) is not made within ten days from the date of the seizure to the Magistrate of the District or any Magistrate authorised to receive and try charges without reference by the Magistrate of the District, this section does not cure the defect—Mehdi Husain v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 827, 175 I.C. 662, 1938 O.W.N. 596, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 183, 1938 O.L.R. 303, 11 R.O. 2.

A complaint by an unauthorized person in contravention of sec. 228 of the Punjab Municipal Act (1911) is illegal. The defect cannot be cured by this section and the conviction is liable to be set aside—Shiv Dass, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 972, 150 I.C. 693, 36 P.L.R. 180, 1934 Cr.C. 1356.

In revision if there is an absence of a complaint by the local authority or an authorized person as contemplated in sec. 10 of the Bihar and Orissa Prevention of Adulteration Act (II of 1919), and if the proceedings are irregular for that reason, this section provides sufficiently to cure the irregularity—Sarup Lal, 38 Cr.L.J. 192, 166 I.C. 206, A.I.R. 1936 Pat. 636, 17 P.L.T. 953, 3 B.R. 137, 9 R.P. 264, 1936 Cr.C. 1067.

Error or omission in the charge:—See Notes 748 and 754 where recent rulings have been inserted and discussed. An omission to set out the guilty intention of the accused in a charge will be cured by this section unless it is shown that the omission has occasioned a failure of justice—Balmakand v. Ghansamram, 22 Cal. 391. Where the law and section of the law were mentioned in the charge, the omission of the words "unlawfully and maliciously" in the charge was not so material as to prejudice the accused—Amritalal, 42 Cal. 957. The omission of the word 'dishonestly' in a charge under section 411, I. P. C., is not a ground of reversing the conviction and sentence, where the accused person fully understood the nature of the offence with which he was charged and has not been prejudiced by the omission—Rakhma, 10 B.H.C.R. 373. Where there is ample evidence to show the common object of an assembly, the omission to mention the common object in the charge can be cured by this section—Harinder, 2 P.L.J. 541, 18 Cr.L.J. 911; Basiraddi, 21 Cal. 827; Hasanali, 30 Bom.L.R. 653, 30 Cr.L.J. 467 (468). But where the charge neither specifies the common object of the unlawful assembly nor specifies the property the taking possession of which is supposed to be the common object of the assembly, the defect in the charge cannot be cured by this section—Paresh Nath, 33 Cal 295. Where the description given in the charge is not a complete description, alternatively it is supererogatory, the provisions of secs. 225, 232 and 537, Cr. P. C., apply—Ramendra, 32 Cr.L.J. 844 (847), 132 I.C. 174, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 410, 35 C.W.N. 716, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 558, 1931 Cr.C. 506, 58 Cal. 1303.

Where there was an irregularity in the proceedings before the trial as the sanction of the Provincial Government was wrongly given under section 197, Cr. P. C., and there was also an irregularity in consequence thereof during the trial as the Magistrate refused to stay proceedings pending an application under sec. 526, Cr. P. C., to the High Court in view of the provisions of sub-section (7) of sec. 526, Cr. P. C., it was necessary for the accused to show that as a consequence of these irregularities there had in fact been a failure of justice—Pearey Lal v. Emp., A.I.R. 1940 Pesh. 41 (44), 42 Cr.L.J. 68, 191 I.C. 91.

A preliminary enquiry under section 10 of the Child Marriage Restraining Act (XIX of 1929) is absolutely necessary before a Court can take cognizance of an offence under that Act. Where such an enquiry was not held, the issue of process was set aside and the case was remanded for the holding of a preliminary enquiry—Jaggu Naidu, A.I.R. 1939 Mad 530, 183 I.C. 581, 49 M.L.W. 552, 1939 M.W.N. 411, (1939) 1 M.L.J. 900, 12 R.M. 343, 40 Cr.L.J. 818; Mangal v. Kalu, 12 Lah. 383, 130 I.C. 783, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 56, 31 P.L.R. 945, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 351, 32 Cr.L.J. 616, 1931 Cr.C. 120; Chand Mal, 15 Lah. 63, 151 I.C. 830, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 155, 35 P.L.R. 8, 1934 Cr.C. 333, 7 R.L. 209, 35 Cr.L.J. 1436; Muhammad Hashim, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 213, I.L.R. 1940 Kar 442. Where the Magistrate has not recorded any reason why the complainant in a case under the Child Marriage Restraining Act (XIX of 1929) was not required to execute a bond, held that the provision of sec. 11 of that Act was imperative, that the irregularity could not be cured by anything in sec. 537, Cr. P. C., and that the conviction was liable to be set aside for this irregularity—Kaluram, 34 Cr.L.J. 554, 143 I.C. 279, 37 C.W.N. 626, 1933 Cr.C. 705, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 433, Ind. Rul. 1933 Cal. 393. This section applies only to errors of procedure arising out of inadvertence and not to substantial errors of law, or to cases of disobedience of the mandatory provisions of the Code or any other law at the time in force in respect of the conduct of trials. Therefore the omission to comply with the provisions of sections 10 and 11 of the Child Marriage Restraining Act (Act XIX of 1929) is a substantive error of law vitiating the proceedings and not curable by this section—Gajai v. Bhagawandas, 20 N.L.J. 115. Distinguishing the abovementioned rulings it has, however, been recently held that the failure to comply with sec. 10 of the Child Marriage Restraining Act (XIX of 1929), although it is an irregularity being a non-compliance with a mandatory provision of law, is one of procedure only. It is one in the exercise of jurisdiction and cannot destroy the competent jurisdiction on which the Court already has. Strictly speaking the irregularity is not in the mode of trial either, because although the Court has taken cognizance of the case the trial does not begin until the accused appears in Court. Section 537, Cr. P. C., applies to this case. It is for the High Court in its discretion to exercise its powers of revision under sec. 439, Cr. P. C., and it will do so only to correct miscarriage of justice—Mekhtar, 42 Cr.L.J. 37 (39), 190 I.C. 838, A.I.R. 1940 Nag. 375, 1940 N.L.J. 224, I.L.R. 1940 Nag. 488.

It should be noted that clause (a) refers to a finding, sentence or order, i.e. it refers to a conviction and not to an acquittal. In other words, when the Court of Appeal has before it the question of confirming or setting aside a conviction, an omission by the trial Magistrate to frame a charge or an omission or irregularity in the charge is no ground for setting aside a conviction unless there has been a failure of justice. But when a Court of appeal is dealing with an appeal against an acquittal, there is no provision under which a defect in the charge can be condoned and indeed no such provision could Judge, or any Commissioner for taking affidavits in any Court of Record in British India, or any Commissioner to administer oaths in England or Ireland, or any Magistrate authorized to take affidavits or affirmations in Scotland.

1409. Affidavits sworn before the Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta cannot be used before the Patna High Court—B. N. Ry. Co. v. Sheikh Makbul, 7 P.L.T. 343, 27 Cr.L.J. 313. An affidavit which purports to have been sworn before an officer of a District Judge's Court cannot be used in support of an application for transfer under sec. 526, Cr. P. C. The High Court refused to entertain an application for transfer based on such an affidavit—Mahim v. Amjad, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 710, 134 I.C. 1278, 1931 Cr.C. 990, 33 Cr.L.J. 61, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 62; Ramditta Mall v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 847, 184 I.C. 10, 12 R.Pesh. 22, A.I.R. 1939 Pesh. 38. An affidavit made before a Magistrate who has no seisin of the case or who is not competent to try the case (but is competent only to commit, it being a sessions case) is not valid and cannot be used before a High Court—Ram Chandra, 5 Pat. 110, 7 P.L.T. 304, 27 Cr.L.J. 499. A Deputy Magistrate has no power to administer oath to a person making an affidavit to be used in High Court; and such person cannot be prosecuted for perjury if he makes any false statement in such affidavit—Iswarchandra, 14 Cal. 653. But an affidavit to be used in a Civil Court may be sworn to before any Magistrate by virtue of sec. 139 of the Civil Procedure Code—Dinobandhu v. Hurrymutty, 8 C.W.N. xl.

An affidavit must contain nothing but bare facts known to the person who makes the affidavit either personally or upon information from a source which he believes to be a correct source and one on which reliance can be placed. As human beings are liable to make mistakes in reciting facts, the law further requires that the contents of affidavits should be carefully read over to the deponents in a language which they understand and should be vouched by them to be correct. Those who make affidavits, those who prepare affidavits and those who are entrusted with the duty of having affidavits sworn before them must take proper care to see that these provisions of law are duly carried out—Mangal Prasad, 36 All. 13 (16), 11 A.L.J. 985, 15 Cr.L.J. 164.

The expression "any Commissioner for taking affidavits in any Court of Record in British India" in this section does not mean any Commissioner for taking affidavits for use in any Court of Record in British India. The Commissioner referred to in this section is a person who is actually sitting in the Court precincts where he is entitled to sit and who has been authorized to administer oaths within the Court precincts. Where an affidavit is sworn before a Commissioner of Oaths appointed under sec. 139, Civil Procedure Code, it cannot be said to have been sworn before a person who is authorized to administer the oath—Ramditta Mall v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 847 (849), 184 I.C. 10, 12 R.Pesh. 22, A.I.R. 1939 Pesh. 38.

539A. (1) When any application is made to any Court in the course of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, and allegations are made therein respecting any public servant, the applicant may give evidence of the facts alleged in the application by affidavit, and the Court may if it thinks fit, order that evidence relating to such facts be so given.

An affidavit to be used before any Court other than a High Court under this section may be sworn or affirmed in the manner prescribed in section 539, or before any Magistrate.

Affidavits under this section shall be confined to, and shall state separately, such facts as the deponent is able to prove from his own knowledge and such facts as he has reasonable grounds to believe to be true, and, in the latter case, the deponent shall clearly state the grounds of such belief.

(2) The Court may order any scandalous and irrelevant matter in an affidavit to be struck out or amended.

This section and the next have been added by section 150 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "This new section is intended to discourage the making of false and scandalous statements in petitions filed before the Courts, if such petition seeks to impugn the action of subordinate authorities"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). "We think that the provisions of this section should apply to all criminal proceedings, including appeals. We would allow the applicant to give evidence by affidavit, and would leave the Court a discretion to require this to be done in any case"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

1409A. Under this section, an affidavit to be used before a Court other than a High Court, e.g., before a District Magistrate, must be sworn in the manner prescribed in sec. 539 or before a Magistrate, but neither of these sections authorises the swearing of an affidavit before the Nazir of a subordinate Court, who has no authority to administer oath; and the person making a false statement in the affidavit cannot be convicted of an offence under sec. 193, I. P. Code—Ganpat Devaji, 31 Bom.L.R. 144, 30 Cr.L.J. 593 (594).

This section applies to an accused. It applies to any person who chooses to make allegations respecting a public servant and in support of those allegations swears an affidavit. If the accused person chooses to come within the scope of this section and swears an affidavit on false facts, he should be liable to punishment which can be inflicted upon persons who swear such false affidavits. In view of the change of law the judgment in the case of—Malan, 7 I.C. 914, 33 All. 163, 11 Cr.L.J. 537, 7 A.L.J. 1143 need no longer be followed—Badri Prasad v. Jhamman, 34 Cr.L.J. 457, 142 I.C. 900 55 All 114, Ind. Rul. 1933 All 140, 1932 A.L.J. 1076, 1933 Cr.C. 53, A.I.R. 1933 All. 47.

Where in an affidavit the accused has made a reckless accusation against the Magistrate as well as the Government Advocate and the Deputy Superintendent of Police, it is expedient in the interests of justice that he should be called upon to show cause why he should not be prosecuted under section 193 read with sec. 199, I. P. C., for affirming a false affidavit—K. L. Gouba v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 955 (959), 170 I.C. 586, 18 Lah. 114, 10 R.L. 135, 39 P.L.R. 643, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 411.

The Chief Minister of a Province is a public servant within the meaning of this section—Ramditta Mall v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 847 (848), 184 I.C. 10, 12 R.Pesh. 22, A.I.R. 1939 Pesh. 38.

539B. (1) Any Judge or Magistrate may, at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding, after due notice to the parties, visit and inspect any place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed, or any other place which it is in his opinion necessary to view for the purpose of properly appreciating the evidence given at such inquiry or trial, and shall without unnecessary delay record a memorandum of any relevant facts observed at such inspection.

Local inspection.

(2) Such memorandum shall form part of the record of the case. If the Public Prosecutor, complainant or accused so desires, a copy of the memorandum shall be furnished to him free of cost:

Provided that, in the case of a trial by jury or with the aid of assessors, the Judge shall not act under this section unless such jury or assessors are also allowed a view under section 293.

"This section is inserted definitely prescribing that any Judge or Magistrate may, at any stage of any inquiry or trial, visit and inspect any place connected with the occurrence, subject to his recording a note of his inspection"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). "We are of opinion that the Judge or Magistrate shall view the locus in quo only for the purpose of properly appreciating the evidence given at the trial, and that in the case of a trial by jury or with assessors, the Judge should only view if the jury or assessors do the same under sec. 293. We also think that notice should be given to the parties of the intention of the Judge or Magistrate to visit the locus. We would also provide that the memorandum to be made by the Judge or Magistrate shall form part of the record of the case, and that a copy of it may be furnished to both sides"—Report of the Select Committee of 1916.

1410. Local inspection:—The object of local inspection is to enable the Magistrate to understand and test the evidence of witnesses examined in the Court and not to obtain additional information or to extract admission from the accused—Ajodhya Prasad Sonar v. Municipal Committee, Khurai, 37 Cr.L.J. 837, 163 I.C. 413, 18 N.L.J. 320. A trying Magistrate may visit the scene of an alleged offence to test the evidence he has heard in Court, and act on the opinion he has formed from what he has seen in adjudicating between the parties. The Court ought, in every case in which it has made a local inspection, to acquaint the parties with the opinion it has formed. An immediate report of what is seen should be placed on the record and laid open to the scrutiny of the parties—Babbon Sheikh, 37 Cal. 340 (349, 357); Parmeshwar, 3 P.L.T. 347, 23 Cr.L.J. 440, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 296. A Magistrate, when making an inspection of the scene of offence, should invariably be accompanied by both the parties or their pleaders, who should draw his attention to facts if they choose and thus prevent him from drawing wrong inference—Chanbasappa, Ratanlal 854, Munikam, 19 Mad. 263 (266); Krishnappa v. Singoda, 2 Ver 272. If the Magistrate makes the local inquiry at the instance of one party, without giving notice to the other party, the procedure is illegal—Ram Sahai v. D.arka, 1 P.L.T. 569, 22 Cr.L.J. 424, 61 I.C. 712 (713). See also Ajodhya Prasad Sonar v. Municipal Committee, Khurai, supra; Bankim Behari Sen v. Yusuf Mian, 40 Cr.L.J. 514, 180 I.C. 858, A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 185, 19 P.L.T. 918, 5 B.R. 498, 11 K.P. 549 and Jumo Sileman v. Hashim Umar, 38 Cr.L.J. 783, 169 I.C. 431, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 125 (126), 31 S.L.R. 51, 10 R.S. 3. A local inspection must be held sparingly and the danger of such local inspection is intensified when one or both of the parties are absent at the time of local inspection—Wlayat, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 388 (391), 8 O.W.N. 857, 1931 Cr.C. 820. A Magistrate may make a local inspection not only for the purpose of understanding the evidence adduced in Court, but also for the purpose of testing it by the light of his own observations. If the Magistrate has seen a certain state of things in making a local inspection, he can use the testimony of his own senses for testing the veracity of the witnesses deposing before him as regards the feature of the locality—Rabbon Sheikh, 37 Cal. 340 (355, 256). But where a Magistrate made a local inspection and used it not for the purpose of understanding the evidence given at the trial, but for the purpose of obtaining information which did not appear from the evidence of the witnesses, the procedure was quite illegal, as the Magistrate went beyond the powers granted to him by this section and made himself a witness in the case. The trial was vitiated and must be set aside—Fakira, 29 Cr.L.J. 655, 110 I.C. 112, A.I.R. 1928 Pat. 567, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 455, 10 P.L.T. 279; Hari Mohan, 30 Cr.L.J. 491 (492), 115 I.C. 556, Ind. Rul. 1929 Pat. 220.

If a case is tried by a Bench of Magistrates, the inspection must be made by all the Magistrates. The memorandum drawn up by some of the Magistrates would be of no use or finality to a Magistrate who has not seen the spot and consequently be in a position to state whether the description therein is correct. It is therefore necessary that all the members of the Bench should join in any inspection made—S. bastian Lobo v. D'Souza, 1932 M.W.N. 645, 33 Cr.L.J. 655, Ind. Rul. 1932 Mad. 595, 138 I.C. 608, 1932 Cr.C. 834, A.I.R. 1932 Mad. 676. See Vithal v. Madho, 17 N.L.J. 269, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 77.

A local inspection is only permitted for the purpose of properly appreciating the evidence in the case, and cannot take the place of evidence itself. If the Magistrate uses it for the purpose of deciding the main issues in the case, i.e., if he uses his personal knowledge derived from the local inspection, without affording the accused an opportunity to cross-examine or to explain the points against him, it amounts to a material irregularity vitiating the proceedings—Moinuddin, 2 P.L.T. 455, 22 Cr.L.J. 442, 61 I.C. 794 (797); Tirkha v. Nanak, 49 All. 475, 28 Cr.L.J. 291 (293); Ram Sahai v. Dwarka, 1 P.L.T. 569, 22 Cr.L.J. 424, 61 I.C. 712 (713); Jowala Singh, 10 Lah. 138, 29 Cr.L.J. 719 (720).

The right of a Magistrate to make a local inspection has now been declared and recognized by this section. Where in a case under sec. 145, Cr. P. C., the Magistrate finds difficulty in following the plans put in by the parties and therefore he, after notice to the parties makes a local inspection in order better to understand the evidence and the topographical conditions, and the inspection note is made in the presence of the parties and no objection is taken, there is no irregularity in the procedure adopted by the Magistrate—Gurditta v. Taja, 40 Cr.L.J. 519 (521), 181 I.C. 59, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 108, I.L.R. 1938 Lah. 611, 41 P.L.R. 217, 11 R.L. 741.

If the Sessions Judge thinks it necessary or desirable to visit the place of occurrence, he should give due notice to the parties, and proceed thither with the assessors and the parties, before the close of the trial, and before the opinions of the assessors are recorded—Oudh Behari, 1 C.L.R. 143; Deya, 9 L.B.R. 88, 9 Bur.L.T. 133, 17 Cr.L.J. 500. If no notice is given to the parties, it is not competent to the Judge to take into account any observations of the locality made by him. And where the Judge made an inspection of the locality after the assessors had given their opinions, the Appellate Court eliminated that portion of the judgment which related to the visit to the spot and the Judge's conclusion therefrom, and decided the case on the other materials—Deya, supra.

During the trial of the accused persons, one of whom had made a confession, the Sessions Judge went himself to the scene of the crime accompanied by the assessors and the confessing accused, who showed him the ground and made certain additional statements by way of comment or illustration of his confession, and the Judge made note of them. Held that the law does not recognize a procedure of this kind and that the Judge was clearly wrong in allowing the accused to make the additional statements and in recording them—Kesho Singh, 20 O.C. 136, 18 Cr.L.J. 742. See Note under section 293.

When a Magistrate makes a local inspection, he should without unnecessary delay record a memorandum of the inspection and supply the petitioner with a copy thereof. The Magistrate's refusal to make a memorandum is an illegality vitiating the proceedings, or in any case, an irregularity by which the defence is prejudiced—Jowala Singh, 10 Lah. 138, 110 I.C. 463, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 479, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 435, 29 Cr.L.J. 719 (720). The Magistrate must prepare a memorandum, and put it on the record. If he makes rough notes in pencil and then destroys them after writing his order, he acts illegally—Tirkha v. Nanak, 49 All. 475, 28 Cr.L.J. 291 (293). He must record the result of his inspection at once so that the parties may have an opportunity of seeing what the facts are which he considered to be established by the local inspection—Jowala, supra. A Magistrate should not, after making a local inspection, deliver his judgment relying upon that inspection without giving the parties an opportunity to rebut his opinion. His report should be open to the scrutiny of the parties—Babbon Sheikh, 37 Cal. 340. If the Magistrate holds a local inquiry but makes no memorandum of the facts observed, and then convicts the accused upon the knowledge of those facts, the procedure is illegal—See also Parmeshwar, 3 P.L.T. 347, 23 Cr.L.J. 440, A.I.R. 1922 Pat. 296. In a Calcutta case it has been held that the provisions of sub-section (2) are mandatory, and therefore where the Magistrate made a local inspection and drew up a diagram and made an inspection note thereon but the note did not form part of the record of the case, the procedure was illegal and not merely irregular, and the defect could not be cured even though there was no prejudice to the accused—Hriday Gobinda, 52 Cal. 148, 40 C.L.J. 149, 25 Cr.L.J. 1375, 82 I.C. 767, A.I.R. 1924 Cal. 1035. But this ruling has been dissented from in numerous cases. Thus, in a later case of the same High Court, where the local inquiry was made in the presence of both parties, and the Magistrate made no memorandum of the inspection, but the petitioners' pleader who was present at the time did not ask the Magistrate to record a memorandum or to attach a memorandum to the record or to give him a copy, and was content to go on to judgment without seeing the memorandum or even ascertaining whether one was made, it was held that the petitioners could not be allowed to say that for this formal defect the proceedings should be set aside, unless they could show that the Magistrate's omission had caused them prejudice—Forbes v. Md. Ali Haidar, 53 Cal. 46, 42 C.L.J. 131, 90 I.C. 308, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 1046, 26 Cr.L.J. 1524 (dissenting from Hriday Gobinda, supra). The other High Courts also are of opinion that where it is clear that the order of the Magistrate was mainly based on the evidence adduced in the case and not on what he saw in his local inspection, the omission to make a memorandum of the inspection does not render the trial illegal. It is at most an irregularity covered by section 537—Todar Mal, 53 All. 215, 1930 A.L.J. 1437, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 169, 129 I.C. 441, 1931 Cr.C. 14, A.I.R. 1931 All. 14, 32 Cr.L.J. 309 (310); Raghunandan, A.I.R. 1931 All. 433, 1931 Cr.C. 705, 1931 A.L.J. 912; Jagannath, A.I.R. 1935 Nag. 23; Tan Kyi Lin, 5 Bur.L.J. 100, 27 Cr.L.J. 1281 (1282); Saryu, 135 I.C. 226, 1932 Cr.C. 37, A.I.R. 1932 All. 28, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 50, 1932 A.L.J. 523, 33 Cr.L.J. 124; Khushal Jeram, 50 Bom. 680, 27 Cr.L.J. 1151, 97 I.C. 671, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 534, 28 Bom.L.R. 1026; Jumo Sileman v Hashim Umar, 38 Cr.L.J. 783 (784), 169 I.C. 431, 31 S.L.R. 51, 10 R.S. 3, A.I.R. 1937 Snd. 125; Jamna Prasad v Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 427, 174 I.C. 523, 10 R.N. 417, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 325, I.L.R. 1940 Nag. 188; Shakura v Nasira, 39 Cr.L.J. 630, 175 I.C. 259, 1938 O.W.N. 595, 1938 O.A. 504, 1938 A.Cr.C. 50, 1938 O.L.R. 290, 10 R.O. 319, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh. 182. All these cases dissented from 52 Cal. 148. Where after the Magistrate had made a local inspection, he gave judgment convicting the accused and then after delivering judgment he made a note of the result of such inspection in the order sheet, held that the procedure was irregular; but as the Magistrate's judgment in this case was mainly based on the documents on the record and on the oral evidence before him, and he used the local inspection only to confirm the evidence which he had already before him, the judgment of the Magistrate should not be set aside as the accused was not prejudiced by such irregularity—Bhola Nath v. Kedar, 25 Cr.L.J. 705, A.I.R. 1925 Cal. 353. But where the Magistrate gave no notice to the parties, kept no memorandum of the facts observed by him and referred to by him in his judgment and was largely influenced in his judgment not only by personal inspection of the site but by local inquiries made by him, the irregularities disclosed in the proceedings cannot be cured under section 537, Cr. P. Code—Jumo Sileman v. Hashim Umar, supra.

This section which empowers the Court to make a local inspection does not contemplate a procedure by which the presiding officer would, to all intents and purposes, put himself in the position of a witness in the case. A Magistrate, therefore, rightly refuses the offer by the accused to make a demonstration of moon gazing in his presence in order to test whether his advertisement, which was the basis of a charge of cheating against him, was true or false—Akhil Kishore Ram v Emp., 29 Cr.L.J. 442 (444), 174 I.C. 635, 19 P.L.T. 375, 4 B.R. 463, 10 R.P. 541, 1938 P.W.N. 93, A.I.R. 1938 Pat. 185.

• The Magistrate had to determine whether he was prepared to accept the evidence of identification, the defence being that the case was one of mistaken identity. He visited the spot one evening and came to the conclusion that there was sufficient light to enable anybody to mark closely the features of a stranger but did not record a memorandum of relevant facts observed at such inspection. Held that the Magistrate had gone beyond the scope of this section. He assumed that the condition of the light and atmosphere were the same on the night that he went to the spot as they were at the time of occurrence and also that the powers of observation of other persons were as well developed as his. Such local inspection could not, therefore, be made the basis of conviction—Badal Ali v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 624, 181 I.C. 990, 11 R.C. 885, 43 C.W.N. 392, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 304. Human memory being what it is, it is very difficult to place any reliance upon what the Magistrate found, unless a memorandum has been made almost immediately—Ibid; Dalu Ghose v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 795, 183 I.C. 431, 12 R.C. 157, 43 C.W.N. 896, A.I.R. 1939 Cal. 487.

Where the Magistrate not only fails to record a memorandum of local inspection but he also prepares a map which is used as evidence in the case, it is quite clear that in doing this he places himself in the position of a witness. Unless the sketch map is proved in the witness-box, it is impossible to use it as evidence or to say what value should be attached to it. In such a case the only course open to a Court of Revision is to order a re-trial by some other Magistrate—Dalu Ghosh v. Emp., supra.

As to the circumstances under which a Magistrate making a local inspection is incompetent to try the case, see Note 1374 under section 526, and Note 1432 under section 556.

540. Any Court may, at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding under this Code, summon any person as a witness, or examine any person in attendance, though not summoned as a witness, or recall and re-examine any person already examined; and the Court shall summon and examine or recall and re-examine any such person if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case.

1411. Examination of Court witnesses:—This section confers very wide powers upon a Court in the matter of summoning witnesses, but the wider the powers, the greater is the exercise of discretion required of the Magistrate. It was not intended by this section that the Magistrate should exercise his powers at the bidding of any person, but the powers are given to prevent any danger or miscarriage of justice owing to some particular witness not having been called—Sitab Singh v. Dalaganjan, 12 A.L.J. 15, 14 Cr.L.J. 682 (683). As for the summoning of Court witnesses, that is entirely a matter for the Court to decide and it is not for the accused to insist. It is open to the accused to summon them in his defence, if so advised—Chhotey Miyan, A.I.R. 1936 Nag 250. If the Magistrate thinks that certain evidence is necessary for a proper decision of the case, he is bound to bring that evidence upon the record under the provisions of this section, whether the suggestion emanates from the complainant or not. He should not, of course, examine any witness under this section merely because the complainant chooses to suggest the witness; but if he himself thinks that the evidence of the witness is essential he is not only allowed to examine the witness but is by law bound to do so—Ram Bharosey, A.I.R. 1936 All 269, 37 Cr.L.J. 522, 162 I.C. 47, 1936 A.L.J. 303, 1936 Cr.C. 246. This section is a supplementary provision enabling the Court to examine, and in certain circumstances imposing on it the duty of examining, a material witness who would not otherwise have been brought before the Court. But a Magistrate misuses this power if he uses it to anticipate the defence of an accused to his prejudice, or if he uses it, after satisfying himself that the accused has a good defence, to discharge the accused instead of acquitting him. A Magistrate cannot resort

This section is expressed in the widest possible terms and the intention is not to limit the discretion of the trying Court in any way. At the same time the Courts ought to remember that the purpose of this section is not to enable one party or the other to fill up the gaps in his case and to improve it by new matter at a late stage, but to enable the Court to act in the interest of justice when it considers such action necessary—Ramchandra Prasad v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 657 (658), 168 I.C. 979, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 246, 3 B.R. 508, 9 R.P. 522, 18 P.L.T. 483, 1937 P.W.N. 519.

The discretion given to Magistrate under this section has to be exercised with a great deal of caution. Where after examining the record as it stood at the time, the Magistrate felt that some points had been left obscure and in order to elucidate them it was necessary to recall certain witness and to examine a new witness, and when this evidence was recorded, he took the precaution of asking the accused if he wanted to add anything to his previous statement, and on his replying in the negative, he heard further arguments and then proceeded to decide the case, held that there was no illegality in the procedure—Mangat Rai, 10 Lah L.J. 262, 29 Cr.L.J. 740.

The first part of this section is an enabling provision whereby a Court in the exercise of its discretion is empowered, at any time before it actually pronounces judgment, to take further evidence either for the prosecution or for the defence, and for that purpose it may adjourn the hearing of a case in order to procure the attendance of the proper persons. In many instances it happens that a new light is thrown on the case by witnesses for the defence and it then becomes desirable, sometimes in the interests of the accused himself, that fresh evidence should be called for. The second part of this section is imperative. If the new evidence appears to the Court essential to the just decision of the case, the Court has no choice but to take such evidence. The new witnesses should be examined, cross-examined and re-examined. Where the defence case could not have been anticipated by the prosecution, and it is said that witnesses are available to prove the falsity of the defence case, the Court should allow such witnesses to be examined. The accused should be given liberty to examine any further witnesses whom he wishes to examine to meet the evidence of the fresh witnesses for the prosecution—Maung Po Hmyin, 1 Rang 308, 25 Cr.L.J. 217, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 216, 2 Bur.L.J. 127.

It is manifestly the duty of the Court to summon and examine any person whose evidence the Court considers essential to the just decision of the case—Narsingh Singh v. Emp., A.I.R. 1939 Pat. 659 (661), 1939 P.W.N. 712, 20 P.L.T. 655, 185 I.C. 594, 6 B.R. 215. It is the duty of the trial Court to examine any witness that may throw light on the occurrence—Bhagwantrao v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 858 (859), 163 I.C. 702, 18 N.L.J. 289, 9 R.N. 14. Where witnesses, who were in a position to know what happened at the time of the alleged commission of the crime, are not called by the prosecution for any sufficient reason and the defence do not desire to examine them as their witnesses, they should be examined as witnesses called by the Court under this section—Nga Kan Chai v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 1040 (1042), 171 I.C. 129, 13 R.R. 133, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 139, following Nga Aung Gyi v. Emp., 14 Rang 45. See also Murd Dood, 38 Cr.L.J. 1101 (1102), 171 I.C. 672, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 254, 10 R.S. 116. There is a duty cast upon the Court to arrive at the truth by all lawful means and one of such is the examination of witnesses of its own accord when for certain obvious reasons neither party is prepared to call witnesses who are known to be in a position to speak to important relevant facts—Donald Dixon, 40 Cr.L.J. 35 (36), 178 I.C. 341, 1938 M.W.N. 817, 48 M.L.W. 363, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 900, 11 R.M. 443.

Where the Magistrate visited the scene of occurrence without notice to the parties, in contravention of the provisions of sec. 539B, and made certain inquiries in the course of inspection, and then as a result of the inquiry, summoned several persons as witnesses, purporting to do so under sec. 540, held that the action of the Magistrate could not be justified under section 540. This section merely provides that a Magistrate may mon any witness whose evidence appears to be necessary; and the most common way of knowing whether the evidence of such a witness is necessary is through the evidence of other witnesses in the case. But this section does not contemplate that the Magistrate should acquire such knowledge by going into the highways and by-ways and searching for further evidence; and the power to summon a witness does not by any means imply a power to discover such witness by personal inquiry out of Court—Pakir Muhammad, 4 Rang. 106, 27 Cr.L.J. 1084. And so, where in a proceeding under sec. 488, the Magistrate being unable to arrive at a decision as to the legitimacy of a child, and as to whether there was a valid marriage between its parents, went to the village of the defendant and examined four of its residents, and on the strength of the evidence of those persons decided that the child was legitimate, held that the Magistrate went beyond the reasonable discretion afforded by sec. 540—Narayana v. Bhargavi, 52 M.L.J. 118, 28 Cr.L.J. 251.

When an accused person has been examined under sec. 342 after the close of the prosecution, and then a witness is examined under sec. 540, it is not necessary to examine the accused again. See 3 Pat. 1015 and other cases cited in Note 977 under sec. 342.

A Magistrate may summon any person as a Court witness at any stage of the proceedings, but in fairness to the parties and to afford them an opportunity of proper cross-examination he should (save under exceptional circumstances) inform them beforehand of the names of those witnesses—Udho Ram, 10 Lah. 790, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 120 (121).

There is nothing in sec. 139A, Cr. P.-C., which can exclude the exercise of the Court's powers under this section—Kishorimohan v. Krishnabipari, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 527, 58 Cal. 461, 1931 Cr.C. 679, 32 Cr.L.J. 1187, 134 I.C. 574, Ind. Rul. 1931 Cal. 862.

Who can summon witnesses:—Only the trying Magistrate can summon witnesses under this section. It cannot be done by another Magistrate who is not seised of the case, during the temporary absence of the trying Magistrate—Mangal Prasad, 36 All. 13, 11 A.L.J. 986.

'May summon':—It is entirely in the discretion of the Court to call and examine witnesses; and the Public Prosecutor cannot demand as a matter of right to call and examine any witness not examined before the committing Magistrate—Hayfield, 14 All. 212. See Note 893.

'At any stage':—Although it is true that proper discretion has to be exercised under sec. 540, still the terms of this section are extremely wide, and any Court can at any stage of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding summon any person as a witness, if his evidence appears to it essential to the just decision of the case. This power can be exercised even after the close of the case for the prosecution and the defence—In re Chellaperumal, 46 M.L.J. 325, 25 Cr.L.J. 354. A Magistrate can, under this section, receive fresh evidence after the evidence on both sides has been taken and the case adjourned for judgment, in as much as the case is still pending when such evidence is being taken—Ananda Chunder, 24 Cal. 167. Where in a criminal trial, after the evidence for the defence was closed, the Magistrate examined certain witnesses for the prosecution giving at the same time full liberty to the accused to cross-examine them, the High Court declined to interfere in revision—Gur Baksh, 21 O.C. 95, 19 Cr.L.J. 630, 45 I.C. 678. But although a Magistrate has discretion to admit evidence on behalf of either side at any stage of the inquiry or trial, still he ought not to admit further evidence for the prosecution after the prosecution has closed its case and the accused has entered upon his defence, unless there be valid reasons which must be recorded—Ganga, 10 A.L.J. 383, 13 Cr.L.J. 772. Magistrates should exercise their discretion under this section very cautiously. Where after both sides had closed their respective cases, and after arguments were heard and the case posted for judgment, for a certain day, two witnesses who were named by the prosecution were summoned by Magistrate and examined under this section, held that the examination of the witnesses at such a stage' could not be justified—Natabar v. Adynath, 27 C.W.N. 975, 37 C.L.J. 415, 75 I.C. 541, 24 Cr.L.J. 957; Beni Madho v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 816. No doubt the provisions of this section are very wide and a witness can be summoned and examined by the Court at any stage of an enquiry or trial, still it is not proper to examine witnesses under this section after a case is practically finished and without examining the accused again under section 342, Cr. P. C.—Beni Madho v. Emp., supra. The Magistrate can summon and examine witnesses, at a late stage of the case, after the defence has closed, where it is necessary to meet the evidence of a witness who is suddenly sprung upon the prosecution; but it is improper to examine witnesses after the defence is closed, to bolster up the prosecution—Radha Madhab, 15 C.W.N. 414, 12 Cr.L.J. 7 (8). When the trial has been concluded so far that no witnesses remain to be examined on either side and the assessors have given their opinions; it is not open to the Sessions Judge to fish for witnesses under this section or to order for further inquiry to be made by the committing Magistrate—Alual Khan, 1892 P.R. 4. But if the evidence of the witness is essential to the proper decision of a case, the Court is bound to examine such witness even at a late stage, under the imperative provisions of the latter part of this section. And so a rebutting evidence was allowed to be brought on the record at the eleventh hour for the purpose of contradicting the evidence adduced on behalf of the defence—Nayan Mandal, 34 C.W.N. 170 (172). Where an essential document had been overlooked by the prosecution, it is the Judge's duty to have it admitted in evidence by recalling a witness at any stage of the trial—Kesava Pillai, 57 M.L.J. 681, 1929 Cr.C. 485. See Note 942 "Taking fresh evidence after opinion."

1412. Who may be examined:—Under the latter part of this section the Court is bound to summon and examine any witnesses whose evidence seems to be essential to the just decision of the case—Ram Sarup Rai, 6 C.W.N. 98. Discretion by sec. 540 is wide, but the section is not wholly discretionary. The last part of it imposes upon the Magistrate an obligation; it is, that the Court shall summon and examine all persons whose evidence appears to be essential to the just decision of the case. If the Magistrate is of opinion that the evidence of certain witnesses is essential, then the section imposes upon him the obligation of summoning them. Even if the evidence, though not essential, is yet expedient, then the Magistrate does not exceed his authority in putting these witnesses in the box—Ibrahim, 34 Cr.L.J. 591 (592), 143 I.C. 351, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 49, 1933 Cr.C. 175, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 128. The Court would not be bound to issue summons to witnesses, under this section, unless it is satisfied that their evidence will be very material—Shakir Ali, 19 All 502. When the committing Magistrate refuses to examine any witnesses mentioned in the list submitted to him under sec. 211, the Sessions Judge can under this section direct those witnesses to be summoned and examined—Raja of Kantur, 8 All 668; Hayfield, 14 All 212.

The Magistrate may summon and examine any person as a witness. The power to summon a witness is not limited to the witnesses cited for the prosecution or the defence—Chetu, 1886 P.R. 11. The Magistrate may examine the witnesses whom the defence had called and whom on reconsideration the defence decided not to examine—Ibrahim, supra. A person who had been suspected and charged with an offence but was afterwards discharged by the Magistrate for want of evidence, may be examined afterwards as a witness for the prosecution—Behari Lal, 7 W.R. 44. Where the prosecution declines to examine any witnesses, the Court may on its own initiative cause them to be produced and examine them under this section—Satyendra, 37 C.L.J. 173, 24 Cr.L.J. 193, A.I.R. 1923 Cal. 463. But the power of the Magistrate will not be exercised where the prosecut on has wantonly failed to examine the witness, and when the application to the Court to examine the witness as a Court witness is made after the whole case has closed—Collett, 1929 M.W.N. 395. Where the defence is based on section 84, I. P. C., the Sessions Judge may under this section ascertain the behaviour of the prisoner during the years previous to the homicide, and if he has been kept in a lunatic asylum

This section requires the presence of the accused "before the Court" as a condition precedent to an order dispensing with his attendance during the further proceedings—Pokhar Das-Ganga Ram v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 439, 174 I.C. 422, 10 R.L. 562, 40 P.L.R. 1, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 216.

Normally, a trial in the absence of the accused is a nullity and it is only by virtue of this section that this consequence of the absence of the accused can be avoided: if the requirements of the section are not fulfilled, the trial remains a nullity. A joint trial is a single trial and cannot be considered as a separate trial of each person accused: it is one and indivisible. It follows that an illegality which vitiates the trial so far as one of the accused is concerned, prevents the trial from holding good in respect of the remaining accused. Where, therefore, one of the accused remains absent throughout the trial being granted an illegal exemption, the illegality vitiates the whole trial—Pokhar Das-Ganga Ram v. Emp., supra.

541. (1) Unless, when otherwise provided by any law for the time being in force, the Provincial Government may direct in what place any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code shall be confined.

(2) If any person liable to be imprisoned or committed to custody under this Code is in confinement in a civil jail, the Court or Magistrate ordering the imprisonment or committal may direct that the person be removed to a criminal jail.

(3) When a person is removed to a criminal jail under subsection (2), he shall, on being released therefrom, be sent back to the civil jail, unless either—

- (a) three years have elapsed since he was removed to the criminal jail, in which case he shall be deemed to have been discharged from the civil jail under section 342 of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882; or
- (b) the Court which ordered his imprisonment in the civil jail has certified to the officer in charge of the criminal jail that he is entitled to be discharged under section 341* of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1882.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

1414. Confinement of accused in police lock-up:—Under sec. 383, a Magistrate can direct that an accused person who is sentenced to imprisonment, shall be forwarded to a "jail," which means a prison. He has no power to sentence the accused to suffer imprisonment in a police lock-up. It is only the Local Government which can direct under sec. 541 that the person sentenced to imprisonment may be confined in a police lock-up—Po Th'n. 7 L.B.R. 62, 15 Cr.L.J. 10.

So also, an approver cannot be detained in police custody. If there is any Notification issued by the Local Government directing confinement of approvers in police custody, such Notification must be held to be ultra vires, because this section only empowers the Local Government to prescribe a place for the confinement of the persons mentioned therein and it cannot be invoked for the purpose of prescribing the custody in which he is to be kept—In re Khairati, 12 Lah. 635, 32 P.L.R. 493, 32 Cr.L.J. 913 (916), Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 615, 132 I.C. 519, 1931 Cr.C. 700, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 476; Kundan Lal, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 481, 131 I.C. 625, 1931 Cr.C. 625, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 353, 12 Lah. 604, 32 P.L.R. 423, 32 Cr.L.J. 785 (788, 791).

Dividing imprisonment in different jails:—A Criminal Court passing a sentence of imprisonment cannot divide the imprisonment in different jails. From this section and sec. 63 (1), Prisons Act (IX of 1894), and the Prisoners Act of 1871, it is clear that the power of directing imprisonment to be undergone in different jails belongs to the Local Government and the Inspector-General of Prisons, and not to the Court passing the sentence—Radha, Ratanlal 827.

542. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in the Prisoner's Testimony Act, 1869,* any Presidency Magistrate desirous of examining, as a witness or an accused person, in any case pending before him, any person confined in any jail within the local limits of his jurisdiction, may issue an order to the officer in charge of the said jail requiring him to bring such prisoner in proper custody, at a time to be therein named, to the Magistrate for examination.

(2) The officer so in charge, on receipt of such order, shall act in accordance therewith, and shall provide for the safe custody of the prisoner during his absence from the jail for the purpose aforesaid.

543. When the services of an interpreter are required by any Criminal Court for the interpretation of any evidence or statement, he shall be bound to state the true interpretation of such evidence or statement.

1415. When an interpreter is employed, a statement of an accused or the deposition of a witness should be recorded by the Court in the language in which the statement or deposition is conveyed to the Court by an interpreter—Vambalee 5 Cal. 826. It is not necessary to administer oath to an interpreter or to a witness. See sec. 5, Oaths Act (X of 1873). But the omission to administer oath only renders it necessary for the prosecution to prove that the interpretation of the deposition was made accurately; but the omission does not make the deposition inadmissible in evidence—Rakkhal Chandra 36 Cal. 808. Where a person (a Chinaman) who had taken an active part in the police investigation and was examined as a prosecution witness before the committing Magistrate and who was ready and willing to give evidence in the Sessions trial, was employed as an interpreter by the Sessions Court at the trial of the accused, who was also a Chinaman, held that the procedure was absurd and opposed to justice, and vitiated the trial—Ah So, 53 Cal. 659, 27 Cr.L.J. 805 (806).

544. Subject to any rules made by the Provincial Government, * * * any Criminal Court may, if it thinks fit, order payment, on the part of

* See now the Prisoners' Act, 1900 (Act III of 1900).

Government, of the reasonable expenses of any complainant or witnesses attending for the purposes of any inquiry, trial or other proceeding before such Court under this Code.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" have been substituted for "Local Government" by sec. 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Section 544, and the Rules framed by the Local Government under this section, give a discretion to the Magistrate in the matter of expenses of complainants and witnesses, but such discretion should be exercised not arbitrarily but on sound judicial principles—Ganesh, 9 Bom.L.R. 353, 5 Cr.L.J. 329.

As the statute itself has given the power to make rules not to the High Court but to the Local Government, any rules made by the High Court would be ultra vires, especially if they are inconsistent with rules made by Government. The only fair interpretation of r. 1, Chap. 9, Vol. 3 of the Rules and Orders made by the Punjab Government under this section which makes no distinction between prosecution witnesses and defence witnesses is that Government by exercising its power of restriction, which it is authorized by this section, has limited the cases in which Magistrates may pay the expenses of witnesses to those mentioned in the rule. If the rule framed by the High Court lays down the contrary, that is to say, that ordinarily the expenses of witnesses are to be paid by Government in every warrant case, it is ultra vires—Nanak Chand v. Suraj Parkash, 40 Cr.L.J. 68 (69), 178 I.C. 468, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 693, 40 P.L.R. 944, 11 R.L. 460 not following Syed Habib v. Emp. A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 23, 117 I.C. 667, 30 Cr.L.J. 814, Ind. Rul. 1929 Lah. 68, Habib v. Mehdi Hussain, 108 I.C. 907, 29 Cr.L.J. 459, 10 A.I.R. 87, Ram Narain v. Emp. A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 481, 139 I.C. 508, 1932 Cr.C. 619, 33 Cr.L.J. 761, 33 P.L.R. 811, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 581, Parshotam Das v. Emp., A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 919, 166 I.C. 128, 1936 Cr.C. 1007, 38 P.L.R. 1168, 9 R.L. 340 and Kushi Muhammad v. Abdullah Khan, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 458, 170 I.C. 539, 38 Cr.L.J. 941, 39 P.L.R. 137, 10 R.L. 132. See Notes 840 and 848.

This section empowers the Court to order that the expenses of the complainant and his witness should be paid by the Government under proper circumstances. But it does not empower the Court trying a complaint to order that the diet money of a witness produced before it should be paid by the complainant. That power is vested in the Court under the general rules of the High Court. If the Court orders such payment, in accordance with such rules, the amount cannot be recovered under the provisions of sec. 547 as if it were a fine, but can be recovered by a suit in the Civil Court—Kamal v. Paramasukh, 29 C.W.N. 1033, A.I.R. 1926 Cal. 289, 90 I.C. 488.

It is entirely within the discretion of the Court which summons a witness to order how much expenses should be allowed to him and which party should pay it. In criminal cases the Court may within certain limits order the Government to pay the expenses of the complainant and witnesses. If a Court has ordered a certain sum to be paid to a witness and if he is aggrieved by that order and thinks that he has not been sufficiently paid it is open to him to approach a higher tribunal for the redress; but he cannot appeal to the Civil Court against the order nor can he sue the party or the Government for recovery of any additional amount, much less can he claim it from the presiding officer of the Court—Purna Chandra v. Secy. of State, A.I.R. 1937 Pat. 477 (478), 9 R.P. 455, 3 B.R. 361, 1937 P.W.N. 281, 167 I.C. 938, 18 P.L.T. 434.

545. (1) Whenever under any law in force for the time being, a Criminal Court imposes a fine or

Power of Court to pay expenses or compensation out of fine confirms in appeal, revision or otherwise a sentence of fine, or a sentence of which fine forms a part, the Court may, when passing judgment, order the whole or any part of the fine recovered to be applied—

(a) in defraying expenses properly incurred in the prosecution;

(b) in the payment to any person of compensation for any loss or injury caused by the offence, when substantial compensation is, in the opinion of the Court, recoverable by such person in a Civil Court; and

(c) when any person is convicted of any offence which includes theft, criminal misappropriation, criminal breach of trust, or cheating, or of having dishonestly received or retained, or of having voluntarily assisted in disposing of, stolen property knowing or having reason to believe the same to be stolen, in compensating any bona fide purchaser of such property for the loss of the same, if such property is restored to the possession of the person entitled thereto.

(2) If the fine is imposed in a case which is subject to appeal, no such payment shall be made before the period allowed for presenting the appeal has elapsed, or, if an appeal be presented, before the decision of the appeal.

Change:—Clause (b) has been slightly amended and clause (c) newly added, by sec 152 of the Cr P C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "Clause (m) makes it clear that compensation under sec 546 may be paid to any person by whom it would be recoverable in a Civil Court. The payment of compensation to an innocent purchaser of stolen property is provided for in clause (c) when the property is restored to the possession of the person entitled thereto"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

1416. Order when can be made:—An order of compensation can be made under this section when the Court imposes a fine. If the accused is discharged or acquitted and no fine is imposed, no order under this section can be passed—In re Baste, 22 Bom 717; Govind Narayan, Ratanlal 407. If the accused is convicted of theft and sentenced to imprisonment but no fine is imposed on him, the Court cannot order payment of compensation to the person whose property was stolen—Bhura, 26 Cr L J. 1495, 90 IC 151, AIR. 1926 Nag 89. Where a person is dealt with under sec 562 and no fine is imposed on him, the Court has no power to direct him to pay compensation to the other party—Munney Mirza, 25 Cr L J 1116, 81 IC 940, AIR. 1925 Oudh 110. In a proceeding under section 107, an order directing the accused to pay the costs of the complainant is ultra vires—Sheo Prasad v Mahangoo, 25 Cr L J 476, AIR. 1924 All 694, 77 IC 828. Where the Magistrate on convicting the accused under sec 14 of the Bombay Public Ferries Act, does not impose any fine but orders the sale of the boat of the accused and directs the compensation to be paid out of the sale-proceeds, the order is illegal—Beera, Ratanlal 688. Similarly, a compensation cannot be ordered to be paid out of the rents and profits of the property forfeited—Nana Patlu, Ratanlal 146. A Magistrate cannot, without imposing a substantive sentence of fine, order payment of compensation to the complainant—Anonymous 2 Weir 715. The proper course is to impose a fine, and out of the fine realised direct payment to the complainant of such amount as the Court thinks fit, having regard to the provisions of this section—Mohesh v. Bholanath, 3 C L R. 404.

What Court can award compensation:—Compensation may be awarded not only by trying Court, but also by the High Court in revision, see Bishen v. Ismail, 6 Bur L J. 81, 28 Cr L J. 757 (758).

A Police Patel's Court is not a "Criminal Court" and he cannot make an order of compensation under this section—Ramja, Ratanlal 317.

Order cannot be made after judgment:—The award of compensation should be a part of the sentence and order made upon a conviction of an offence, and should be founded upon a statement of the loss, damage or expenses ascertained at the trial—Mittum, 11 W.R. 53. The order should be made when passing judgment; after the judgment is passed, the Court becomes functus officio and has no further power to make any order under this section—Nga Hlwe, U.B.R. (1892-96) 80.

Expenses under this section do not include such expenses as are incurred in bringing the person of the offender before the Magistrate—Ramaswamy, Ratanlal 608. Where fine is imposed on a person for destroying land-marks, a portion of the fine so imposed cannot be ordered to be paid to the Amin for the purpose of paying the expenses of his deputation to restore the land-marks destroyed—Moorut Laal, 6 W.R. 93; such expenses are not expenses incurred in the prosecution. Subsistence allowances and cart hire for prosecution witnesses cannot be ordered to be paid by the accused—Ma Pu, U.B.R. (1892-95) 7. Court-fees and process fees are now provided for in sec. 546A.

Expenses under this section should be directed to be paid out of the amount of the fine imposed, and a separate order for such expenses is improper—Saolairam, Ratanlal 341; Tukaram, 4 Bom.L.R. 877. An order for expenses to be paid in addition of the fine is illegal—Yamana Rao, 24 Mad. 305; Rajubhai, 5 Bom.L.R. 126; Dhanji, Ratanlal 196. But the expenses mentioned in sec. 546A may be awarded in addition to fine.

If fine is partially realised:—In a cheating case the accused was fined Rs. 4,000, and the Judge ordered: "Out of the fine, if received, I direct that Rs. 3,000 be paid to prosecution witness No. 1". The full amount of Rs. 4,000 could not be realised out of the moveable properties of the accused; and thereupon the Judge ordered that the Government had a prior claim to Rs. 1,000, and that it was only in the event if there being a balance that the prosecution witness had any claim to the money. Held that the Judge's order did not mean that nothing should be paid to the prosecution witness unless the full amount of fine was recovered. It was open to the Judge to provide for the proportionate distribution of the amount realised, though he has not done so. The amount so far realised was ordered by the High Court to be paid to the prosecution witness—Khaddam Venkata, 2 L.W. 22, 16 Cr.L.J. 58 (59). The Magistrate sentenced accused A and B to pay fines of Rs. 30 and Rs. 80 respectively and directed that out of the fine, if recovered, Rs. 40 be paid as compensation to a defence witness. Accused B paid the fine of Rs. 80 but accused A did not pay the fine but suffered imprisonment in default. Held that the only reasonable construction of the order passed by the Magistrate was that, of the fine, if recovered, whether it be from A or B, the witness should be paid his compensation first and the balance of the fine should be credited to the Government—Bhagwan-das Lalchand, A.I.R. 1937 Sind 3, 38 Cr.L.J. 292, 166 I.C. 528, 9 R.S. 147.

1418. Clause (b)—Compensation:—Amount of compensation:—When compensation is awarded under this section, the distinction between clauses (a) and (b) of the section should be borne in mind; and it should be clearly stated in the order, whether the payment out of the fine is intended to defray the expenses incurred in the prosecution or to make compensation for the injury caused by the offence committed—Mi Te, U.B.R. (1892-96) 290. In awarding compensation, no sum in excess of the loss actually suffered by the complainant should be ordered to be paid. Where the accused was convicted of illegally demanding money, and was fined three times the amount of the illegal receipt, and the whole of the fine was ordered to be paid to the complainant, the order was held to be improper—Maung Thin, 5 L.B.R. 50, 10 Cr.L.J. 78. In a theft case, it is illegal to award compensation to the complainant in excess of the price of the property stolen from him—Shib Das, 1913 P.L.R. 335, 14 Cr.L.J. 659. This clause allows the Court to order the whole or part of the fine recovered to be applied in the payment to any person of compensation for any loss or injury caused by the offence,

"The offence" must be clearly the offence of which the accused has been convicted. It is not possible for the Court under these rules to award compensation for other offences which the accused may have committed but with which he has not been charged. Thus, where the accused was convicted of three offences of criminal breach of trust, as a servant, of money amounting in each case to Rs. 272-4-0 and was sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 2,000 in respect of one charge and to two years' rigorous imprisonment in respect of the other two charges, held that out of the fine paid, a sum not exceeding Rs. 272 should be paid to the complainant as compensation, although the accused might have misappropriated several thousand rupees—Ram Prasad, 36 Cr.L.J. 1030, 156 I.C. 957, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 199, 1935 Cr.C. 741.

Where a complainant cannot recover substantial compensation in a Civil Court, compensation cannot be awarded to him under clause (b), but a sum may be awarded to him under clause (a) to defray the expenses of the prosecution—Nga Tha Yin, 15 Cr.L.J. 555 (Bur.); J. M. Khan v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 718, 169 I.C. 245, 9 R.R. 390, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 192. Therefore, a Magistrate convicting a person under sec. 193, I.P.C., can only order the expenses properly incurred in the prosecution to be defrayed out of the fine, but no power to award compensation, because substantial compensation is not recoverable by a civil suit for perjury—Mangulchand v. Mohan, 14 N.L.R. 131, 15 Cr.L.J. 927, 47 I.C. 443. K had stated in his evidence in a civil suit where one D had sued him for dismissal from his post as Manager of K's mine, that he dismissed D because he had been informed that D had arranged to sell K's ore to one S, and had borrowed money on the strength of this from S. This statement was made in cross-examination and again in re-examination voluntarily. The statement was not true, and not believed in good faith by K to be true; for it was improbable and came from persons whom he had himself described as rascals and thieves, and was not in any way verified by him. Held that compensation for such defamation was not recoverable in a Civil Court and so the order for compensation under sec. 545 (1) (b), Cr.P.C., should be set aside and that it was no doubt a fit case under sub-sec (1) (a) of the same section—J. M. Khan v. Emp., supra.

Where the accused was convicted and fined for being drunk on a public road, no compensation could be awarded to the constable who in arresting the accused had to struggle with him and in so doing lost his whistle and Rs. 5; because such compensation is not for injury caused by the offence committed—Anonymous, UBR (1892-96) 79. A Court cannot award compensation for alleged offences other than those which form the subject of the inquiry in the case in which the order is made—Govind Narayan, Ratanlal 407. Where the accused took his sister who was suffering from plague into town without informing the authorities and was thereupon convicted for an offence under sec. 188, I.P.C., no compensation could be awarded to the Municipality on account of the expenses incurred by it in disinfecting the house into which the accused brought the case of plague—Rahimatkha, Ratanlal 958. Where the offence is under the I.P.C., no compensation can be awarded under any other special law. Thus, where the accused was fined under sec. 379, I.P.C., for cutting trees in a field, and out of the fine recovered a reward of Rs. 5 was ordered to be paid to the complainant (under the Forest Act) for detecting the offence, it was held that the order of reward was illegal since the offence was under the I.P.C., and not under the Forest Act—Vithu, Ratanlal 873. See also Bhikari, Ratanlal 241.

1419. Who is entitled to compensation:—Heirs of the deceased:—Under the Code of 1882, compensation could only be awarded to the person injured; if a person was killed, it could be awarded to the heirs of the deceased (e.g. to the widow)—Lutchmah, 12 Mad. 352; Yalla Sanguli Mamidi, 21 Mad. 74. In Morgan, 36 Cal. 302 and Saif Ali, 1898 P.R. 17 (F.B.), the heirs of the deceased were awarded compensation. In the Punjab case, compensation was awarded on the ground that the loss of the husband's support affecting a widow prejudicially was an injury for which substantial compensation could be awarded by a Civil Court. See also Kesar Singh 10 P.R. 1878, which holds that where the complainant can recover damages in an action, he can compensated under this section. The present amendment now makes it clear that compensation can be awarded to any person by whom it can be recovered in a Civil Court.

The amendment of this section in 1923 entitles a person to compensation if he can get damages in Civil Court for any loss or injury caused by the offence. Act XIII of 1855 defines such persons to be a wife, husband, parent and child, if any, of the person whose death has been caused. Reading the two sections together no doubt remains whatsoever that the mother is entitled to compensation when her son is killed by the accused who is convicted under sec 304A, I. P. C., and is sentenced to a fine—Nur Sahibi, 36 Cr.L.J. 1208, 157 I.C. 531, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh. 102, 1935 Cr.C. 854.

Where the person to whom the injury was directly caused, is dead, her heirs can only bring an action in a Civil Court for the recovery of damages under the Fatal Accidents Act (XIII of 1885). Consequently, an order under sec. 545 (1) (b), Cr. P. C., can only be passed if the heirs have the right to bring an action under Act XIII of 1885. No order of compensation can be made where no such right exists. Thus, where a woman with full knowledge and of her own free will consented to being attended by an unqualified midwife during her delivery and died and the midwife was convicted under sec. 304A, I. P. C., and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs 150, the maxim volenti non fit injuria applied and the woman would not have been entitled to damages in a suit against the midwife. Hence the order of compensation out of fine to the heirs of the woman made by the Magistrate was illegal and without jurisdiction—Maung Sein, 37 Cr.L.J. 199, 159 I.C. 1026, A.I.R. 1935 Rang 471, 1935 Cr.C. 1257.

In awarding compensation to the heirs of the person killed, the names of the heirs should be mentioned. An order of compensation of the 'nearest heirs,' without specifying who those heirs may be, is bad in law—Chuha, 1913 P.R. 18, 14 Cr.L.J. 522.

Where a person is convicted of enticing away a married woman, compensation may be awarded to the husband for injury done to his honour—Alhoo, 1878 P.R. 14; Kesar Singh, 1878 P.R. 10.

Compensation for injury caused to another:—Where the accused was charged with causing hurt to two persons, but was fined for causing injuries to one of them only, compensation out of the fine cannot be awarded to the other person—Vobanna, 2 Weir 718.

Refund of compensation:—Where a conviction is set aside on appeal and a refund of the fine levied is ordered, and the party who has received a portion of the money as compensation refuses to refund it, the only remedy lies in a Civil Court—Anonymous, 2 Weir 717. But in Mutsuddi v. Mani Ram, 19 All. 112, and other cases it has been held that the amount may be recovered by a process under sec. 547 and not necessarily by a Civil suit in a Civil Court. See Note 1422 under sec. 547.

Effect of acquittal in appeal:—The necessary consequence of the setting aside of the conviction is the setting aside of the sentence of which the necessary consequence is the extinguishment of the order made under sub-section (1), cl. (b) of this section—Htanda Meah v. Anamale Chettyar, A.I.R. 1936 Rang 247 (248), 37 Cr.L.J. 832, 163 I.C. 242, 1936 Cr.C. 523.

1420. Clause (c)—Bona fide purchaser of stolen property:—This clause has been newly added. Under the old law, it was held that when a person was convicted of theft, an order awarding compensation, out of the fine imposed, to the innocent purchaser of the stolen property was not authorised by this section—Reddon, 6 Mad. 286; Anonymous, 2 Weir 715; because the injury to the purchaser was not the consequence of the theft but of the invalid sale—Marivappa, 2 Weir 716. On a conviction of theft, the stolen property should be returned to the owner, but it was illegal to impose a condition that a portion of the fine imposed on the accused should be paid to the innocent purchaser. No such condition could be imposed on the return of the property to the owner—Abdul, 3 Bom.L.R. 449. When theft was proved, the stolen property was ordered to be restored to the rightful owner and not to the bona fide purchaser. The rule of English law protecting bona fide purchasers for value in market overt was not to be applied in India, and on conviction of the accused the property with respect to which the theft was committed should be delivered to the original owner—Nobo Kristo v Lall Chand, 20 W.R. 38; Faiz Muhammad, 1908 P.R. 2, 7 Cr.L.J. 279. See also Khairati Ram v. Budhu, 1893 A.W.N. 61. In Sawan, 1878 P.R. 21, it was held, however, that when stolen property was in the hands of a bona fide purchaser, the proper order to be made was to leave it in his hands and the remedy of the complainant was to secure possession of the property in a Civil Court.

Under the present law, as provided by this clause, compensation will be awarded to the innocent purchaser.

The clause applies only to a purchaser and not to a mortgagee or pledgee; an innocent mortgagee or pledgee who has advanced money on the security of the stolen property will not be entitled to any compensation—Rama, Ratanlal 631; Ramchandra, 46 Bom. 893, 23 Cr.L.J. 341.

1420A. Appeal:—See Note 1137.

546. At the time of awarding compensation in any subsequent civil suit relating to the same matter, the Court shall take into account any sum paid or recovered as compensation under section 545.

Payments to be taken into account in subsequent suit.

'Take into account'—This expression does not mean that in a subsequent civil suit, at the time of awarding damages, the amount of compensation recovered under sec. 545 is to be deducted from the damages awarded in the suit—Love v Hume, 22 W.R. 336 (Civil).

546A. (1) Whenever any complaint of a non-cognizable offence is made to a Court, the Court, if it convicts the accused, may, in addition to the penalty imposed upon him, order him to pay to the complainant—

Order of payment of certain fees paid by complainant in non-cognizable cases.

- (a) the fee (if any) paid on the petition of complaint, or for the examination of the complainant, and
- (b) any fees paid by the complainant for serving processes on his witnesses or on the accused.

and may further order that, in default of payment, the accused shall suffer simple imprisonment for a period not exceeding thirty days.

This section has been added by sec. 153 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "It embodies the provisions of sec 31 of the Court Fees Act in order that greater prominence may be given to them"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). The provision as to imprisonment in default of payment, and sub-section (2) did not occur in the Court Fees Act. Section 31 of the Court Fees Act has now been repealed by sec. 163 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923.

1421. Scope of the section:—This section does not apply, and the costs of the complainant cannot be awarded, where the offence is not a non-cognizable one—Nuruddin, 25 Cr.L.J. 1161, 81 I.C. 985, A.I.R. 1925 Oudh 109.

In awarding costs the Court can take into consideration only the costs set out in clauses (a) and (b) of this section. The witness-fees should not be included :

costs—Swee Ing v. Koon Han, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 163, 1935 Cr.C. 626, 156 I.C. 598, 36 Cr.L.J. 970. This section is limited in terms to process and petition-writers' fees—Mohamed Cassim v. Thumby Sahib, A.I.R. 1910 Rang. 33, 41 Cr.L.J. 392, 187 I.C. 77.

No order can be made under this section when the complainant did not incur any cost for the purposes mentioned in clauses (a) and (b) of this section—Maung Po Hla, A.I.R. 1935 Rang. 208, 36 Cr.L.J. 1018, 156 I.C. 980, 1935 Cr.C. 748.

If the complaint is not required by law to be stamped, the fact that the Court-fee has been illegally levied by the Court will not be a ground for ordering the accused to pay the fee on conviction—Avji Naru, 8 B.I.C.R. 22. Thus, no fee is leviable on a complaint by Municipal Officers, and the accused on conviction should not be ordered to pay the same—Khajabhog, 16 Mad. 423.

A proceeding under the Workmen's Breach of Contract Act is not a proceeding for an offence, and if in such a proceeding the workman admits the advance and repays the same, it is not open to the Magistrate to make him pay the complainant the Court-fee paid on the complaint—Dhondur, 6 Bom.L.R. 255.

If there are several persons convicted, the order of payment of the value of the Court-fee and process-fee should be joint and not several—Sankara, Bom. II. C. Cr. Rule, 1872.

The provisions of this section are not to be controlled by sec. 545; unlike sec. 545 the expenses awarded under this section are directed to be paid in addition to fine and not out of the fine imposed—Yamuna, 24 Mad. 305.

According to the Calcutta High Court, the order of payment of Court-fee is no part of the principal sentence in the case and is not to be treated as a fine added to a sentence of imprisonment so as to make the sentence appealable—Madan Mandal, 20 Cal. 687. But the Madras High Court holds that it is an integral part of the sentence—Thangavelu, 22 Mad. 153. See these cases cited in Note 1113 under section 413.

"May":—"We think the Court should not be bound to exercise the power conferred by this section in trivial cases, and we have accordingly used the word "may"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922).

547. Any money (other than a fine) payable by virtue of Moneys ordered to be any order made under this Code, and the paid recoverable as fines. method of recovery of which is not otherwise expressly provided for, shall be recoverable as if it were a fine.

The italicised words have been added by sec. 154 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. These words provide for the recovery of compensation under sec. 250, of costs under sec. 148 (3), and of the Court-fees and process-fees mentioned in sec. 516A.

1422. This section only provides a summary method of realising 'money payable' and these words cannot be stretched so as to include live stock or other goods—Phumman, 23 Cr.L.J. 157 (Lah.).

An order of refund of compensation paid to the complainant under sec. 545 may be enforced by process under this section. It is not necessary that the accused should bring a civil suit for recovery of the money—Mutsuddi v. Mani Ram, 19 All. 112; Ishri v. Bakshi, 6 All. 96; Pola Varapa, 7 Mad 563; Ali Ahmad v. Nathu, 1881 P.R. 14; Ravji, Ratanlal 213. Contra—Anonymous, 2 Weir 717.

Money ordered to be paid as compensation under sec. 250 is recoverable as if it were a fine—Ram Chunder, 33 Cr.L.J. 958, 140 I.C. 72, A.I.R. 1932 Pat. 301, Ind. Rul 1932 Pat. 290, 13 P.L.T. 536, 1932 Cr.C. 773. An order by the Appellate Court or High Court setting aside an award of compensation which was ordered to be paid under sec. 250 to the accused, must be deemed to be an order directing refund of the money; and the refund of the money is enforceable under this section as if it were a fine—Hiranand, 29 P.R. 1903, 2 P.L.R. 1904.

An order directing the complainant to pay the diet money of his witness can be passed not under this Code but under the rules of the High Court; consequently, it cannot be enforced under this section; the remedy of the witness to recover the money is by a civil suit—Kamal v. Paramsukh, 29 C.W.N. 1033 (see this case cited under section 544).

The methods of recovering fine are provided by section 386.

548. If any person affected by a judgment or order passed by a Criminal Court desires to have a copy of the Judge's charge to the jury or of any order or deposition or other part of the record, he shall, on applying for such copy be furnished therewith:

Provided that he pays for the same, unless the Court, for some special reason, thinks fit to furnish it free of cost.

1423. 'Affected by judgment, order', etc.:—A complainant whose complaint is dismissed is a person affected by the order of dismissal, and, therefore, he is entitled to ask for a copy of the Magistrate's order of discharge—In re Abdul, Ratanlal 305; Bank of Bengal v. Dinonath, 8 Cal. 166. But a 'charge' is not an order of a Criminal Court by which an accused person can be said to be affected within the meaning of this section, so as to entitle him to copies of deposition where the trial has not proceeded beyond the frame of charge and the examination of the prosecution witnesses—Prag Sahu, 1892 A.W.N. 140.

A third party, i.e., a member of the public who is not a party to the case, is not a person affected by a judgment or order, and is not entitled to apply for copies of deposition and judgment—Pandurang Bhaial, 34 Bom.L.R. 1445, 1932 Cr.C. 871, A.I.R. 1932 Bom. 636, 34 Cr.L.J. 141, 141 I.C. 338, Ind. Rul. 1933 Bom. 76. In this case the Secretary of the Lawyers' Association asked for a copy of the judgment of a case decided under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, and the application was refused. The Allahabad High Court, however, is of opinion that the expression "person affected by a judgment, or order" must not be narrowly construed, so as to include only a party to the judgment or order. The public, as a whole, are certainly affected by a judgment or a Court and have a right of access to the judgments of the Courts which express the law. At any rate, the father of the convicted person is certainly a person "affected by a judgment"—Ladli Prasad, 53 All. 724, 1931 A.L.J. 405, 32 Cr.L.J. 864, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 487, 132 I.C. 327, 1931 Cr.C. 620, A.I.R. 1931 All. 364.

A convicted person is entitled to copies of all documents for which he applies and which he thinks necessary for his defence—Shceb Prasad, 14 W.R. 77.

Copies of the proofs only, or at least a summary of the evidence, which a new witness is expected to give, should be furnished by the prosecution within a reasonable time to the accused free of cost before a new witness is examined in the Sessions Court—Dhondiba, 36 Cr.L.J. 344, 153 I.C. 278, 36 Bom.L.R. 950, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 487, 1934 Cr.C. 1413.

A report of the police of an investigation ordered under sec. 202 is a "part of the record" which should be furnished to the accused on his application—Muthu Kumara Pillai, 33 L.W. 570, 1931 Cr.C. 477, Ind. Rul. 1931 Mad. 510, 131 I.C. 174, 32 Cr.L.J. 689, 1931 M.W.N. 325, 1931 Cr.C. 477, A.I.R. 1931 Mad. 429. The record means a magisterial record. But the information which leads to an action under sec. 107 is often of the most varied and confidential nature and does not form "part of the record". The accused is not entitled to get a copy thereof—Anantapadamanabh'ak, 59 M.L.W. 784, 129 I.C. 70, 32 Cr.L.J. 217.

549. (1) The Central Government may make rules, consistent with this Code and the Army Act, the Naval Discipline Act (29 & 36 Vict., c. 109) and that Act as modified by the Indian Navy (Discipline) Act, 1934, and the Air Force Act or any similar law for the time being in force as to the cases in which persons subject to military, naval or air force law shall be tried by a Court to which this Code applies, or by Court-martial, and when any person is brought before a Magistrate and charged with an offence for which he is liable to be tried either by a Court to which this Code applies or by a Court-martial, such Magistrate shall have regard to such rules, and shall in proper cases deliver him, together with a statement of the offence of which he is accused, to the commanding officer of the regiment, corps, ship or detachment to which he belongs, or to the commanding officer of the nearest military, naval or air force station, as the case may be, for the purpose of being tried by Court-martial.

(2) Every Magistrate shall, on receiving a written application for that purpose by the commanding officer of any body of soldiers, sailors or airmen stationed or employed at any such place, use his utmost endeavours to apprehend and secure any person accused of such offence.

Amendments:—The words “and the Air Force Act,” “or air force” and “as the case may be” have been added by the Repealing and Amending Act, 1927 (Act X of 1927); and the other italicised words have been inserted by the Amending Act, 1931 (Act XXXV of 1931).

The words “Central Government” have been substituted for “Governor-General in Council” by section 4 of the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

550. Any police-officer may seize any property which may be alleged or suspected to have been stolen, or which may be found under circumstances which create suspicion of the commission of any offence. Such police-officer, if subordinate to the officer in charge of a police-station, shall forthwith report the seizure to that officer.

1424. If a Police officer has reason to suspect certain property to be stolen he must himself seize the property. He cannot order any other person to detain the same. And if such person fails to keep the property under his detention, he cannot be convicted of an offence under sec. 188, I P. C.—Bithal, 16 O.C. 371, 15 Cr.L.J. 177. This section gives the Police officer power to seize only the property suspected to be stolen; but it does not empower him to seize any other property which is mixed with the stolen one—1909 P.W.R. 14, 11 Cr.L.J. 99.

Where a property was seized by the police under this section, on suspicion of its being stolen property, and the Magistrate issued proclamation under sec. 523, without satisfying himself as to the claim of the person in whose possession the property was found by the police, held that the Magistrate's action was not illegal, because it was not incumbent on him to satisfy himself as to any such claim. The person in whose possession the property was found had an opportunity of making good his claim to the Magistrate after issue of the proclamation—Gangaram, 2 S.L.R. 32, 10 Cr.L.J. 198 (199).

551. Police-officers superior in rank to an officer in charge of a police-station may exercise the same powers, throughout the local area to which they are appointed, as may be exercised by such officer within the limits of his station.

Powers of superior officers of Police.

There is no authority for the proposition that the word "may" in this section means "must"—Mathuranath, 33 Cr.L.J. 657 (662), 1932 Cr.C. 881, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 850, 139 I.C. 89, Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 561.

552. Upon complaint made to a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate on oath of the abduction or unlawful detention of a woman, or of a female child under the age of sixteen years, for any unlawful purpose, he may make an order for the immediate restoration of such woman to her liberty, or of such female child to her husband, parent, guardian or other person having the lawful charge of such child, and may compel compliance with such order, using such force as may be necessary.

Power to compel restoration of abducted females.

Change:—The word "sixteen" has been substituted for "fourteen" by the Criminal Law Amendment Act, XVIII of 1924, for the purpose of affording greater protection to girls. By the same Act, the age limit has been raised from sixteen to eighteen in sections 372 and 373, I. P. Code.

Scope of the section:—The District Magistrate can only act under this section where there is a complaint before him on oath of the abduction or unlawful detention of a woman or of a female under the age of 16 years—Moti v Beni, A.I.R. 1936 All. 852, 1936 A.W.R. (H.C.) 920, 1936 A.L.J. 1097, 1936 Cr.C. 1111, 166 I.C. 847. The only order which the District Magistrate can pass under this section is one directing the restoration of a woman or of a female child under the age of 16 years. But the order of the District Magistrate to produce her before him is not an order under this section. There is nothing in this section which requires service of the order on any person. The order is one capable of execution, and the section lays down that the Magistrate "may compel compliance with such order using such force as may be necessary." Once an order under this section has been passed, it is open to the Magistrate to use all lawful means to have the woman restored to her liberty. For that end he may legally issue an appropriate direction to some other person in whose custody the woman may be—Abdul Jalil Khan, A.I.R. 1936 All. 354, 1936 A.L.J. 373, 37 Cr.L.J. 713, 162 I.C. 755, 1936 Cr.C. 418.

The main purpose of this section is to protect women and girls from detention for immoral purposes, although no doubt the section would be appropriate to cases where the purpose of the detention is clearly unlawful though not necessarily immoral. Taking the word 'unlawful' in its ordinary meaning of 'contrary to or prohibited by law' there cannot be much difficulty in particular cases in determining whether the purpose is or is not unlawful. In these matters the Legislature by section 25, Guardians and Wards Act, has provided full powers for orders to be made for the custody of minors. The powers given to District Magistrate by this section are exceptional powers to be used with caution and only when the conditions of the section are satisfied. It may be that the Magistrate considers that the course he follows is that which would be followed by the District Court upon an application made by the applicant under sec. 25, Guardians and Wards Act. But this is no reason for him to assume a jurisdiction which in the absence of allegations of unlawful purpose, he does not possess, and he should not strain this section, even with the best of intentions, to give a relief which it is the function of another Court to grant—Om Radhe v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 698 (700), 182 I.C. 710, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 760, 12 R.S. 28, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 152.

1425. Unlawful detention:—The detention of a child in a missionary school, against the will of her parent or guardian with a view that she should be brought up in a religion which such parent or child disapproved of and the adoption of which would not only involve a total change in the child's mode of life, but would also deprive the parent or guardian of any control in the education or bringing up of the child, would amount to unlawful detention—Abraham v. Mahtaba, 16 Cal. 487.

The detention of a girl by the father in his house against the will of her husband does not amount to unlawful detention, unless it is shown that the detention was contrary to the wish of the girl—Nathu v. Nari Lal, 15 Cr.L.J. 712 (Cal.). If a woman is residing with her relatives who are aiding her in endeavouring to procure a divorce, such detention is not unlawful—Syed Umar v. Syed Dastood, 2 Weir 724.

Unlawful purpose:—A Magistrate can act under this section when both the detention and the purpose are unlawful. In Abraham v. Mahtaba, 16 Cal. 487 cited above the detention was held to be unlawful, but the purpose was not. Unlawful purpose means immoral purpose. This section applies to female children only, and not to children generally; this shows that the purpose has some special reference to the sex of the person against whom it is entertained. In other words, the section has reference to adultery, concubinage, prostitution, deflowering or other similar purposes. But it certainly does not include the detention of a Hindu girl in a Christian Institution in order that she may be a Christian, or the detention of a Christian child in a Mahomedan Institution in order that she may be a Mahomedan—Abraham v. Mahtaba, 16 Cal. 487. The purpose contemplated in this section must be in itself an unlawful purpose. It does not include purposes, which although not unlawful in themselves might become so when entertained towards a child in opposition to the wishes of its guardian—Thakordas v. Bhagwandas, 4 Bom.L.R. 609.

If the unlawful detention is for a purpose which is an offence or is legally prohibited or which is a civil wrong it would constitute an unlawful purpose under this section. Tested in this light the detention by a father of his minor married daughter contrary to the wish of her husband with the object to remarry her would clearly constitute unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose because bigamy is declared an offence by section 494, I. P. Code. If the girl is being detained by her father contrary to her own wish such detention would fall within the purview of sec. 339, I. P. C., and would equally be detention for an unlawful purpose. Since the unlawful detention of minor wife by her father prima facie affords a cause of action to the husband to recover possession of his wife by a civil action, the purpose of such detention would likewise be unlawful within the meaning of this section—Tulsidas v. Chetandas, A.I.R. 1933 Nag. 374 (377), 16 N.L.J. 310, 1933 Cr.C. 1573. The question whether an order under this section should issue or not depends entirely on the question of the age of the girl who is living in another man's house with her consent but against the will of her mother who is lawfully entitled to have charge of her—Ma Ngwe v. Maung Ye, A.I.R. 1935 Rang 494, 37 Cr.L.J. 278, 160 I.C. 282, 1935 Cr.C. 1269.

The jurisdiction conferred by this section depends upon two factors. There must be, in the first place, an unlawful detention and secondly that unlawful detention must be for an unlawful purpose. Where, therefore, the mother originally handed over the daughter to the society for the protection of children in India and asked them to take charge of her and asked the society to send the girl back to her, on receipt of letters from the girl asking to be brought back and to be married and the society refused to send her back, the purpose of the society to whom the girl had been entrusted in the first place by her mother for the purpose of housing and care could not be termed "unlawful" within the meaning of this section and an order for restoration of the girl to her mother could not be passed under this section—Sccy., S. P. C. v. Archana Das, 43 C.W.N. 362 (363).

1426. Procedure:—It is the District Magistrate who alone has jurisdiction to entertain a complaint and make an order under this section. He has no power to transfer such a case to a Sub-Magistrate, and that Magistrate would have no jurisdiction therein—Bai Dahi v. Jagwan, Ratanlal 963.

An application under this section does not necessarily allege the commission of an offence, and is not a complaint; consequently the provisions of secs. 200 and 203 do not apply to proceedings under this section—Thakordas v. Bhagwandas, 4 Bom L.R. 609; Tulsidas v. Chetandas, supra. All that appears necessary to take action under the section is to examine the applicant on oath in support of his complaint of the unlawful detention of a woman or a minor girl, as the case may be, for an unlawful purpose, and issue a notice to the non-applicant to show cause against the complaint and to produce the woman or the girl before the Court to be dealt with according to law. This is the procedure adopted in cases under sec. 491, Cr. P. C., and this procedure should be followed in cases falling under this section—Tulsidas v. Chetandas, supra. A person proceeded against under this section is not in the position of an accused person, and may offer himself as a witness in the proceeding; see section 340.

Under this section the Magistrate should have the statement on oath of the complainant. If no such statement is taken, that may be a defect in his procedure and may vitiate any order which he may pass for the restoration of the woman. The omission has, however, no effect on the order for the prosecution of the complainant under sec. 182, I. P. C., for the offence under that section is complete as soon as the information is given—Dalpat Rai v. Emp., 37 Cr.L.J. 857 (858), 163 I.C. 609, A.I.R. 1936 All. 469, 1936 Cr.C. 614, 1936 A.L.J. 592, 1936 A.L.R. 620, 9 R.A. 42.

Where a Magistrate has reason to believe that a woman is unlawfully detained but cannot find who so detains her, the proper course is for the Magistrate to issue an order to have the woman brought before him and to examine her; it would be illegal for the Magistrate in such a case to order the restoration of the woman to liberty without any finding that she was unlawfully detained by any one and without ordering any one to restore her to liberty—Syed Umar v. Syed Davood, 2 Weir 724.

An application to get back a girl from her father's custody on the allegation that she is the wife of the applicant must be made to a Civil Court and not to the Magistrate under this section—Chenga Molla v. Masir, 10 C.W.N. lxxv.

This section provides for an order of restoration. No doubt, such an order can be enforced by warrant if necessary, but in many cases an order will meet the purpose and the Magistrate should not make an order for the ex parte issue of warrant—Om Radhe v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 698 (700), 182 I.C. 710, I.L.R. 1939 Kar 760, 12 R.S. 28, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 152.

Nature of the order:—Where the Magistrate ordered restoration of a girl to her mother and directed that the mother must give a guarantee from a responsible Government officer holding gazetted rank that the best interests of the girl would be looked after by the mother, the second portion of his order is entirely without jurisdiction. No such direction is contemplated by this section—Sccy., S. P. C. v. Archana Das, 43 C.W.N. 362.

553. (1) Whenever any person causes a police-officer to arrest another person in a presidency-town, if it appears to the Magistrate by whom the case is heard that there was no sufficient ground for causing such arrest, the Magistrate may award such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees would be followed by the District Court upon an application made by the applicant under sec. 25, Guardians and Wards Act. But this is no reason for him to assume a jurisdiction which in the absence of allegations of unlawful purpose, he does not possess, and he should not strain this section, even with the best of intentions, to give a relief which it is the function of another Court to grant—Om Radhe v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 698 (700), 182 I.C. 710, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 760, 12 R.S. 28, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 152.

1425. Unlawful detention:—The detention of a child in a missionary school, against the will of her parent or guardian with a view that she should be brought up in a religion which such parent or child disapproved of and the adoption of which would not only involve a total change in the child's mode of life, but would also deprive the parent or guardian of any control in the education or bringing up of the child, would amount to unlawful detention—Abraham v. Mahtaba, 16 Cal. 487.

The detention of a girl by the father in his house against the will of her husband does not amount to unlawful detention, unless it is shown that the detention was contrary to the wish of the girl—Nathu v. Nari Lal, 15 Cr.L.J. 712 (Cal.). If a woman is residing with her relatives who are aiding her in endeavouring to procure a divorce, such detention is not unlawful—Syed Umar v. Syed Davood, 2 Weir 721.

Unlawful purpose:—A Magistrate can act under this section when both the detention and the purpose are unlawful. In Abraham v. Mahtaba, 16 Cal. 487 cited above the detention was held to be unlawful, but the purpose was not. Unlawful purpose means immoral purpose. This section applies to female children only, and not to children generally; this shows that the purpose has some special reference to the sex of the person against whom it is entertained. In other words, the section has reference to adultery, concubinage, prostitution, deflowering or other similar purposes. But it certainly does not include the detention of a Hindu girl in a Christian Institution in order that she may be a Christian, or the detention of a Christian child in a Mahomedan Institution in order that she may be a Mahomedan—*Abraham v. It does not include purposes, which although not unlawful in themselves might become so when entertained towards a child in opposition to the wishes of its guardian—Thakordas v. Bhagwandas, 4 Bom.L.R. 609.

If the unlawful detention is for a purpose which is an offence or is legally prohibited or which is a civil wrong it would constitute an unlawful purpose under this section. Tested in this light the detention by a father of his minor married daughter contrary to the wish of her husband with the object to remarry her would clearly constitute unlawful detention for an unlawful purpose because bigamy is declared an offence by section 494, I. The question whether an order under this section should issue or not depends entirely on the question of the age of the girl who is living in another man's house with her consent but against the will of her mother who is lawfully entitled to have charge of her—*Ma Ngwe v. 1426. Procedure:—It is the District Magistrate who alone has jurisdiction to entertain a complaint and make an order under this section. He has no power to transfer such a case to a Sub-Magistrate, and that Magistrate would have no jurisdiction therein—Bai Dahi v. Jagivan, Ratanlal 963.

An application to get back a girl from her father's custody on the allegation that she is the wife of the applicant must be made to a Civil Court and not to the Magistrate under this section—Chenga Molla v. Masir, 10 C.W.N. lxxv.

This section provides for an order of restoration. No doubt, such an order can be enforced by warrant if necessary, but in many cases an order will meet the purpose and the Magistrate should not make an order for the ex parte issue of warrant—*Om Radhe v. 553. (1) Whenever any person causes a police-officer to arrest another person in a presidency-town, if it appears to the Magistrate by whom the case is heard that there was no sufficient ground for causing such arrest, the Magistrate may award such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, to be paid by the person so causing the arrest to the person so arrested, for his loss of time and expenses in the matter, as the Magistrate thinks fit.

(2) In such cases, if more persons than one are arrested, the Magistrate may, in like manner, award to each of them such compensation, not exceeding fifty rupees, as such Magistrate thinks fit.

(3) All compensation awarded under this section may be recovered as if it were a fine, and, if it cannot be so recovered, the person by whom it is payable shall be sentenced to simple imprisonment for such term not exceeding thirty days as the Magistrate directs, unless such sum is sooner paid.

554. (1) With the previous sanction of the Provincial Government, any High Court established by Royal Charter may, from time to time, make rules for the inspection of the records of subordinate Courts.

(2) Every High Court not established by Royal Charter may, from time to time, and with the previous sanction of the Provincial Government,—

- (a) make rules for keeping all books, entries and accounts to be kept in all Criminal Courts subordinate to it, and for the preparation and transmission of any returns or statements to be prepared and submitted by such Courts;
- (b) frame forms for every proceeding in the said Courts for which it thinks that a form should be provided;
- (c) make rules for regulating its own practice and proceedings and the practice and proceedings of all Criminal Courts subordinate to it; and
- (d) make rules for regulating the execution of warrants issued under this Code for the levy of fines:

Provided that the rules and forms made and framed under this section shall not be inconsistent with this Code or any other law in force for the time being.

(3) All rules made under this section shall be published in the Official Gazette.

Amendment:—The words "With the previous sanction of the Provincial Government, any High Court", "Provincial Government" and "Official Gazette" have been substituted for "With the previous sanction of the Governor General in Council, the High Court at Fort William, and with the previous sanction of the Local Government, any other High Court," "Local Government" and "local official Gazette" respectively by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

555. Subject to the power conferred by section 554, and by section 224 of the Government of India Act 1935, the forms set forth in the fifth schedule, with such variation as the circumstances of each case require, may be used for the respective purposes therein mentioned, and if used shall be sufficient.

Forms.

Amendment:—The words "section 224 of the Government of India Act, 1935" have been substituted for "section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915" by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

1427. "With such variation":—There being no prescribed form of warrant under sec. 100, a Magistrate who had to issue one under that section adapted a form under sec. 96 to the provision of sec. 100 by altering the figures and by drawing up the warrant in terms required by sec. 100. It was held that the warrant was perfectly legal—Mozam Molla, 45 Cal. 905 See also Note 205 under section 100.

556. No Judge or Magistrate shall, except with the permission of the Court to which an appeal lies from his Court, try or commit for trial any case to or in which he is a party or personally interested, and no Judge or Magistrate shall hear an appeal from any judgment or order passed or made by himself.

Case in which Judge or Magistrate is personally interested.

Explanation.—A Judge or Magistrate shall not be deemed a party, or personally interested, within the meaning of this section, to or in any case by reason only that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity, or by reason only that he has viewed the place in which an offence is alleged to have been committed or any other place in which any other transaction material to the case is alleged to have occurred, and made an inquiry in connection with the case.

A, as Collector, upon consideration of information furnished to him, directs the prosecution of B for a breach of the Excise Laws. A is disqualified from trying this case as a Magistrate.

1428. Principle and scope of section:—It is one of the oldest and plainest rules of justice and common sense that no man shall sit as a Judge in a case in which he has any interest—Bholanath Sen, 2 Cal 23 It is an unshaken doctrine of human jurisprudence that no man can be judge in his own case (Name debet esse iudex in propria sua causa). This maxim rests not upon any suspicion as to the honesty of the Judge or his capacity for the purposes of adjudication, but it rests upon a thing higher than the technicalities of law It rests upon the philosophy that says that human beings are after all human beings, and with all honour due to the honesty and integrity of the Judge, they are not to hear cases in which they are themselves concerned—Pohpn, 13 All. 171 (174) "The law in laying down this strict rule had regard not so much to the motives which might be supposed to bias the Judge as to the susceptibilities of the litigant parties. One important object, at all events, is to clear away everything which might engender suspicion and distrust in the tribunal and to promote the feelings of confidence in the administration of justice which is so essential to social order and security"—Serjeant v. Dale, 2 QBD. 558 (567).

exercising his judicial functions in relation to the offences imputed—Venkana, Ratanlal 339. So also, a Magistrate, who was one of the persons obstructed by the accused driving on the wrong side of the road, could not himself try the accused for offences under sections 28 and 29 of the Bombay Act VII of 1867—Lahana, Ratanlal 321.

1429. Personally interested:—The words 'personally interested' do not imply mere intellectual interest but something of the nature of an expectation of advantage to be gained, or of a loss or some disadvantage to be avoided, by the person who is said to be interested in the case—Cholappa, 8 Bom L.R. 947, 5 Cr L.J. 2. Thus, a public officer whose duty it is to see that the law is obeyed cannot, merely by reason of that duty, be said to be personally interested in the prosecution and trial of an offender—Ganeshi, 15 All. 192, 1893 A.W.N. 79. The words 'personally interested' cannot refer to any remote interest in the matter, but must refer to some particular and immediate personal interest in the case and its result—Ganeshi, 15 All. 192, 1893 A.W.N. 79. The law does not measure the amount of interest which a Judge possesses. If he has any personal pecuniary interest in the decision of the question one way, he is disqualified, no matter how small the interest may be—Dimes v. Proprietors of Grand Junction Canal, (1852) 3 H.L.C. 759; R. v. Recorder of Cambridge, (1857) 8 El. & Bl. 637, 112 R.R. 724; R. v. Hammond, (1864) 9 L.T. 423, 140 R.R. 824; Serjeant v. Dale, 2 Q.B.D. 558.

It is not a mere interest in a case or in the circumstances of the case which disqualifies a Magistrate or a Judge from trying a case but that which disqualifies him must be "a substantial interest giving rise to a real bias and not merely to a possibility of a bias". The interest—where not pecuniary—must be substantial so as to make it likely that the justice has a real bias and the mere possibility of bias is not sufficient to disqualify—Mg Po Kywe v The King, 40 Cr L.J. 621 (624), 182 I.C. 63, 11 R.R. 510, 1939 Rang L.R. 251, AIR 1939 Rang 152, following Ganeshi, supra; Reg v. Handsley, (1882) 8 Q.B.D. 383, 51 L.J.M.C. 137, 30 W.R. 368, 46 J.P. 119 and Reg v. Meyer, (1876) 1 Q.B.D. 173, 34 L.T. 246, 24 W.R. 392.

If a case is tried by a Board of Magistrates, and one of the Magistrates has a substantial interest in the case which disqualifies him from acting as Judge, the conviction will be set aside—Bholanath Sen, 2 Cal 23. But if a Bench requires the presence of two members only as a quorum, but the trial is commenced by four members, of which two are related to the complainant, and no objection being taken the District Magistrate orders the trial to be concluded by the remaining two, the trial and conviction are not illegal—Balbhadri v. Tribhuban, 3 N.L.R. 67, 6 Cr L.J. 43 (44).

against the accused and himself tried and convicted them, it was held that the Magistrate should not have tried the case himself as he had initiated and directed the whole proceedings and could be said to have been personally interested in them—Girish Chunder, 20 Cal 857. Where the investigation of the police at the preliminary inquiry was directed by a Magistrate to a considerable degree and where the Magistrate himself traced some of the accused and ordered their arrest, he was disqualified from trying the case—Sudhama, 23 Cal 328. A Magistrate who takes more than a formal part in a police investigation should not try the case—Nga Po, 4 Bur.L.J. 65, 26 Cr L.J. 1317.

(2) Magistrate being a witness:—A Magistrate cannot, in a case in which he is the sole Judge of law and fact, be a competent witness. The trial and conviction by a Magistrate of an accused in a case where he (the Magistrate) is himself a witness is illegal—Donnelly, 2 Cal 405; Mangni Lal, 20 Cr L.J. 45, 48 I.C. 685 (Pat.); 1901 P.L.R. 21. A Magistrate cannot import matters (e.g. personal knowledge) into his judgment not stated on oath before the Court in the presence of the accused. If he does so he makes himself a witness in the case, and renders himself incompetent to try it—Mangni Lal, 48 I.C. 685, 20 Cr L.J. 45 (Pat.); Girish Chunder, 20 Cal 857. A Magistrate becomes aware of some of the facts in connection with a case by his taking some part, or at any rate of being present, at a search made by the police during the investigation, should not try the case but transfer it to some other Magistrate—Gya Singh v. Mohamed Saliman, 5 C.W.N. 864. An officer should not try an offence under sec. 174, I. P. C., in his capacity as a Magistrate, when the offence has been committed before him in his capacity as a Settlement Officer—Sukhari, 2 All. 405. But the mere fact that the accused examines the trying Magistrate as a defence witness does not in any way prevent him from trying the case; for, it would be a most dangerous finding to hold that an accused person could upset the decision against him by the simple expedient of calling the Magistrate who was trying the case as a formal defence witness—Javed Husain, 2 Luck. 503, 28 Cr.L.J. 673 (674), 103 I.C. 401, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 296. See also Lal Hari Har Bakhsh Singh, 28 Cr.L.J. 65, 99 I.C. 97, 3 O.W.N. 914, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 31. If during the course of the trial, the Magistrate himself made a statement on oath which he recorded, and permitted himself to be cross-examined and re-examined, it was held that he was not incompetent to try the case—Nanke, 27 All. 33, 1904 A.W.N. 157; Mohammad Jan, 27 Cr.L.J. 1193, 97 I.C. 953, 3 O.W.N. 178 (Sup.), A.I.R. 1926 Oudh 557.

The mere fact that the Magistrate has merely held an identification parade and has thus made himself a witness in the case does not debar him from holding the commitment proceedings—Bhola Ram, 13 Lah. 461, 1932 Cr.C. 217 (219), 33 Cr.L.J. 188, 135 I.C. 675, 33 P.L.R. 641, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 196, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 147; Ram Prosad, A.I.R. 1927 Oudh 369 (377), 106 I.C. 721, 2 Luck. 631, 1 I.C. 721. Ordinarily, in such a case, his evidence would be taken for the first time in the Court of Session and the method adopted would be to call him as a Court witness. But if, in order to give the defence a better opportunity of preparing their criticisms, the Magistrate takes the unusual course of going into the witness-box during the committal proceedings, there is nothing objectionable to the course adopted by him—Ram Prosad, supra, following Nanke, 27 All. 33, 1904 A.W.N. 157. But it certainly would appear to be open to objection for a Magistrate to decide on the value of his own evidence—Ram Prosad, supra. See also Ram Jatan, 25 Cr.L.J. 665, 81 I.C. 153, 21 A.L.J. 420, A.I.R. 1924 All. 185.

It is wrong that a Magistrate who takes the dying deposition should record the evidence in the committal Court. It means that the accused is in that Court precluded from questioning the Magistrate as to what happened when the dying deposition was taken—Nga Chit So v. The King, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 467, 172 I.C. 197, 39 Cr.L.J. 117.

A Magistrate does not, by reason of his having heard the statements made by the accused in open Court when he was brought up before him under the warrant and not recorded by the Magistrate under sec. 364, Cr. P. C., made himself a witness in the case and thereby disqualify himself from trying the case—Q.E. v. Fallah Chand, 24 Cal. 499 (502).

(3) Pecuniary interest:—If a Judge has any pecuniary interest, however small, in the result of the proceedings, it is against public policy that he should take part in the proceedings; he is disqualified from trying the case and the Court will not inquire whether he was really biassed or likely to be biassed—Allison v. General Council of Medical Education, (1894) 1 Q.B. 750, 70 L.T. 471; Shamdasani, 53 Bom. 716, 31 Bom.L.R. 925, 122 I.C. 141, 31 Cr.L.J. 383, A.I.R. 1929 Bom. 404, 1929 Cr.C. 433 (434); Rodrigues, 20 Bom. 502. Thus, a Magistrate who is a shareholder of the Company against whose auditors a prosecution is started under sec. 282, Companies Act, must be deemed to be personally interested, and cannot try the case—Shamdasani, supra. A Magistrate who is a shareholder of the company which is the complainant in the case is disqualified from trying a case. In such a case, it is not necessary to inquire whether there was any real or substantial ground for suspecting bias on his part—Rodrigues, 20 Bom. 502. See also Bholanath Sen, 2 Cal. 23. A Magistrate should not entertain a criminal case in which persons indebted to him are concerned either as complainants or as accused—C. P. Cr., Part II, No. 59.

(4) Judge or Magistrate being complainant:—It is impossible to allow the same Judge or the Magistrate to be the complainant and the Court. If a Sessions Judge makes a complaint under sec. 476A, he cannot hear an appeal in the case. The accused is entitled to a decision from a Judge who approaches the case with an absolutely open mind—Sai, 8 Lah. 496, 29 Cr.L.J. 6 (7), 106 I.C. 342, 28 P.L.R. 688, A.I.R. 1927 Bom. 35. See also Hiralal, in Note 1430. But see Sessions Judge of Bhandara v. Pandia, 25 Cr.L.J. 171, 76 I.C. 395, A.I.R. 1924 Nag. 23, 26 Cr.L.J. 1481, 89 I.C. 1049.

When during the hearing of a sessions case the Sessions Judge came to the conclusion that a prosecution witness ought to have been charged as a receiver of stolen property and ordered him to be arrested and produced before a Magistrate to be put on trial for the same offence and the Magistrate committed him to the Court of Session for trial, held that the Sessions Judge ought not to have tried the case without the permission of the appellate Court as he was the complainant and that there was a technical defect more serious than could be overlooked—Rahumbux, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 1, 36 Cr.L.J. 824, 155 I.C. 148, 1935 Cr.C. 42, 28 S.L.R. 347.

The accused was an accountant of the District Superintendent of Police's office and as such, his duty was to prepare bills and treasury vouchers for withdrawal of money required for official purposes, submit them to the District Superintendent of Police or in his absence to the Headquarters Assistant to the District Superintendent of Police and, after they have been passed and approved of, present the bills or vouchers at the treasury and receive payment thereon either in cash or in the shape of cash order. The offences with which the accused was charged in the eight trials were offences alleged to have been committed in connection with the accused's duties which also included the maintenance of accounts and cash registers including a register known as General Remittance Receipts. The Headquarters Magistrate who tried the cases also functioned as Treasury Officer of the station, and as such, was responsible for the conduct of the business in the treasury. Held that the alleged falsification of accounts, the embezzlements, the cheating and the forgeries were all alleged to have been perpetrated by the accused in the District Superintendent of Police's office or in connection with the books and papers maintained, or issued from there, and no question whatever with reference to the efficiency of the work of the Treasury Officer or to the discharge of the work of his office was substantially involved in any of the cases. The Headquarters Magistrate either in his capacity as the Treasury Officer or in any other capacity was not a party, was not interested in any of the cases and was not debarred from trying them—Mg Po Kywe v. The King, 40 Cr.L.J. 621 (623), 1939 Rang.L.R. 251, 182 I.C. 63, 11 R.R. 510, A.I.R. 1939 Rang. 152.

(5) Magistrate being servant of complainant:—A Magistrate who is a servant of a corporation is deemed to have such an interest in the result of a prosecution by the corporation as to disqualify him from trying the case—Wood v. Corporation of Calcutta, 7 Cal. 322; Nobin v. Chairman, 10 Cal. 194.

(6) Magistrate being master of complainant:—The mere fact that the Magistrate is the master of the complainant who is complaining on his own account merely, does not deprive the Magistrate of his jurisdiction, though in such a case it should generally be expedient for him to order the complainant to some other Magistrate—Basappa, 9 Bom. 172. But where the complainant was the servant of the Magistrate, and it appeared that the Magistrate's wife was driving in the dog-cart for passing which the accused was charged with rash and negligent driving, the Magistrate was held to be personally interested and ought not to try the case—Sahadev, 14 Bom. 572.

(7) Magistrate being Agent of Court of Wards:—The mere fact that the District Magistrate is in his capacity as Collector, concerned in the management of an estate under the Court of Wards, does not disqualify him from trying a case of theft arising out of a dispute between the landlord and tenant in an estate under the management of the Court of Wards—Amrit Majhi, 46 Cal. 851 (859, 860), 29 Cr.L.J. 322, 23 C.W.N. 623, 20 Cr.L.J. 608, 51 I.C. 668; Baktu Singh v. Kali Prasad, 28 Cal. 297. But where the manager of an estate under the Court of Wards, who was also the Sub-divisional Officer, drew up proceedings as Magistrate under sec. 145 against one who disputed the possession of a piece of land, in which the estate claimed an interest, and the Magistrate refused an application for transfer of the case, it was held that the Magistrate showed a lack of appreciation of ordinary principles which should guide judicial officers in matters of this kind—Asghar Raza, 9 C.W.N. cccxvi.

(8) Magistrate being friend of a party:—If a Magistrate is in close business or friendly relationship with a party, it is on the whole undesirable that he should take part in hearing a case in which the interests of that person are gravely affected. Thus, a Magistrate is disqualified from trying a case, if the complainant during the pendency of the case has paid several visits to him and supplied him with servants and catables. But the fact that on only one occasion the person at whose instance the complaint was made visited the Magistrate, and the visit was of a wholly innocent nature paid in the regular course of the Magistrate's social duties, would not disqualify the Magistrate—In re S Mukhtar, 8 Pat. 575, A.I.R. 1929 Pat. 151 (153), 116 I.C. 762, 10 P.L.T. 711 (F.B.).

(9) Magistrate holding adverse opinion:—The mere fact that in the preliminary departmental enquiry in the case, the Magistrate forwarded the papers to the Collector with his opinion that there was apparently sufficient evidence to justify criminal prosecution, does not render the Magistrate personally interested so as to debar him from afterwards trying the case—Rarji, 5 Bom.L.R. 512. See in this connection the cases cited in Note 1373 under sec. 526.

(10) Magistrate taking cognizance under sec. 190 (1)(c), Cr. P. C.:—The mere fact that a Magistrate takes cognizance of a case on his own knowledge under sec. 190 (1)(c), Cr. P. C., does not bring the case within the operation of this section and so long as the Magistrate complies with the provisions of sec. 191, Cr. P. C. he is entitled to try the case—Nga Chit Kyau v. Emp., 25 Cr.L.J. 249, 84 I.C. 249, 3 Bur.L.J. 121, A.I.R. 1921 Rang. 352. But see Oziullah v. Beni Madhab, 50 Cal. 135 in Note 590.

1430. Sanctioning or directing the prosecution:—A public servant, who, or a Court which, makes a complaint under sec. 195, Cr. P. C., can on no account be allowed to take part in holding the trial of the case which is started on the basis of such complaint. The order consenting to the initiation of proceedings under cl. (2) of sec. 195A, stands on a very different footing from a complaint under section 195. The Magistrate giving consent under sec. 195A, cl. (2) is not disqualified from trying the case—Hiralal, 35 Cr.L.J. 714, 148 I.C. 558, 38 C.W.N. 581, 1934 Cr.C. 532, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 521, A.I.R. 1934 Cal. 391. See the Illustration. A Magistrate who takes a mere formal part in the prosecution cannot be said to direct the prosecution and is not, therefore, deprived of his jurisdiction in the case. Thus, a Magistrate who simply issued process as officer-in-charge of the Sudder sub-division is not precluded from hearing an appeal in the case—Dasarath Rai, 36 Cal. 859. Where a Magistrate under the Excise Act lays before the Inspector of Police certain information regarding the conduct of the accused in his dealings in opium and directs the said Inspector to make an inquiry on the basis of that information, and a prosecution is subsequently instituted in the ordinary course by the investigating police officer, held that the Magistrate cannot be said to have such connection with the proceedings antecedent to the prosecution as would debar him from trying the accused—Babu Ram, 15 Cr.L.J. 17, 11 A.L.J. 852, 22 I.C. 161. Where the Magistrate in his capacity as the Cantonment Small Cause Court Judge issued a warrant, the execution of which was obstructed, and on the complaint of the bailiff convicted the persons who caused the obstruction, held that as the Magistrate had not directed the prosecution, the mere issue of the warrant did not make him personally interested, and he was concerned in the matter in a public capacity only—Muso, 8 S.L.R. 41, 15 Cr.L.J. 649. Whether a given case falls within the provisions of this section is a question of fact to be determined by the circumstances of each case. Where a Deputy Tahsildar made a report to the Tahsildar about certain offences and the Tahsildar in his turn reported the matter to the Deputy Magistrate, who authorised the Tahsildar to prosecute the accused, and the Tahsildar then lodged a complaint before the Deputy Magistrate who tried the case, held that the Deputy Magistrate was not disqualified, since he merely authorised or sanctioned the prosecution and not directed it. A distinction should be drawn between authorisation or sanction of prosecution and direction of prosecution—Chenchi Reddy, 24 Mad. 238. If a District Magistrate or other executive head of a district or department orders a prosecution because the matter before him demands elucidation by judicial inquiry, this section would not be applicable, but where the officer ordering the prosecution has satisfied his own mind that the accused is guilty, then clearly he should not try the accused. Thus, where a Forest Officer asked the Deputy Commissioner to give a warning to the accused for having made a false report to that officer, but the Deputy Commissioner directed prosecution of the accused under sec. 182, I. P. C., on the ground that he was satisfied that there was a clear case of a false report deliberately made, held that the Deputy Commissioner was disqualified from hearing the case as Magistrate—Faiz Muhammad, 9 N.L.R. 81, 14 Cr.L.J. 385 (386, 387). Where the prosecution is by a Town Committee, the mere fact that the Magistrate had as the President of the Town Committee sanctioned the prosecution cannot be said to give the Magistrate any personal interest in the proceedings, and the Magistrate is competent to try the case himself. But nevertheless it is not desirable that he should try the case when other Magistrates are available—Gopi Chand, 1 Rang. 517, 25 Cr.L.J. 273, 76 IC 865, A.I.R. 1924 Rang. 87. A Sessions Judge is not prohibited in law from hearing an appeal from a conviction in a case, in which as an Insolvency Judge, on the application of a creditor, he had allowed the prosecution to proceed—Srikrishna, 21 A.L.J. 90. But where proceedings were instituted on a complaint by a District Judge in accordance with sec. 69 (5) of the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920), he, as a Sessions Judge, cannot hear appeal against the conviction of the accused by the Magistrate in the same proceedings—Mamoon A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 30, 67 IC 622, 4 Lah.L.J. 452, 14 P.W.R. 1922 (Cr.), 61 P.L.R. 1922, 23 Cr.L.J. 446. Where the prosecution of the accused has been sanctioned by the Joint Magistrate, the appeal should not be heard by him except with the permission of the Court to which an appeal lies from his Court—Ponnuswamy Pillai, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 945, 1940 M.W.N. 805, 52 M.L.W. 345, 1940 M.Cr.C. 183, 190 IC 640, 42 Cr.L.J. 55, 190 IC 640. Where a District Magistrate who as Inspector of Factories ordered an inquiry to be made in the same capacity directed the prosecution of the accused for an offence under the Factories Act, he was disqualified from trying the case—Lorinda, 1 Lah. 35, 76 P.L.R. 1920, 55 IC 997, 21 Cr.L.J. 389 A.I.R. 1920 Lah. 334. Sanction under section 29, Arms Act, would only be granted on a consideration of the facts connected with the prosecution, and having once granted sanction in his capacity as an Additional District Magistrate the accused could not be tried by the Magistrate granting the sanction whether he acted as Additional District Magistrate or as City Magistrate. Such trial is illegal under this section—Yusuf Umar Tindal v Emp. 41 Cr.L.J. 507, 189 IC 29, A.I.R. 1940 Sind 107, 11 L.R. 1940 Kar 296. Where a Cantonment Magistrate in his capacity as secretary of the Cantonment Committee ordered the prosecution of the accused in respect of an alleged building in contravention of the Cantonment Rules and proceeded to try the case, held that the case ought to be transferred to another Magistrate—Hira Lal 20 A.L.J. 911. A Magistrate, who upon information furnished to him directs the issue of a warrant under sec. 6 of the Gambling Act, is disqualified from trying the case—Chin Pin 13 Bur.L.T. 154 61 IC 835 22 Cr.L.J. 401. A.I.R. 1924 Lah. 247 73 IC 521 5 Lah.L.J. 429 24 Cr.L.J. 633. See also 1934 All. 987, 4 A.W.R. 345, 1934 Cr.C. 1305, 36 Cr.L.J. 293. See also 1934 Raja Ram, supra was followed and Muhammad Ali Khan 25 Cr.L.J. 102 A.I.R. 1924 A.L.J. 558, A.I.R. 1926 All. 428, where a contrary view was held. Where after the close of a trial, the trying Magistrate issues a charge-sheet in respect of a witness for the prosecution, held that the so, tries that person and convicts him, held that the Magistrate having directed the prosecution is not competent to hold the trial—Gundoo, 23 Bom.L.R. 842, 22 Cr.L.J. 603, 62 I.C. 875. See sec. 487 and the Notes thereunder.

1431. Explanation:—Under the Explanation, a Magistrate is not deemed to be a party or personally interested in any case by reason of the fact that he is a Municipal Commissioner or otherwise concerned therein in a public capacity. But if in addition to a connection of that sort, he directs the prosecution of a person for an offence, he is disqualified from trying the case, not by reason of the fact that he is a Municipal Commissioner or publicly connected with the case, but by reason of the further fact that he has constituted himself the prosecutor—Bhojraj, 5 S.L.R. 137, 13 Cr.L.J. 30; Inayat Hussain, 1899 A.W.N. 74; Gundoo, 23 Bom.L.R. 842, 22 Cr.L.J. 603, A.I.R. 1921 Bom. 365, 62 I.C. 875; Mohandas Joyramdas, 20 S.L.R. 171, 98 I.C. 405, A.I.R. 1927 Sind 98, 27 Cr.L.J. 1333 (1334). Thus, the mere fact that the Magistrate might happen to be a Municipal Commissioner does not necessarily disqualify him from holding a trial in which some municipal matter was involved. But it is a very different matter when it is found that the Magistrate is practically one of the prosecutors and the Judge—Kharak Chand v. Tarack, 10 Cal 1030. A Municipal Commissioner in his capacity as such Commissioner had invited the attention of the Executive Officer of the Municipality to the manner in which a certain Bye-law of the Municipality was being disregarded by the accused. The Executive Officer called the attention of the Health Officer to the matter and the Health Officer instituted the prosecution after satisfying himself that there were good prima facie grounds for believing that the Bye-law was being broken and that the interests of the public health required its enforcement. The case was tried by a Bench of Honorary Magistrates of which the Municipal Commissioner was a member, and ended in a conviction. Held, that the trial and conviction were not illegal, because the Municipal Commissioner was not a party to the prosecution nor did he cause it to be instituted—Nanoo, 24 Cr.L.J. 135, A.I.R. 1923 All 483, 71 I.C. 359. The mere fact that the Magistrate is the Vice-President of the Municipality and Chairman of the Managing Committee does not disqualify him from trying an offence against the Municipality. But if he has taken any part in promoting the prosecution, as for instance, by concurring in sanctioning it at a meeting of the Managing Committee or otherwise, he would be disqualified—Pherozsha, 18 Bom 422; Mahammad Babsh, 10 Lah 718, 116 I.C. 881, 1929 Cr.C. 310, 30 P.L.R. 705, A.I.R. 1929 Lah 718, 30 Cr.L.J. 698 (699); Fazl Ilahi v. Municipal Committee, 1896 P.R. 5. So also, if the Magistrate is the Vice-President of a Municipal Committee and was present at the meeting in which the resolution was passed, for the disobedience of which the accused is prosecuted, the Magistrate is debarred from trying the case—Nurkishan, 23 Cr.L.J. 704, A.I.R. 1922 Lah. 72. A Magistrate does not, by reason of his being a member of a sub-committee of a Municipal Board, become personally interested so as to be disentitled to try the accused for an offence against the Municipal Board—Mohan Lal, 27 All. 25. See also Khusal Chand, 29 Cr.L.J. 822, 111 I.C. 326, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 946. But if he presides at a meeting of the Municipal Board which directs the prosecution of the accused, he becomes disqualified—Deendoval, 14 N.L.R. 14; Bhojraj, 5 S.L.R. 137, 13 Cr.L.J. 30; Rama Rao, 20 Cr.L.J. 244, 49 I.C. 916. See also Hem Raj, 29 P.L.R. 282, 108 I.C. 271, 9 Lah.L.J. 583, A.I.R. 1928 Lah 114, 29 Cr.L.J. 371. It may be that he did not speak or vote at the meeting but the fact remains that he attended the meeting where the question was debated and the prosecution ordered, and he has therefore placed himself personally to some extent in the position of a prosecutor—Bhojraj, 5 S.L.R. 137. Where the Municipal Committee resolved to institute criminal proceedings against the accused and directed the Secretary to take necessary steps, and the Secretary forwarded a copy of the resolution to the Joint Magistrate (who was no other than the Secretary himself) who took proceedings and tried the accused, it was held that the trial was not only illegal but a mere show—Basant, 1883 A.W.N. 181. The District Magistrate is not disqualified from hearing the appeal merely because he happens to be the Chairman of the Municipal Board—

Inayet Hussain, 1899 A.W.N. 74. Contra—Nistarini v. A. C. Ghose, 23 Cal. 44 and Erugadu, 15 Mad. 83, where it was held that the very fact that the Chairman of the Municipality was the Magistrate, disqualified him from trying the offence, and the Explanation did not apply to his case.

In Nobin v. Chairman, 10 Cal. 194, a distinction has been drawn between a salaried officer of a Corporation and an Honorary Officer, and it has been held that the Explanation does not apply to a salaried officer. A salaried officer of the Corporation is, by reason of the very fact that he is a servant of the Corporation, precluded him from trying any Municipal case as a Magistrate. But a gentleman who without remuneration is merely discharging a public and honorary office, and who has no personal interest in the proceedings of the Municipality, may well be supposed to be free from that bias which the jealousy of the law presumes in other persons more immediately interested.

'Concerned therein in a public capacity':—A Magistrate in charge of opium and excise administration of a district is not personally interested in the observation of the provisions of the Opium Act, merely because it is his duty to see the law relating to sale of opium enforced and maintained in his district; he is, therefore, not precluded from exercising jurisdiction in respect of offences against the said Act—In re Ganeshi, 15 All. 192. A District Magistrate is not precluded under this section from trying an offence under the Police Act, merely because he is the head of the police—Narain Singh, 22 All. 340. The fact that the District Magistrate is also the District Superintendent of Police does not of itself disqualify him from trying or inquiring into cases investigated by the police of his district—Maung Lat, 2 L.B.R. 209, 1 Cr.L.J. 477. But if the Magistrate in his public capacity directs the prosecution, he is disqualified. Thus, where the Magistrate as president of the octroi sub-committee directed the prosecution of an accused for evading the payment of octroi, the Magistrate was debarred from trying the case, even though the accused had consented to be so tried—Bhakeshar, 32 All. 635. A Magistrate is not disqualified from trying a case based on a private complaint and which has not been filed under his direction and sanction, merely and solely on the ground that the validity of certain orders passed by him in his capacity as an Executive or Revenue Officer is directly put in issue and is likely to be challenged before him, and that the innocence or guilt of the accused considerably depends on the effect of such orders—Mohandas Joyramdas, 20 S.L.R. 171, 27 Cr.L.J. 1333 (1334). Where a licensee of a liquor shop was ordered by the Excise Officer to change the site of his shop, and on his refusing to do so, he was tried by the Excise Officer in his capacity as District Magistrate, and convicted, held that the conviction was not illegal—Janki Das, 5 A.L.J. 357, 7 Cr.L.J. 393. It was further held in this case that the Illustration did not apply, as the Excise Officer and District Magistrate must be deemed to be two different persons. The correctness of this statement may be doubted.

1432. Local inspection:—Under the Code of 1882, it was held that a Magistrate making a personal inspection of the locus in quo where the offence was committed, made himself a witness in the case and thereby rendered himself incompetent to try the case—Manikam, 19 Mad. 263; Gurish Chunder, 20 Cal. 857; Hari Kishore v. Abdul, 21 Cal. 920. But now the law has been changed by the addition of the latter part of the Explanation.

A Magistrate is competent to inspect personally a locality in order to test the connection of the evidence and the plans of the locality submitted in the case. Such an inspection would not disqualify him from trying the case—Hansa Singh, 1901 P.R. 13; Babbon Singh, 37 Cal. 340 (355). Where the Magistrate inspected the locus in quo and stated in his judgment what he saw when he inspected, he was not disqualified—Dataraja, 2 Weir 728. Where a Magistrate made a local inspection in the presence of both the parties and the pleaders, and stated in his judgment some facts which he then observed, it was held that the Magistrate was competent to convict the accused—Krishnappa v. Sengoda, 2 Weir 727. Where the Judge personally inspected of offence with the prosecution witnesses and the vakil for the accused, and acting under the powers vested in him under sec. 540 recalled some of the prosecution witnesses and examined them in such a way as to put on record the most important points observed at the inspection, and the accused were given full opportunity of cross-examining those witnesses with reference to the facts relating to the personal inspection, held that it was open to the Judge to make the inspection, and that he did not act illegally or with material irregularity in using the results of his inspection in his disposal of the case—Thackroth Hydross, 45 M.L.J. 279. It is not only not objectionable but in many cases highly advisable that a Magistrate trying a criminal case should view the place in order to understand fully the bearing of the evidence given in Court. But if he does so, he should be careful not to allow any one on either side to say anything to him which might prejudice his mind one way or the other—Atar Rai, 39 Cal. 476. A local inspection should only be made for the purpose of enabling the Magistrate to understand better the evidence adduced before him (see sec. 539B) and it must be strictly confined to that—Manilam, 19 Mad. 263 (266); Krishnappa v. Sengoda, 2 Weir 727. When the law allows a view of the locality, every possible precaution should be taken that such a view should be nothing but a view of the local feature. Where the Magistrate did much more than viewing the place for the purpose of understanding and testing the evidence, and imported into his judgment matters of opinion and inference based upon circumstances not on the record, held that there was an error of procedure necessitating a retrial before another Magistrate—Babbon Sheikh, 37 Cal. 340 (357), 11 C.W.N. 422, 11 C.L.J. 335, 11 Cr.L.J. 121, 5 I.C. 365. Where a Magistrate in visiting the scene of occurrence not merely noted the various features of importance but imported into his judgment what he could not have possibly noted from the locality or from anything connected therewith (e.g., the position of the accused and of other men at the time of the alleged occurrence) he exceeded the proper limits of his discretion in making the inspection and thus disqualified himself from trying the case—Sattri Dulali, 3 C.W.N. 607. Under this section local inquiry does not deprive a Magistrate of jurisdiction. That merely means that the local inquiry would not amount to a necessity for transfer but there may be circumstances under which it would be advisable to direct a transfer from the Court of a Magistrate who has made a local inquiry—Ghassoo, 31 Cr.L.J. 555 (557), 123 I.C. 685, 1930 A.L.J. 606, A.I.R. 1930 All. 737. See also Note 1374 under sec. 526.

Inquiry under sec. 202:—As to whether the holding of an inquiry under sec. 202 disqualifies the Magistrate from trying the case, see Note 670 under sec. 202.

1432A. Illustration:—The illustration shows that if an officer is actively concerned in instituting and originating the proceedings in one capacity (e.g., as the executive head of the district), he is disqualified from trying the case or hearing the appeal in the case, in another capacity, viz., in the capacity of a judicial officer—Mahomed Shah, 1 S.L.J. 98 (101), 8 Cr.L.J. 356 (358). A District Magistrate, having in his capacity as Collector directed the prosecution of the accused, is disqualified from trying the case, or hearing a revision petition in the case in his capacity as District Magistrate—Nataraja, U.B.R. 1905 Cr.P.C. 37, 2 Cr.L.J. 468 (470). Where a Magistrate, as the Chairman of a Local Board, issued a notice calling upon the petitioner to remove a certain obstruction and upon the petitioner failing to show sufficient cause, the Magistrate initiated proceedings against the petitioner under sec. 133, held that the case was covered by the Illustration, and the Magistrate was disqualified from trying the case. The Magistrate's concern in the case had been not merely in a public capacity, so as to bring it within the Explanation—Rajani Kanta, 10 C.L.J. 481, 11 Cr.L.J. 2 (3). (But quære, whether the act of initiating proceedings under sec. 133 amounts to 'trying' a case?). It is highly undesirable that a Magistrate should act judicially in a case which he himself has extra-judicially investigated and in which upon facts so investigated he has come to conclusions of facts adversely to the party against whom he subsequently initiates criminal proceedings—Rajani Kanta, supra.

557. No pleader who practises in the Court of any Magistrate in a presidency-town or district shall sit as a Magistrate in such Court or in any Court within the jurisdiction of such Court.

Practising pleader not to sit as Magistrate in certain Courts.

1433. The appointment of a pleader to act as Presidency Magistrate is not forbidden by any provision of the Code. The only thing required of him is to give up practice on appointment—Jivanji, 23 Bom. 490.

This section does not forbid a pleader to practise in any Court but forbids him to sit as a Magistrate in certain Courts. If a pleader practises in the Honorary Magistrate's Court, or in the Township Magistrate's Court within whose jurisdiction that Court is, he is debarred from sitting as a Magistrate in the Honorary Magistrate's Court—Nga Tha Shewin, 25 Cr.L.J. 311, 76 I.C. 1031, 4 U.B.R. 127, A.I.R. 1923 Rang. 119.

558. The Provincial Government may determine what, for the purposes of this Code, shall be deemed to be the language of each Court within the territories administered by such Government, other than the Courts which are High Courts for the purposes of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Power to decide language of Courts.

Amendment:—The words "Provincial Government" and "the Courts which are High Courts for the purposes of the Government of India Act, 1935" have been substituted for "Local Government" and "the High Courts established by Royal Charter" respectively, by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

"With the permission of the presiding Judge or Magistrate, any Advocate or Pleader may address the Court in English, when any one of the pleaders on the opposite side is acquainted with that language, or whenever the senior of such pleaders or his client consents to that being done"—Cal G. R. & Co O, p. 58.

559. (1) Subject to the other provisions of this Code, the powers and duties of a Judge or Magistrate may be exercised or performed by his successor in office.

Provision for powers of Judges and Magistrates being exercised by their successors in office.

(2) When there is any doubt as to who is the successor in office of any Magistrate, the Chief Presidency Magistrate in a Presidency-town, and the District Magistrate outside such towns, shall determine by order in writing the Magistrate who shall, for the purposes of this Code or of any proceedings or order thereunder, be deemed to be the successor in office of such Magistrate.

(3) When there is any doubt as to who is the successor in office of any Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge, the Sessions Judge shall determine by order in writing the Judge who shall for the purposes of this Code or of any proceedings or order thereunder, be deemed to be the successor in office of such Additional or Assistant Sessions Judge.

This section has been redrafted by section 155 of the Cr P C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The old section stood as follows —

"559 All powers conferred by this Code on the Governor-General in Council, or on the Local Government, may be exercised from time to time as occasion requires."

But this section was unnecessary, because its provisions are covered by sec. 14 of the General Clauses Act. The old section has, therefore, been omitted and an entirely different section has been framed in its place. "A new section is intended to be inserted, providing for the powers of Judges and Magistrates being exercised by their successors-in-office, and the determination by the Chief Presidency or District Magistrate of the person to be deemed the successor-in-office of a Subordinate Magistrate in cases of doubt"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

A complaint under sec. 476 relating to an offence committed in relation to a proceeding in a Magistrate's Court can be made by the successor-in-office of the Magistrate—Behram, 7 Lah. 108, 27 Cr.L.J. 776. See Note 1239 under sec. 476.

If sec. 559 is read subject to sec. 192, it may well mean that the powers under the latter section are not intended to be exercisable by a successor-in-office—Ramkrishna Sinha v. Emp., 42 C.A.W.N. 216 (251).

550. A public servant having any duty to perform in connection with the sale of any property under the Code shall not purchase or bid for the property.

Officers concerned in sales not to purchase or bid for property.

551. (1) Notwithstanding anything in this Code, no Magistrate except a Chief Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate shall—

Special provisions with respect of offence of rape by a husband.

- (a) take cognizance of the offence of rape where the sexual intercourse was by a man with his wife, or
- (b) commit the man for trial for the offence.

(2) A Chief Presidency Magistrate, if a Chief Presidency Magistrate deems it necessary to direct an investigation with respect to such an offence as is referred to in sub-section (1), no police-officer of a rank below that of police-inspector shall be employed either to make, or to take part in, the investigation.

Clause (a):—Where the offence referred to in this clause was taken cognizance of by the District Magistrate, the fact that the investigation into the offence had been conducted by a subordinate Police-officer was not a material irregularity which would vitiate the proceedings—Mehri, 1895 A.W.N. 9.

551A. Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or affect the inherent power of the High Court to make such orders as may be necessary to give effect to any order under this Code, or to prevent abuse of the process of any Court or otherwise to secure the ends of justice.

1433A. Amendment:—This section has been added by section 156 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. "By this section it is proposed to give statutory recognition to the inherent powers of the High Court—a principle which is already well-recognized"—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

Scope:—No legislative enactment dealing with procedure can provide for all the cases that may possibly arise, and it is an established principle that Courts must possess inherent powers, apart from the express provisions of the law, which are necessary to their existence and the proper discharge of duties imposed upon them by law. This doctrine finds expression in section 561A, which does not confer any new powers on the High Court, but merely recognizes and preserves the inherent powers previously possessed by it—Sukh Dev, 11 Lah. 539, 31 P.L.R. 207, 31 Cr.L.J. 482 (483).

All that this section does is to declare that such inherent powers as the High Court may possess have not been taken away or abridged by any of the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure. It does not confer any new powers, but merely declares that such inherent powers as the Court may possess shall not be deemed to be limited or affected by anything contained in the Code. There is no conflict between this section and sec. 369. Section 369 does not affect any powers inherent in the Court, as there never has been an inherent power in the High Court to alter or review its own judgment in a criminal case once it has been pronounced and signed except in cases where it was passed without jurisdiction or in default of appearance without an adjudication on the merits. The High Court is not given nor did it ever possess, an unrestricted and undefined power to make any order which, it might please to consider, was in the interest of justice. Its inherent powers are much controlled by principle and precedent as are its express powers by Statute—Raju, 110 I.C. 221, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 462, 10 A.I.R. 494, 29 Cr.L.J. 669, 30 P.L.R. 247, 10 Lah. 1. See also Banwari Lal, 36 Cr.L.J. 1286, 157 I.C. 1044, 1935 A.L.R. 904, 8 R.A. 258, A.I.R. 1935 All. 466, 1935 A.L.J. 317, 1935 Cr.C. 507; Kunji Lal, 35 Cr.L.J. 1485, 151 I.C. 714, 1934 A.L.J. 704, A.I.R. 1935 All. 60, 1934 A.L.R. 905, 4 A.W.R. 252; Laxmanrao Parashram v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 763, 183 I.C. 348, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 244, distinguishing Har Kishen Lal, A.I.R. 1937 Lah. 497, 170 I.C. 375, I.L.R. 1937 Lah. 69, 38 Cr.L.J. 883, 39 P.L.R. 733, 10 R.L. 103 and Rash Behari Singh, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 551, 152 I.C. 291, 1934 Cr.C. 1195, 36 Cr.L.J. 100, 15 P.L.T. 475, 7 R.P. 179, and the Note given under section 369 and Note 1170.

The use of extraordinary powers under this section ought to be reserved as far as possible for extraordinary cases. They are not usually invoked when there is another remedy available. Orders in the nature of attachment before judgment are not altogether consistent with the spirit of criminal proceedings, in view of the presumption that the accused is innocent until he is found guilty—In re Lloyds Bank Ltd., A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 74, 36 Bom.L.R. 88, 35 Cr.L.J. 1028 (1032), 58 Bom. 152, A.I.R. 1934 Bom. 199, 149 I.C. 1005.

This inherent jurisdiction should be exercised with due care and caution, and must conform to sound general principles and precedents. It was never contemplated by the Legislature that the High Court should exercise its inherent powers for making pronouncements upon questions of law in order to guide a Magistrate in conducting an inquiry or trial. And so, where in a pending case the prosecution applied to the High Court to give directions to the Magistrate to cut short the preliminary inquiry by dispensing with certain witnesses, the High Court refused to give such directions, as the law relating to such matters was expressly laid down in section 208 (2). If the High Court would be called upon to adjudicate upon all sorts of hypothetical questions, then it would be required to perform the functions of a legal adviser to the litigants and the subordinate Magistracy—Sukh Dev, supra.

"Or otherwise to secure the ends of justice"—Expunge remarks:—
 "We understand that a High Court has recently held [44 All. 401] that it had no power to direct the expunging of objectionable matter from a record. We think it desirable that it should be made clear that this clause is intended to meet such a case"—Report of the Joint Committee (1922). See Note 1214 under sec. 439. Thus, by virtue of the inherent powers conferred on it by this section, the High Court can expunge any objectionable remark from the judgment of a lower Court—Amar Nath, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 187, 85 I.C. 143, 5 Lah. 476 (481), 26 Cr.L.J. 463; Abdul Aziz, 25 Cr.L.J. 1245, 82 I.C. 173, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 129; Bernarsi Das, A.I.R. 1925 Lah. 392, 89 I.C. 270, 6 Lah. 166, 26 Cr.L.J. 1326; Daly, 9 Lah. 269, 29 Cr.L.J. 620, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 740, 29

P.L.R. 461, 109 I.C. 812; Panchanan v. Upendra, 49 All. 251, 27 Cr.L.J. 1407 (1408), A.I.R. 1927 All. 193, 98 I.C. 917, 25 A.L.J. 100; Muhammad Qasam v. Anwar Khan, 27 Cr.L.J. 510 (511); Mahomed Umer, 35 Cr.L.J. 1138, 150 I.C. 610, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 78, 1931 Cr.C. 637, A.I.R. 1934 Sind 68; Mahomed Husain, 23 S.L.R. 432, 30 Cr.L.J. 970, A.I.R. 1929 Snd 213, 1929 Cr.C. 537, 118 I.C. 747; Fazir Singh, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 1018, 31 P.L.R. 992, 129 I.C. 273, Ind. Rul. 1931 Lah. 161, 32 Cr.L.J. 268, 1930 Cr.C. 1224; Ram Lal, 109 I.C. 812, 9 Lah. 269, 29 Cr.L.J. 620, 29 P.L.R. 461, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 740; Fazal Din, 33 Cr.L.J. 531, 137 I.C. 850, 33 P.L.R. 608, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 352; Gokaran Prasad Gupta v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 923, 181 I.C. 250, 1939 O.W.N. 872, 1939 O.L.R. 593, 12 R.O. 90. It is, however, not open to the High Court under sections 435 and 439 Cr. P. C., to expunge offensive remarks but, under the provisions of this section, the High Court has inherent power, in order to secure the ends of justice, to pass any order that may be necessary to remove the legitimate grievance of the applicant—Rishi Lal v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 376 (379), 167 I.C. 11, 9 R.O. 379, 1937 A.C.C. 51, 1937 O.L.R. 118, 1937 O.W.N. 258, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 277.

The High Court of course can interfere under this section in cases where remarks are made about a person who is not a party to the proceedings or not a witness in the case. The High Court can also interfere when remarks are made about a party to the proceedings or a witness to the case which are not justified by the findings—Karamat Ullah v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 380, 185 I.C. 799, A.I.R. 1910 Lah. 42 (43). See also K. V. Lakshmana Rao, 41 Cr.L.J. 317, 185 I.C. 472, A.I.R. 1910 Mad. 131, 1939 M.W.N. 1131, 50 M.L.W. 782. But such power can be exercised only where there is no foundation whatever for the remarks objected to and not where it is a matter of inference from evidence—Panchanan v. Upendra, supra. The powers under this section should be sparingly used and only in exceptional cases. It is not desirable that the High Court should on the motion of a subordinate Magistrate, expunge remarks made by a lower Appellate Court relating to the conduct of judicial proceedings taken by the said Magistrate—Muhammad Qasam, supra. It is the duty of the High Court, in order to prevent abuse of the process of the Court and secure the ends of justice, to delete passages commenting adversely upon a person who is not a party to the proceedings and has not had a fair opportunity of being heard, and also to delete such passages when they are based upon no evidence or evidence not properly upon the record. There appears to be no good reason why the High Court's power should not be used to delete passages which, though based on evidence, damage the character of a person and are wholly irrelevant to any point in issue and which, a Court has unnecessarily gone out of its way to include in a judgment. Further where the High Court's notice has been drawn to a judgment which appears to it to be couched in language injudicious and uncalled for, the High Court can and ought to express its opinion in the matter whether any passage is or is not ultimately expunged. In cases which have assumed a communal aspect, the proceedings in Courts and the language of their judgments should not themselves promote the feelings of enmity, the promotion of which by others it is their duty to punish under the law—Atta Ullah Shah, A.I.R. 1936 Lah. 429 (433), 37 Cr.L.J. 661, 162 I.C. 621, 1936 Cr.C. 464, 38 P.L.R. 638, 8 R.L. 295, distinguishing Tejmal, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 91, 27 S.L.R. 30, where it is laid down that it is desirable that a judgment once delivered should remain in the shape in which it was originally published.

It is a serious matter for the High Court to expunge remarks from a Magistrate's judgment or order. The High Court will interfere to expunge remarks which are libellous and irrelevant. But if they form an integral part of the judgment or its argument, and if they are inseparable, the High Court will not interfere and mutilate a judgment so that it reads disjointly or incoherently, nor will it interfere merely because the Court may have passed remarks adverse to a witness provided the judgment shows there is some basis for them, however inadequate may appear this basis to the higher Court. It may well be the bounden duty of a Judge or Magistrate in giving his judgment and his reasons to comment adversely upon the conduct of witnesses;

so also it may be his duty to comment adversely upon the conduct of accused persons even though he may not consider the evidence sufficient to commit them for trial to the Court of Session. Nor will the High Court in revision inquire into question of fact, but in dealing with applications of this nature it will take the Magistrate's judgment as it stands. Where the Magistrate's own order exculpates rather than inculpates the accused, he is not justified in making remarks seriously to his prejudice which will be justified only if his order tended to inculpate rather than exculpate. A Magistrate when he is called upon to investigate a case in which a large number of persons may be involved and may appear to be implicated in some offence, may in his order consider the case against a person who is neither a witness nor an accused. He may have to consider facts in relation to a particular individual who is not an accused or witness in order to weigh fairly the evidence against the accused or the evidence given by witnesses, but a Magistrate is not justified in condemning any person without his being given an opportunity of being heard—Kartarchand Shankerdas v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 524, 175 I.C. 57, 10 R.S. 279, A.I.R. 1938 Sind 103. See also K. V. Lakshmana Rao, A.I.R. 1940 Mad. 134, 41 Cr.L.J. 317, 186 I.C. 472, 1940 M.Cr.C. 1, 50 M.L.W. 782, 1939 M.W.N. 1131.

While on the one hand Courts are at liberty to discuss the conduct of the persons before them, either as parties or as witnesses untrammelled by any considerations, on the other they are not permitted to travel beyond the record and are bound to exercise due restraint on the language employed by them. In other words, they should neither make any such sweeping assertions as are not borne out by the evidence produced before working of the Police and to start a public agitation against them. Courts are not make an appeal to the Press to take up the particular defects pointed out by him in the working of the Police and to start a public agitation against them. Courts are not expected to play to the gallery nor to invoke the Press in a manner which is liable to be misunderstood and may land the administration in general in an awkward situation. They should play the part of Judges alone and not that of propagandists and confine their whole attention to the evidence led before them and to the matters requiring determination at their hands. If they strictly observe these principles, they would be able to approach their task with a clear vision and an unclouded mind and this would not only conduce to the better administration of justice but would further save their time as well as the time of everybody else concerned—In re Advocate-General, 40 Cr.L.J. 655, 182 I.C. 281, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 174, 41 P.L.R. 74, 11 L.R. 1939 Lah. 327.

It is an elementary principle of justice that no man should be condemned unless he has had opportunity of defending himself. Nobody can dispute that in the interests of proper administration of justice, the Courts should be allowed to perform their functions freely and fearlessly and to comment upon the statements of witnesses in so far as those statements are relevant to the case, but it is equally necessary that the Courts should not be allowed to make disparaging remarks upon persons who appear either as witnesses during the course of trial of a case or whose names are mentioned. It is not open to a Court to condemn a witness merely on conjectures or materials not before it in the shape of evidence. Before passing adverse remarks against a witness on the basis of certain facts, those facts must be established by evidence on the record of the case—Gokaran Prasad Gupta v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. 923 (924), 184 I.C. 250, 1939 O.W.N. 872, 1939 O.L.R. 593, 12 R.O. 90, 1939 A.W.R. (C.C.) 189, 1939 A.Cr.C. 174.

A Magistrate is within his rights in drawing inferences from facts. If there is no evidence on the record which would support his remarks even as legitimate inferences, the remarks are wholly unjustified. When they reflect on the character of the applicant and may affect his future it is only fair that they should be expunged—Lachman Das v. Jai Gopal, A.I.R. 1938 Lah. 793, 179 I.C. 523, 40 Cr.L.J. 214, 11 R.L. 582. Where, travelling beyond its legitimate functions in the case, the appellate Court had, on the uncorroborated statements of a boy which had not received the binding sanction of an oath, and without giving an opportunity to the applicant to be heard, held him guilty of indecent assault upon the boy, a finding which was wholly irrelevant for the right decision of the case, the High Court set aside the finding in exercise of its powers under this section—Rishi Lal v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 376, 167 I.C. 11, 9 R.O. 379, 1937 A.Cr.C. 51, 1937 O.L.R. 118, 1937 O.W.N. 258, A.I.R. 1937 Oudh 277.

In the opinion of the Bombay High Court, the judgment in Dunz, 44 All. 401, 66 I.C. 1005, A.I.R. 1922 All. 107, 23 Cr.L.J. 349, 20 A.L.J. 251, was right and has not been altered by the introduction of section 561A, Cr. P. C., and the High Court has no jurisdiction to expunge passages from the judgment of an inferior Court which has not been brought before it in regular appeal or revision—Rogers v. Shrinivas Gopal Kauale, 41 Cr.L.J. 855, 190 I.C. 205, A.I.R. 1910 Bom. 266, 11 L.R. 1910 Bom. 415, 42 Bom.L.R. 478.

Quash proceedings:—The inherent jurisdiction of the High Court to pass any orders necessary to prevent abuse of the process of any Court is not questioned and indeed has been clearly expressed in section 561A, Cr. P. Code. Since prevention is always better than cure, the obligation to prevent specious and spiteful criminal prosecutions for actions which, though strictly dishonourable, yet do not amount to crimes, is one that must never be shirked. In the world of business things are often done which are betrayals of confidence and deceptions which arouse moral indignation but are nevertheless civil wrongs which can be righted by Civil Courts and are not crimes which can be punished by a Criminal Court. Not every immoral act is criminal and it is an abuse of the process of a Court to attempt to create new crimes in order to compel men to conform to a high standard of probity in business dealings or to force them to execute their promises—Chidambaram Chettiar v. Shanmugham Pillai, A.I.R. 1938 Mad. 129, 1937 M.W.N. 999, 46 M.L.W. 629, 1937 M.Cr.C. 278, (1937) 2 M.L.J. 878, 173 I.C. 14, 39 Cr.L.J. 261. If a charge has been framed by the trial Court in a case where no offence appears to have been committed, the High Court can interfere under this section during the pendency of the case, and set aside the charge and quash the entire proceedings—Gokul Prasad v. Debi Prasad, 26 Cr.L.J. 748, 85 I.C. 281, 23 A.L.J. 21, A.I.R. 1925 All. 311. Under the provisions of this section the High Court has power to interfere at interlocutory stage of criminal proceedings in a subordinate Court in order to prevent harassment of a subject of the Crown by an illegal prosecution. It will also interfere whenever there is any exceptional and extraordinary reason for doing so—Abdul Wali, A.I.R. 1933 Oudh 387, 35 Cr.L.J. 148, 146 I.C. 661, 1933 Cr.C. 1088, 10 O.W.N. 807. See also Bagh Ali v. Karim Bakhsh, 34 Cr.L.J. 377, 142 I.C. 575, 34 P.L.R. 126, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 233. Where the criminal case pending against the applicant cannot succeed for the simple reason that the pro-note, which at first was suspected to be a forgery, has been proved to be genuine and upon the basis of that pro-note, a decree has been obtained in his favour, it is proper for the High Court in the exercise of the jurisdiction vested in it under this section to quash the criminal proceedings pending against him when he has not been discharged by the trial Court—Girdhar Gopal, 35 Cr.L.J. 576, 147 I.C. 1208, 11 O.W.N. 265, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 114, A.I.R. 1931 Oudh 169, 1931 Cr.C. 380. See also Note 1215.

In the exercise of its inherent powers under this section, the High Court cannot pass any order which would conflict with the provisions of the Code. Thus, the High Court has no jurisdiction to make an order for the restoration of attached property, where the application is made beyond the period prescribed in sec. 89—Gurunath, 26 Bom.L.R. 719, 25 Cr.L.J. 1293, A.I.R. 1924 Bom. 485, 82 I.C. 365. In this case it was not intended to lay down a general proposition that this section could not be used for passing any orders conflicting with any other provisions of the Code—Jamnadas Nathji Shah, 38 Cr.L.J. 606 (607), 168 I.C. 718, 11 L.R. 1937 Bom. 263, 39 Bom.L.R. 82, 9 R.B. 393, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 153. The High Court cannot, in the exercise of its inherent powers, act in contravention of law. Thus, as an Appellate Court, it cannot admit a time-barred criminal appeal, when no sufficient cause for the delay has been

e out under sec. 5, Limitation Act—Mahadya, 31 Cr.L.J. 381, 1931 Cr.C. 453, R. 1931 Nag. 101.

The powers conferred on the High Court under this section are powers which must bound within the Criminal Procedure Code. This section confers no new powers on High Court, because the Court cannot, by invoking its inherent powers, extend the powers given to it by statute—Sukh Dev, 1929 Cr.C. 351, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 705; Maru-a v Shanmuga, 49 M.L.J. 593. Thus, the High Court has no power to appoint a receiver pending the disposal of a revision petition against an order passed under sec. 145—Arudayya v Shanmuga Sundara, 49 M.L.J. 593. See this case cited in Note 421 under sec. 145. See also Note 443A.

It has been held in some cases that the words "save as otherwise provided by this Code" in sec. 369, and the words "Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit" in 561A, show that sec. 369 must be read as subject to sec. 561A, and that the latter section is in no way limited or governed by sec. 369. Therefore, the High Court is competent to review its own order when the ends of justice require it—Mathra Das, 49 M.L.J. 42, A.I.R. 1927 Lah. 139, 99 I.C. 1039, 28 Cr.L.J. 239 (240); Shiva Das, 30 I.C. 680, 111 I.C. 573, 5 O.W.N. 641, A.I.R. 1928 Oudh 402, 29 Cr.L.J. 893. Thus, as has been held that the High Court, after altering the conviction and maintaining the sentence of the lower Court, can afterwards reconsider the question of sentence and alter the sentence—Mahtra Das, supra. On the other hand, there are some other judgments to the effect that this section does not confer on a High Court the power to review its own judgment—Rameshwar, 56 Cal. 32, 30 Cr.L.J. 254; Raju, 10 Lah. 1, 10 I.C. 221, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 462, 10 A.I.Cr.R. 494, 29 Cr.L.J. 669 (670); Nazar Ali v Hara Singh, 26 P.L.R. 616, 27 Cr.L.J. 23; Muhammad Sadiq, 7 Lah.L.J. 108, Cr.L.J. 1169; Ganpat, 27 N.L.R. 163, 32 Cr.L.J. 1222, 134 I.C. 686, A.I.R. 1931 Cal. 169, Ind. Rul. 1931 Nag. 174, 1931 Cr.C. 830; Dahu Raut, 34 Cr.L.J. 1100 (1105), 10 I.C. 937, 38 C.W.N. 25, 1933 Cr.C. 1481, A.I.R. 1933 Cal. 870, 61 Cal. 155, 61 Cal. 168, where Lord-William, J., has, however held that clerical errors in the draftsmanship of the order may be corrected by the High Court; Bonwaris Lal, A.I.R. 1935 Cal. 466, 157 I.C. 1044, 1935 A.L.J. 317, 1935 Cr.C. 507, 1935 A.L.R. 904, 8 R.A. 36, 36 Cr.L.J. 1286; Ram Jas, 12 Luck. 30, 160 I.C. 969, 1936 O.W.N. 194, 1936 P.L.R. 125, 8 R.O. 292, 36 Cr.L.J. 362, A.I.R. 1936 Oudh 719, 1936 Cr.C. 344; Pemerton, 14 Pat. 392, 159 I.C. 241, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 426, 16 P.L.T. 683, 1935 Cr.C. 3, 2 B.R. 62, 8 R.P. 259, 37 Cr.L.J. 58; Laxmanrao Parashram Deshmukh, 39 Cr.L.J. 172, I.C. 299, 10 R.N. 192, A.I.R. 1938 Nag. 74. This section does not confer on the High Court any new powers but merely declares that such inherent powers which the Court may possess shall not be deemed to be limited or affected by anything contained in the Code. The High Court has, therefore, no power to alter or review its own judgment in a criminal case, once it has been pronounced and signed except in cases where it was passed without jurisdiction or in default of appearance without adjudication on the merits or to correct a clerical error; nor is there any conflict between this section and section 369 of the Code—Edward Few v. Emp., 40 Cr.L.J. (764), 183 I.C. 348, 12 R.L. 110, 41 P.L.R. 794, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 244. The High Court has not and never has had any inherent power to review its own judgment and this section does not confer on it any power so to do—Jodha v. Emp., 41 Cr.L.J. 711 (3), A.I.R. 1940 Oudh 369, 1940 O.L.R. 408, 189 I.C. 83, 1940 O.W.N. 594. The High Court has no power to amend its order by way of explanation or otherwise—Ansham Das Bula v. Suraj Bhan, 41 Cr.L.J. 708, 188 I.C. 856, A.I.R. 1940 Cal. 42, 42 P.L.R. 153. See also the rulings quoted under section 369, Note 1055.

The inherent power of the High Court under this section can be exercised in a criminal proceeding till the disposal of a civil suit pending in a civil court in the same dispute—Kanhaiyalal v. Ghagwan Das, 48 All. 60, 23 A.L.J. 35; Jehangir v. Framji, 30 Bom.L.R. 962, 29 Cr.L.J. 1053. While conducting an inquiry under sec. 176 into a case of death under suspicious the District Magistrate interfered and put a stop to the inquiry. Held that the action of the District Magistrate unjustly interfered with the exercise of the powers of the Magistrate under sec. 176, and the case was certainly one where that action could be properly scrutinised, under the inherent powers of the High Court to pass the necessary orders to secure the ends of justice under sec. 561A—In re Laxminarayan, 30 Bom.L.R. 1050, 29 Cr.L.J. 1063 (1066). A High Court has power under this section to interfere with an illegal order of search of a house—Bhairon Prasad, 51 All. 377, 30 Cr.L.J. 62 (63). Under this section, the High Court has the power to order restitution of property—Shree Wa v. C. J. Mehta, 5 Rang. 553, 28 Cr.L.J. 932. The High Court has inherent jurisdiction to grant bail to an accused pending appeal to the Privy Council—Ram Saroop, 49 All. 217, 27 Cr.L.J. 1377, 93 I.C. 593, A.I.R. 1927 All. 97, 25 A.L.J. 97. See Note 1315 under the heading "Grant of bail pending appeal to Privy Council." It would be incorrect to interpret this section as having reference to bail, a matter which is specifically provided for by the Code itself. But the High Court has jurisdiction to extend the time for an accused to surrender, under the power preserved to it by this section, when the accused wants such extension of time on the ground that he has instructed his solicitors in England to place a petition before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council with regard to an appeal—Babu Lal Chautani, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 809 (811), 40 C.W.N. 1313, 1935 Cr.C. 1121. The High Court is not specifically empowered by section 498 of the Criminal Procedure Code to cancel bail granted by itself; but it can hardly be argued that it will be exercising the wide powers with which it is endowed by section 561A improperly, if it follows the procedure that would be observed by a Sessions Judge or Magistrate, and directs the arrest of a person who has been released on bail under its orders, for the reason that there do now appear to be reasonable grounds for believing that he has committed a non-bailable offence—Mohammad Ibrahim, 33 Cr.L.J. 681 (685), 138 I.C. 768, Ind. Rul. 1932 All. 494, 1932 A.L.J. 701, 1932 Cr.C. 630, A.I.R. 1932 All. 534. The High Court has inherent power to excuse the personal attendance of the accused in the trial and permit him to appear by a pleader—Saji v. Bhimji, 26 N.L.R. 50, 31 Cr.L.J. 284 (285). The High Court has an inherent power to order examination of a defence witness on commission although it might have made an ex parte order under sec. 39, Prisoners Act (III of 1900) for his production in the Court to give evidence as a defence witness—Assistant Govt. Advocate v. Upendra, 32 Cr.L.J. 551, 130 I.C. 538, A.I.R. 1931 Pat. 81, 11 P.L.T. 892, Ind. Rul. 1931 Pat. 186, 1931 Cr.C. 201. The High Court has power to pass an order for re-trial with the help of other assessors when one of the assessors expressed during the course of the trial that he was not going to allow the accused to be convicted—Lal Singh, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 926, 15 Lah. 20, 1933 Cr.C. 1385, 146 I.C. 446, 35 Cr.L.J. 107, following Thagaraja, 1912 M.W.N. 378, 13 Cr.L.J. 473, 15 I.C. 313. Where the subordinate Court is holding separate trials in respect of several acts of criminal misappropriation, the High Court can stop the trial if it is shown to be oppressive though it is not illegal—Kanakayya, 59 M.L.J. 854, 1930 Cr.C. 1191, A.I.R. 1930 Mad. 978, 1930 M.W.N. 1097, 32 M.L.W. 789, 129 I.C. 75, 32 Cr.L.J. 223, 4 M.Cr.C. 17. The High Court exercised inherent power under this section to correct a mistake in fixing time for inflicting a sentence of whipping, although the appeal against the same sentence was previously dismissed summarily by it—Rashbehari, 36 Cr.L.J. 100, 152 I.C. 291, A.I.R. 1934 Pat. 551, 15 P.L.T. 475, 1934 Cr.C. 1195, A.L.R. 1934 Pat. 303. If frivolous and vexatious applications for transfer are resorted to as a means of preventing the ends of justice, the High Court has power under this section to penalise such conduct by committal to prison, apart from the power to direct the payment of costs (compensation) under sec. 526 (6A). The High Court may also direct the party to lodge a certain sum in Court as security for costs incurred by the opponent—Shamdasani, 54 Bom. 553, 1930 Cr.C. 1065, 32 Bom.L.R. 1123, 129 I.C. 584, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 477, Ind. Rul. 1931 Bom. 184.

Where the Additional Sessions Judge erroneously supposed that he had no jurisdiction to disagree with the verdict of the jury, this section amply justifies the order of the High Court setting aside the convictions of the accused and the sentences passed on them and sending the case back to the Court of the Additional Sessions Judge to consider whether he would express disagreement with the verdict or not, and, if so, make a reference under section 307, Cr. P. C., to the High Court or uphold the verdict and convict the accused and pass suitable sentences—Manjia v. Emp., 38 Cr L.J. 465 (467), 167 I.C. 802, 9 R.A. 578, 1937 A.Cr.C. 11, 1936 A.W.R. (H.C.) 1284, 1 L.R. 1937 All. 419, 1937 A.L.R. 250, 1937 A.L.J. 43, A.I.R. 1937 All. 195.

The object of the re-trial is, so to say, to legalize the proceedings that have already taken place and not to give further opportunity to the complainant to fill in the gaps. Under section 561A, Cr. P. C., therefore, with a view to secure the ends of justice and to prevent abuse of the process of the Court, the High Court can direct that the complainant should not be allowed to lead any evidence in the case which has not been adduced before—Rampershad v. Dhanna, 41 Cr L.J. 184 (185), 185 I.C. 415, A.I.R. 1939 Lah. 513, 41 P.L.R. 198.

As to inherent jurisdiction, it cannot be said that a Court, especially Civil Court, has an inherent jurisdiction to file a complaint. That is not the ordinary function of a Civil or any Court. The power to file a complaint is given by the Cr. P. Code and this does not indicate existence of any inherent jurisdiction, except that of a High Court (section 561A)—Kushal Pal, 32 Cr L.J. 1105 (1115), 134 I.C. 225, 1931 A.L.J. 697, 1931 Cr.C. 715, A.I.R. 1931 All. 443, Ind. Rul. 1931 All. 801 (F.B.).

Where the accused were tried for kidnapping a girl and were acquitted on appeal to the High Court and the husband of the girl brought a case on the same facts against them after ten months and the accused had been already in jail for eight months on account of the occurrence, the subsequent proceedings were an abuse of the process of the Court and ought to be quashed under the provisions of this section—Mahammad Hossain v. Bholanath Das, A.I.R. 1936 Cal. 224, 1936 Cr.C. 357, 37 Cr.L.J. 538, 162 I.C. 176.

An order passed under sec. 421, Cr. P. C., dismissing an appeal filed under sec. 419, Cr. P. C., is prima facie final. Such an order cannot be vacated under sec. 561A, Cr. P. C., unless it is proved that either of the conditions precedent to the passing of the order as laid down by sec. 421, Cr. P. C., has not been fulfilled and this a question of fact depending on the circumstances of each case. The burden of proving that either of the conditions has not been complied with, lies heavily on the person challenging the finality of the order. Where it is proved that either of the conditions precedent has not been complied with, the High Court has power to interfere under sec. 561A, Cr. P. C., and in such a case, it is immaterial whether the Bench which is called upon to interfere is composed of the same or different Judges. Where there is no proof that either of the conditions have not been complied with, the High Court, whether the Bench is composed of the same or other Judges, has no power to interfere—Shahu, 36 Cr.L.J. 831, 155 I.C. 736, 1935 Cr.C. 370, A.I.R. 1935 Sind. 84 (89) (F.B.). See also Daku Raut, supra. The High Court has no power to entertain an appeal from the conviction and sentence passed on the appellants, after the dismissal of the appeal which they preferred from jail and neither the Bench which admitted the appeal nor any other Bench has power to review or revise the order of dismissal—Pem Mahton, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 426, 14 Pat. 392. See also Notes 1129 and 1133.

First Offenders.

552. (1) When any person not under twenty-one years of age is convicted of an offence punishable with imprisonment for not more than seven years, or when any person under twenty-one years of age or any woman is convicted of an offence not punishable with death or transportation for life, and no previous conviction is proved against the offender, if it appears to the Court before which he is convicted, regard being had to the age, character or antecedents of the offender * * * and to the circumstances in which the offence was committed, that it is expedient that the offender should be released on probation of good conduct, the Court may, instead of sentencing him at once to any punishment, direct that he be released on his entering into a bond, with or without sureties, to appear and receive sentence when called upon during such period (not exceeding three years) as the Court may direct, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour:

Provided that, where any first offender is convicted by a Magistrate of the third class, or a Magistrate of the second class not especially empowered by the Provincial Government in this behalf, and the Magistrate is of opinion that the powers conferred by this section should be exercised, he shall record his opinion to that effect, and submit the proceedings to a Magistrate of the first class or Sub-divisional Magistrate, forwarding the accused to, or taking bail for his appearance before, such Magistrate, who shall dispose of the case in manner provided by section 380.

(1A) In any case in which a person is convicted of theft, theft in a building, dishonest misappropriation, cheating or any other offence under the Indian Penal Code punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment, and no previous conviction is proved against him, the Court before whom he is so convicted may, if it thinks fit, having regard to the age, character, antecedents or physical or mental condition of the offender and to the trivial nature of the offence or to any extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed, instead of sentencing him to any punishment, release him after due admonition.

(2) An order under this section may be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its power of revision.

(3) When an order has been made under this section in respect of any offender, the High Court may, on appeal when there is a right of appeal to such Court, or when exercising its powers of revision, set aside such order, and in lieu thereof pass sentence on such offender according to law:

Provided that the High Court shall not under this sub-section inflict a greater punishment than might have been inflicted by the Court by which the offender was convicted.

(4) The provisions of sections 122, 126A and 406A shall, so far as may be, apply in the case of sureties offered in pursuance of the provisions of this section.

Change:—Sub-section (1) has been substantially amended, and sub-sections (2) to (4) have been newly added, by sec 157 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The main changes are the following —“First, this section extends the list of offences on conviction for which a person may be released upon probation; secondly, it is made clear that sec. 562 does not apply merely to the case of youthful offenders but applies to a wider class of persons; thirdly, the word ‘trivial’ has been omitted, fourthly, the period for which an offender may be released under this section has been extended from one to three years; fifthly, power has been conferred on an Appellate Court or upon a High Court in the exercise of its revisional jurisdiction to make an order under sec 562; and finally, the High Court has been empowered, either on appeal or in revision, to inflict a sentence of imprisonment in lieu of an order under this section”—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914). Sub-section (1A) has been added by the Cr. P. C. Second Amendment Act, XXXVII of 1923. This amendment has been made on the recommendation of the Jail Committee

1434. Scope and application of section:—Under this section the first offender need not necessarily be a youth; its operations are not limited to juvenile offenders. It applies to persons of advanced age—Tukaram, 2 Bom.L.R. 817; Salimi, 1916 P.R. 11, 17 Cr.L.J. 254; Pullabholla, 18 Cr.L.J. 469 (Mad.); Po Thein, 2 L.B.R. 314, 1 Cr.L.J. 1121. The intention of the law is not to make it essential that the offender must be young or that the offence must be trivial in its nature, etc., but merely to indicate the lines on which the discretion of the Court should be exercised—Ba Han, 2 L.B.R. 65.

In order to give a Court jurisdiction to release an offender under this section, there must co-exist two conditions, viz., there should be no previous convictions proved and the offence must be one of those specified in the section. If the two conditions are fulfilled, the Court has jurisdiction in the exercise of its discretion to act under this section. But in exercising the discretion the Court must have regard to the points specified in the section, namely, the age, character and antecedents of the offender, and to the circumstances under which the offence was committed—Ba Han, 2 L.B.R. 65; Tukaram, 2 Bom.L.R. 817.

It is undesirable to send a youth of 16 or 17 to prison for a first offence, unless he has been charged with a serious offence. It is not so much a question of whether the prisoner is repentant or whether he has been guilty of moral turpitude. The object of the section is to offer an alternative to the Courts, so that in the case of first offenders the Courts may avoid the necessity of sending such persons to jail, and offer them a further chance to turn over a new leaf. To send such persons to jail may have the effect of turning into habitual criminals those who have drifted without thinking into crime—Bangru Barman 38 C.W.N. 362, A.L.R. 1934 Cal 608. This section may be a very valuable section if properly applied; and it may very often happen that a juvenile offender who is sentenced to jail for a short period of imprisonment for a trivial offence may be practically ruined for life, whereas he would be saved by the due application of sec. 562. But in passing an order under this section, at least two things are necessary to guard against, viz., danger to the public, and danger to the accused himself. The public must not be led to suppose that all juvenile offenders may commit any crimes that they like without any fear of punishment, because that would be an incentive to criminal parents to imitate their children into a life of crime. And even children themselves being immune from the fear of punishment might be tempted to go astray into the paths of crime. It is obvious therefore that before applying this section one must consider whether there is a good cause for its application or not. If the offence is by no means a simple crime such as is committed by children out of mere thoughtlessness rather than of criminality, but it shows a singular combination of design and ingratitude and a general character of craft and deceit, it would call for a severe punishment indeed, and resort should not be had to the provisions of this section—Daryalal,

18 S.L.R. 61, 25 Cr.L.J. 1221, 82 I.C. 152, A.I.R. 1925 Sind 75; Allahdino, 35 Cr.L.J. 1149 (1150), 150 I.C. 763, 27 S.L.R. 463, 1931 Cr.C. 752, A.I.R. 1931 Sind 93, A.L.R. 1931 Sind 50. Magistrates should be very careful in applying this section and should not allow themselves to be misled into the use of this section by misplaced leniency and sympathy—Mahto, 27 Cr.L.J. 209, 92 I.C. 693, A.I.R. 1926 Sind 101, 20 S.L.R. 7. Cattle lifting is an offence which is very common in this country, and it cannot be repressed without condign punishment. A person convicted of such an offence should not be dealt with under this section simply because he has not been convicted before. The knowledge that a first offence will go unpunished is very apt to lead the young into a course of crime—Jhangri, 31 Cr.L.J. 420, 142 I.C. 511, A.I.R. 1933 Sind 44, 1933 Cr.C. 190, 27 S.L.R. 31, Ind. Rul. 1933 Sind 113. Offences of cattle theft are particularly mean and despicable offences in a community where so much depends upon cattle. They are inspired by no other motive than the ordinary motive of gain which in many other cases prompts a thief to steal, and it must be made plain to young men who steal cattle that if they are not going to prison they will have at least to pay a heavy fine—Miro Ghulam Hussain, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 339, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 88, 185 I.C. 428, 41 Cr.L.J. 187. This section is intended to apply to offenders (especially youthful offenders) who without being persons of depraved character may on occasions succumb to sudden temptations, and the Legislature very humanely and very properly allows the Magistrate in such cases to give the young man a chance and to deal with him leniently under this section. But where an offence implies a good deal of preparation (e.g. the offence of illicit manufacture of liquor) it cannot be said that it is done in consequence of succumbing to a sudden temptation, and the section should not be applied to such a case—Sujan Singh, 1916 P.R. 19, 17 Cr.L.J. 310; Piara Singh, 7 Lah. 32, 27 P.L.R. 221. Where a youth of 18 years enticed away a girl, and no attempt was made by him to seduce or ill-treat her, but on the other hand he wished honourably to marry her, held that it was precisely for this sort of case that sec. 562 was enacted—Mukham, 1929 Cr.C. 658, A.I.R. 1929 All 930, 120 I.C. 257, 31 Cr.L.J. 23. But if the offence be a hideous and reprehensible one calling for condign and deterrent punishment (e.g. rape upon an infant girl of 5 years), the fact that the offender is a lad of 17 years of age is no ground for taking action under this section—Sardha Ram, 29 Cr.L.J. 1096 (1097), 112 I.C. 680, A.I.R. 1929 Lah. 198. Where the accused, a full grown man of 25, made a criminal assault on a woman with intent to outrage her modesty publicly and in broad day light, he merited a substantial sentence of imprisonment and should not have been dealt with under this section—Mohammad Khan, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 36, 14 Lah. 800, 1934 Cr.C. 69, 35 P.L.R. 83, 148 I.C. 96, 35 Cr.L.J. 613. This section has not been enacted with the intention of letting off every juvenile offender who has committed an offence described in this section, regardless of circumstances in which the crime was committed. This section can have no application to the case of a youth (even though he is a boy of 15 or 16) who grapples with another and after having been separated by others turns back in a rage upon his adversary and inflicts a heavy lathi blow on him, and later on flourishes his stick in a spirit of truculent braggadocio threatening to kill those who attempt to capture him—Alla, 10 Lah. 876, 1930 Cr.C. 291 (292), A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 259, 31 P.L.R. 115, 122 I.C. 97, 31 Cr.L.J. 348, 14 A.I.Cr. 31. So also, a person who has deliberately committed perjury in order to screen an offender should not be dealt with under this section—Akbar, 29 Cr.L.J. 219, 107 I.C. 107, 29 P.L.R. 219, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 296, 9 A.I.Cr.C. 496. So again, burglary is a serious offence, and whenever it is detected, the accused must be given a deterrent punishment. It is not proper to release burglars on probation of good conduct; such a course would embolden them to commit the crime because they will think that they can easily escape—Sardara, 33 P.L.R. 215, 1932 Cr.C. 323, 137 I.C. 716, 33 Cr.L.J. 550, A.I.R. 1932 Lah. 258, Ind. Rul. 1932 Lah. 316; Bhasat Singh, 34 Cr.L.J. 779, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 500, 144 I.C. 538, 1933 Cr.C. 637, A.I.R. 1933 Lah. 393. This section is not applicable to the offence of burglary committed by persons above 21 years of age—Bhagat Singh, supra. The provisions of this section should not be extended to a serious crime such as conspiracy to possess fire-arms and ammunition without a license even though the offender be a law student and belongs to a respectable family—Nirmal Chandra, 31 C.W.N. 239, 28 Cr.L.J. 241 (243). Undoubtedly this section should only be applied in special cases and for special reasons. Where the accused has been convicted under section 19 (e), Arms Act, for possession of an unlicensed dagger, he should not be placed on security under this section simply because he happens to be a lambardar aged 30 years and it is his first offence—Akhtar Munir v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 610, 168 I.C. 783, 9 R.Pesh. 131, A.I.R. 1937 Pesh 51. But where it is found that though the offence be a serious one (culpable homicide) yet the part which the young boys took in the crime was not very much, and the offence was really committed by the elderly persons with whom they associated, an order under sec. 562 on the young boys was not illegal—Bhusan Chandra v. Kanai, 44 C.L.J. 208, 28 Cr.L.J. 6 (7).

Petty squabbles of young boys and girls should be dealt with under this section—Ma Kywe, 4 Bur.L.T. 68, 12 Cr.L.J. 242. Where the offender is a person of good position in life, he should rather be dealt with under this section than sentenced to whipping—Bhagel Singh, 1907 P.W.R. 9, 5 Cr.L.J. 217. Where a woman was driven to commit suicide by family discord, poverty, loss of a dear relation or other cause of a like nature she should be released on probation of good conduct under this section or sentenced to a fine if she is not too poor to pay it—Mt. Barkat, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 514, 1934 Cr.C. 805, 35 P.L.R. 439, 36 Cr.L.J. 682, 155 I.C. 283, 15 Lah. 872. Where the accused was a widow of over 45, and it appeared that in committing the offence (forgery, false personation) she was a puppet in the hands of the accused, held that this was a case in which the Court instead of sentencing her to imprisonment should release her on her entering into a bond—Kiran Bala, 30 C.W.N. 373, 27 Cr.L.J. 409. An old man of 55 committing criminal breach of trust in respect of a small amount may be dealt with under this section—Nur Hussain, 31 P.L.R. 334, 1930 Cr.C. 108, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 92, 124 I.C. 315, 31 Cr.L.J. 653.

This section would not be in any way appropriate when the accused was convicted under sec. 181, I.P.C., for deliberately swearing a false affidavit—Gajadhar, A.I.R. 1934 Nag. 193, 1934 Cr.C. 892, A.L.R. 1934 Nag. 238; or where the accused was convicted of an offence as bad a form of that punishable under sec. 317, I.P.C., as can well be imagined—Shah Huran, 36 Cr.L.J. 1043, 156 I.C. 431, A.I.R. 1935 Pesh 48, 1935 Cr.C. 349.

This section applies when no previous conviction is proved against the offender. If the accused has been previously convicted and released on probation of good conduct, a second order under this section placing the accused again on probation of good conduct upon a subsequent conviction for another offence, is illegal—Mahadeo Gobind, 32 Bom.L.R. 356, 1930 Cr.C. 552, A.I.R. 1930 Bom. 176, 125 I.C. 712, 31 Cr.L.J. 926, 15 A.I.Cr.R. 19. A previous conviction is a technical bar to an order under this section; but if no such conviction is proved at the trial and an order under this section is passed, a subsequent discovery of a previous conviction is no ground for interference in revision—Partab Naram, 2 O.W.N. 593, 26 Cr.L.J. 1278.

The words in this section are "instead of sentencing him." Therefore where the Magistrate convicted the accused and passed a sentence of imprisonment and fine, and then added: "As the accused is a young man of respectable family, I do not think jail life would be suitable to him. Therefore, under sec. 562 I order him to execute a bond for Rs. 200, etc.," held that the order under sec. 562 was illegal. This section cannot be applied where the Magistrate has not only convicted the accused but has also sentenced him. The order under sec. 562 must be set aside—Musri Lal, 17 A.L.J. 426, 50 I.C. 1000 (1001), 20 Cr.L.J. 392. A Court cannot, after passing judgment and sentence, reconsider the question of sentence and make an order under sec. 562, because that would amount to a review of its own judgment under sec. 369—Ganpat, 27 N.L.R. 163, 1931 Cr.C. 830, A.I.R. 1931 Nag. 169, 32 Cr.L.J. 1222, 134 I.C. 686. In another case, where the Magistrate fined the accused as well as passed an order under sec. 562, the High Court set aside the order as to fine—Karim Baksh, 10 Lah. 722, 30 Cr.L.J. 46 (47), 112 I.C. 910, 1930 Cr.C. 21, A.I.R. 1930 Lah. 56; Ayyub, A.I.R. 1928 All 759, 112 I.C. 911, 30 Cr.L.J. 47. The sentence of imprisonment imposed upon an accused, while she is released on probation of good conduct, is wholly illegal—Mt. Barkat, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 514, 35 P.L.R. 439, 1934 Cr.C. 806, 36 Cr.L.J. 682, 155 I.C. 283, 15 Lah. 872.

Where the accused was sentenced to 25 lashes and, as it was reported that owing to an enlarged spleen the sentence of whipping could not be executed, the Magistrate directed him to enter into a bond under this section, held that the order was clearly beyond the Magistrate's powers. Section 295 (1), Cr. P. C., in such a case, allows the Court to remit the sentence altogether or to sentence the offender in lieu of whipping to imprisonment or fine. The reason why a Court is not empowered to release an offender on his entering into a bond for good behaviour in lieu of whipping is obviously that if such a sentence was suitable, it should be imposed in the first instance—Ba Kiyay, 39 Cr.L.J. 707, 176 I.C. 224, A.I.R. 1938 Rang. 218, 11 R.Rang. 39.

1435. Sub-section (1):—Under the law this sub-section applied only where the offender was convicted of one of certain offences under the Penal Code, and not of an offence under any other law, e.g., an offence under the Indian Railways Act—John Scott, 1 N.L.R. 139, 1 Cr.L.J. 751; or an offence under the Excise Act—Sujan Singh, 1916 P.R. 19, 17 Cr.L.J. 310. This restriction has now been removed. This sub-section is expressed in general language. It applies to a person convicted of an offence punishable with imprisonment of not more than a certain period, and this sub-section, unlike sub-section (1A), which only applies in the case of convictions under particular sections of the Indian Penal Code, covers the case of conviction under any law. It is impossible to limit the previous conviction which prevents the operation of the section to a conviction under the Indian Penal Code. Therefore, a conviction under the Bombay Prevention of Gambling Act is a previous conviction within the meaning of this sub-section so as to exclude its operation—Chhotan, 36 Cr.L.J. 1376, 158 I.C. 378, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 188, 37 Bom.L.R. 182, 1935 Cr.C. 489, 59 Bom. 514.

The old sub-section (1) could not apply where the offender was punishable with more than 2 years' imprisonment. Thus, it could not apply where the accused was convicted of receiving stolen property—Atmaram, 2 Bom.L.R. 343; or of lurking house trespass—Maruti, 15 C.P.L.R. 11; or of using as genuine a forged document—Ramjan Dadubhai, 17 Bom.L.R. 921, 16 Cr.L.J. 781; or of house-breaking—Pullabholla, 18 Cr.L.J. 469 (Mad.); or of voluntarily causing grievous hurt—Abdul Lal, 4 L.B.R. 150, 7 Cr.L.J. 449; or of aggravated form of cheating under sec. 420, I. P. Code—Nga Pyi, 3 L.B.R. 95, 3 Cr.L.J. 21; Rab Nawaz, 1 Lah. 612; Sundaram Ayyar, 41 Mad. 533; Harnam Singh, 16 P.L.R. 1911, 12 Cr.L.J. 213; or of an offence under sec. 381, I. P. Code—Bajru Rao, 4 N.L.R. 18, 7 Cr.L.J. 319. All these cases will now fall under the present sub-section (1).

No order can be made under this section where the accused has been convicted of an offence not falling under this section as well as of an offence falling under this section—Krishna Aiyangar, 2 Weir 731.

The phrase "death or transportation for life" is not a single and inseparable definition, but must be read disjunctively, meaning an offence punishable with death or an offence punishable with transportation for life. It does not mean an offence punishable with both penalties. Therefore, the offence of voluntarily causing hurt in the commission of a robbery or causing hurt in an attempt to murder (sec. 307, I. P. C.) for which one of the punishments is transportation for life (though not death), comes within the above phrase. A person convicted of such an offence cannot be dealt with under this section—Janki, Ind. Rul. 1932 Nag. 115, 140 I.C. 59, 33 Cr.L.J. 844, A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 130, 28 N.L.R. 260, 1932 Cr.C. 666 (667), following Nga San Htwa, 5 Rang. 276 (F.B.); Bahawali, 30 Cr.L.J. 789, A.I.R. 1928 Lah. 920. Where the accused a youth of about eighteen years of age, was convicted under sec. 394, I. P. C., his case does not come under this section as the offence is punishable with transportation for life—Bakhsha, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 131, 152 I.C. 233, 36 P.L.R. 370, A.L.R. 1934 Lah. 746, 1934 Cr.C. 311, 36 Cr.L.J. 105, 152 I.C. 233. The Magistrate has no power to act under this sub-section when the accused is more than 21 years old and the offence is under sec. 454, I. P. C., which is punishable with more than seven years' imprisonment—Yeshaba Sakhoba Patil, 40 Cr.L.J. 48, 178 I.C. 330, A.I.R. 1938 Bom. 463, 40 Bom.L.R. 927; or the offence is under sec. 458, I. P. C., which is punishable with fourteen years' imprisonment—Jawand Singh v. Jagat Singh, 40 P.L.R. 999.

When the offences charged are theft and house-breaking, if the Magistrate gives merely a nominal sentence of imprisonment till the rising of the Court, then although he is complying with the letter of the law, he is in fact treating the accused more leniently than if he had applied sec. 562 (1), Cr. P. C. But theft and house-breaking are offences for which separate punishments can be given. If the accused is convicted under sec. 379, theft, or sec. 380, theft in a building, he may, in a proper case, be released on probation of good conduct. If he is convicted of house-breaking with intent to commit theft (secs. 454 and 457), a sentence of imprisonment is obligatory. When, therefore, the accused is convicted under both these sections and the Magistrate considers that it is not desirable to inflict a substantial sentence of imprisonment, his proper course is to direct the accused to execute a bond under sec. 562 (1), Cr. P. C., for the offence of theft and to sentence him to imprisonment until the rising of the Court for the offence of house-breaking—Yeshaba Sakhoba Patil, supra.

Sub-section (1) cannot apply to an offence which is punishable with fine only. It applies where the offence is punishable with imprisonment—Meruani M Mistry, 52 Bom. 250, 29 Cr.L.J. 566 (567), 109 I.C. 502, A.I.R. 1928 Bom. 152, 30 Bom.L.R. 375; Kasturi, 28 Bom.L.R. 1031, 97 I.C. 742, A.I.R. 1926 Bom. 544, 27 Cr.L.J. 1158. The expression "offence punishable with imprisonment for not more than seven years" is intended to be read in the same sense as the expression in sub-sec. (1A) "offence punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment," and that both expressions are intended to cover offences punishable with a less severe sentence than those indicated, and, therefore, to include offences punishable only with fine—Vaiyappa, 36 Cr.L.J. 1470, 153 I.C. 649, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 402, 37 Bom.L.R. 739, 8 R.B. 138, 1935 Cr.C. 1109, 60 Bom. 55 (F.B.), overruling Kasturi, supra. This is also the view of the Oudh Chief Court—Shital Prasad v. Emp., 39 Cr.L.J. 889, 177 I.C. 386, 11 R.O. 48, 1938 O.A. 699, 1938 A.Cr.C. 98, 1938 O.W.N. 919, 1938 O.L.R. 421, A.I.R. 1938 Oudh 233.

Who can pass order:—An order under this section can be passed not only by the Court which convicted the accused but also by the Appellate Court, as well as by the High Court in revision—Birch, 24 All. 306; Narayanasamy, 29 Mad. 567; Abdul Kadar v. Monmohan, 25 C.W.N. 720, 23 Cr.L.J. 235. This is now expressly provided in the new sub-section (2).

1436. Bond:—The bond to be taken should be not only to keep the peace and to be of good behaviour, but to appear and receive sentence when called upon, and in the meantime to keep the peace and be of good behaviour—Yessu, 2 Bom.L.R. 112. But it is not competent to a Magistrate to direct the accused to appear in Court on a fixed day to receive sentence; all he can do is to release the accused on probation of good conduct for a certain period and to direct him to appear and receive sentence when called upon during such period, if he does not observe the conditions of the bond—Rama, 2 Bom.L.R. 702.

Bond by minor:—It was held that the third proviso to sec. 118, providing for bond of minors to be executed by the sureties, applied only to bonds under that section, and did not apply to bonds of first offenders released under this section. A bond under this section had to be executed by the minor himself and not by his sureties (Cf. the words 'on his entering into a bond')—Ma Yau, 4 L.B.R. 12, 6 Cr.L.J. 123 (overruling Nga Pan Tin, 2 L.B.R. 137). But this is no longer good law in view of the new section 514B.

Inability to furnish security:—If an accused person is ordered to give security under this section and he fails to do so, he should not be detained in prison till the expiration of the period for which security is to be furnished; but the proper course is for the Magistrate before passing an order under this section, to ascertain whether the accused is likely to be able to give security immediately or within a reasonable time. If he fails to give security within a reasonable time, the Magistrate should pass a sentence which should be only nominal—Tun Gaung, 3 L.B.R. 2, 2 Cr.L.J. 374; Nasu Meah, 2 Rang. 360 (361), 26 Cr.L.J. 285; Jamsher, 36 Cr.L.J. 381, 153 I.C. 272, 15 Lah. 824, A.I.R. 1934 Lah. 582, 35 P.L.R. 368, 1934 Cr.C. 913. The order of imprisonment on failure to furnish security cannot be added to the order of release on probation of good conduct—Jamsher, supra. The Magistrate should not imprison the accused under sec. 123, on failure to give security under sec. 562. Sec. 123 specifically applies only to secs. 106 and 118 and not to sec. 562—Nasu Meah, 2 Rang. 360 (361).

When the surety of a convict gets his security bond cancelled the Magistrate should give the convict an opportunity to execute another bond with a fresh surety—Jamsher, supra.

1437. Proviso:—Power of a 2nd or 3rd Class Magistrate:—It is not open to a Second Class Magistrate, who has not been specially empowered to exercise jurisdiction under sub-sec. (1) of the section, to take proceedings under that sub-section, although he was invested by a notification issued under the 1882 Code with all the powers specified in the fourth schedule of that Code—Dorasami Aiyangar, 2 Weir 731. If a Second Class Magistrate not empowered under this section is of opinion that the case is a fit one for the exercise of the powers conferred by sub-sec. (1) of sec. 562, he should record his opinion to that effect and submit the case to a first class Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate for orders—Jawali, 5 Lah. 36 (37), 25 Cr.L.J. 1124. The same remarks apply to third class Magistrates. It should be noted, however, that in the Punjab, all Second Class Magistrates have been invested with powers to act under sec. 562, by a Notification, dated 18th April 1910, published in the Punjab Government Gazette, 22nd April 1910. This fact was not pointed out to the Judges who gave the decision in 5 Lah. 36, cited above. See Bakshan, 28 P.L.R. 285, 28 Cr.L.J. 316 (317); Hasham, 29 P.L.R. 215, 29 Cr.L.J. 588.

Power of the Magistrate to whom proceedings are submitted:—See Notes under sec. 380.

Joint trial of young and aged offenders:—Where the first accused aged nearly 50 and the second accused a boy of 11, were charged with theft before a Second Class Magistrate, and the Magistrate sent the case of both the accused to a First Class Magistrate so that the second accused might be dealt with under sec. 562 it was held that the Second Class Magistrate should have disposed of the case of the first accused according to law without submitting the case to the First Class Magistrate, and that he should have submitted the case of the second accused only—Yessu, 2 Bom.L.R. 112. Under the present law, the case of the aged offender also falls under this section.

1438. Sub-section (1A):—The offences enumerated in this sub-section are the same as those mentioned in the old section. It is restricted to offences under the Indian Penal Code, and does not apply to an offence under any other law, e.g., an offence under the Indian Railways Act—John Scott, 1 N.L.R. 139, 1 Cr.L.J. 751 (but see Kodumal, 36 Cr.L.J. 827 at p. 829, 152 I.C. 697, A.I.R. 1935 Sind 90, 1935 Cr.C. 373); or an offence under the Excise Act—Sujan Singh, 1916 P.R. 19, 17 Cr.L.J. 310; or an offence punishable under the Bombay City Municipal Act (III of 1888)—Merwanji M. Mistry, 52 Bom. 250, 29 Cr.L.J. 566 (567); or an offence under the Motor Vehicles Act—Pandu Rabji, 28 Bom.L.R. 297, 27 Cr.L.J. 528; or an offence under the Stamp Act—Iswar Dayal, 25 A.L.J. 401, 28 Cr.L.J. 166 (167).

This sub-section deals with offences "punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment" and taking those words literally they seem to cover an offence punishable only with fine, which cannot be said to be more than two years' imprisonment—Manchershaw, 36 Cr.L.J. 1036, 156 I.C. 735, A.I.R. 1935 Bom. 156, 37 Bom.L.R. 106, 1935 Cr.C. 302, 59 Bom. 352. See also Vaijappa, cited in Note 1435.

Again, the benefit of this sub-section is not extended to the aggravated forms of the offences mentioned herein. Thus, when this sub-section speaks of theft, dishonest misappropriation or cheating it must be construed to mean theft, etc., in its simple form, punishable respectively under secs. 379, 403 and 417, I P. C., and does not include the aggravated form of it under sec. 420, I. P. C.—Nga Pyi, 3 Cr.L.J. 21, 3 L.B.R. 95 (F.B.); Sundaram Ayyar, 41 Mad 533, 47 I.C. 658, 19 Cr.L.J. 934; Rab Nawaz, 59 I.C. 854, 1 Lah. 612, 22 Cr.L.J. 150; Deva Kantha, 5 P.L.J. 267, 21 Cr.L.J. 468; Rabjan, 16 Cr.L.J. 781, 17 Bom.L.R. 921, 31 I.C. 381; Mt Kywa, 35 Cr.L.J. 1241, 150 I.C. 1121, 12 Rang 259, A.I.R. 1934 Rang. 203, 1934 Cr.C. 891. The word 'theft' can only mean simple theft; otherwise it would not have been followed by the words 'theft in a building' as well. A servant found guilty of theft and convicted under sec. 381, I. P. C., is not entitled to the benefit of this clause, as theft by servant is not one of the offences specified herein. It is an evasion of law to treat an aggravated form of offence as an ordinary offence and thus introduce a different jurisdiction or a lower scale of punishment—Bapu Rao, 4 N.L.R. 18, 7 Cr.L.J. 319; Brij Lal, 13 P.L.R. 1913, 14 Cr.L.J. 113. See also Mayandi v. Pala Kuduban, A.I.R. 1935 Mad. 157, 1934 M.W.N. 1318, 36 Cr.L.J. 589, 154 I.C. 879, 58 Mad. 517, 41 M.L.W. 22 and Nur Muhammad Kalu Khan, 40 Cr.L.J. 14, 184 I.C. 311, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 260, I.L.R. 1939 Kar. 749, 12 R.S. 102 where it has been held that this sub-section does not apply to a case of house-breaking. It also does not apply to a case under sec. 411, I. P. C.—Bhola Mia, 18 P.L.T. 872. But the Allahabad High Court holds that the words 'dishonest misappropriation' and 'cheating' apply to and cover those offences in all their forms; thus 'cheating' covers secs 418, 419 and 420, I P. C., and 'criminal misappropriation' includes offences under secs. 404 and 405, I. P. C.; otherwise the words are a mere surplusage, because these offences are not punishable with more than two years' imprisonment. The words of a Statute should be given an extended meaning of which they are reasonably susceptible, when a restricted meaning would reduce those words to a mere surplusage—Har Narain v. Ramji, 12 A.L.J. 465, 15 Cr.L.J. 375. The Nagpur Court has taken the same view Jai Lal, 24 Cr.L.J. 251, A.I.R. 1923 Nag 158.

This sub-section also speaks of any other offence punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment. In applying this sub-section to those offences, the term of imprisonment and not the nature of the offences is the test. If the offence is punishable with not more than two years' imprisonment, the clause may be applied, even though the offence be a serious one. Thus a boy of 18 years who attempted to cause hurt with a dangerous weapon may be dealt with under this sub-section, because the attempt to cause hurt is punishable with imprisonment for 18 months, though the offence of causing hurt itself is punishable with 3 years' imprisonment—Kra Pru Aung, 3 L.B.R. 30.

The Magistrate should know the evil effects a short term of imprisonment, or indeed, imprisonment at all, may have upon a young offender. It places the stigma of prison upon him; it may remove the fear of prison from his mind and by bringing him into contact with old offenders may turn him towards a life of crime. Therefore, in a case under secs. 380 and 457, I. P. C., the proper course for the Magistrate, when it is clear that the young offender can give no sureties, is to admonish him for the offence under sec. 380, I P C., under sec 562 (1A), Cr. P C., and to sentence him to imprisonment till the rising of the Court for the offence under sec 457, I P. C.—Nur Muhammad Kalu Khan, 41 Cr.L.J. 14, 184 I.C. 311, I.L.R. 1939 Kar 749, 12 R.S. 102, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 260.

This sub-section is not intended to be applied to offences of the nature of defamation. The principle of this clause is that leniency should be shown to people of tender years and to first offenders, but it is not applicable to men of responsible position who made defamatory statements and aggravated the offence by repeating them and attempting justification—Babulal v. Tundilal, 28 N.L.R. 106, 1932 Cr.C. 519 (521), 33 Cr.L.J. 835, Ind. Rul. 1932 Nag. 112, 139 I.C. 401, A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 97.

Where a money-lender and his nephew endeavoured to overawe a witness for the other side in a civil suit and, because he refused to comply with the money-lender's demands, organised an assault party, taking part in the assault on the man in quest on and further during the course of the criminal trial wen over a number of prosecution witnesses by bribing them, they should not be released after due admonition—Hira Kurmi v. Madan Rao, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 175, 37 Cr.L.J. 502, 161 I.C. 932, 1935 Cr.C. 253, 17 P.L.T. 327.

The words "the Court before whom he is so convicted" occurring in sub-section (1A) should not be read as controlled by the proviso to sub-section (1), so that it is not necessary that the Magistrate passing an order under sub-section (1A) should be a first class Magistrate or a second class Magistrate specially empowered. Therefore an ordinary Magistrate of the second class who has convicted an accused under section 279, I. P. Code, can order his release after due admonition—Mullickar v. Mahboob Khan, 47 All. 353, A.I.R. 1925 All. 644, 85 I.C. 848, 25 Cr.L.J. 624. But the Bombay High Court holds that the proviso to sub-section (1) governs the whole section, and is therefore applicable to sub-section (1A); so that a 3rd class Magistrate is not competent to release an offender after due admonition under sub-section (1A)—Ranchood, 27 Bom.L.R. 1019, 25 Cr.L.J. 1461, 89 I.C. 1009, A.I.R. 1925 Bom. 479. Overruling Ranchood, supra, the Full Bench of the Bombay High Court has held that there is no reason for reading the Proviso to sec. 532 (1) into sec. 532 (1A). Both on the language of the section as it stands and on a consideration of the policy of the Legislature as appearing from the history of the enactment and the language of the section as a whole, it is clear that the Proviso to sub-sec. (1) does not extend to the powers conferred by sub-sec. (1-A) and that a third class Magistrate is therefore entitled to exercise the powers conferred by sub-sec. (1-A)—Waman Ramji Patil, A.I.R. 1937 Bom. 481, 39 Bom.L.R. 1055, 171 I.C. 1004, 39 Cr.L.J. 81, 10 R.B. 247, 11 L.R. 1938 Bom. 58 (F.B.). The Legislature purposely placed the new sub-sec. (1A) where it did, so that all Magistrates, of whatever class they might be, could exercise this new power—The King v. Maung Thrin Aung, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 280 (281), 1940 Rang.L.R. 507.

Distinct conviction must be recorded:—Where the charge was in the alternative either of theft or of retaining stolen property, and the Magistrate while convicting the accused did not say of which of those offences he convicted the accused, held that in the absence of a conviction for theft, the Magistrate was not competent to pass an order under this section—Bhagwant Ganesh, 1 Bom.L.R. 857.

Sub-section (2)—Power of Appellate or Revisional Court to pass order:—Under sub-section (2), an Appellate Court can pass an order releasing the accused on probation of good conduct. Where the High Court, on an appeal from a conviction and sentence by the Presidency Magistrate, ordered that the accused be released on entering into a bond, but the accused failed to execute the bond, the punishment originally awarded by the Presidency Magistrate would not stand (because that sentence had been already cancelled by the High Court), but the Presidency Magistrate should treat the accused as a person who was convicted but not sentenced to punishment and is again produced before his Court for the purpose of a suitable punishment being awarded—In re Badsha, 21 L.W. 40, 25 Cr.L.J. 683.

1439. Sub-section (3)—Appeal and Revision:—An appeal lies from an order under this section releasing a convict on his entering into a bond—Manohar, 1904 P.R. 24; Bakadur v. Ismail, 29 C.W.N. 151, 52 Cal. 463, 23 Cr.L.J. 455. And the appeal may be preferred even after the expiry of the period of the bond—Hana'a, 1917 P.R. 20, 18 Cr.L.J. 401. An appeal will lie to the Sessions Judge from an order of a Magistrate of the first class passed under this section in a summary trial—Hua Lal, 46 All. 828 (see this case cited under sec. 414). But no appeal lies from an order under this section passed by a Presidency Magistrate (see sec. 411), because the order is not a sentence of imprisonment or fine within the meaning of sec. 411—Birks, 35 C.W.N. 459 (460), Ind. Rul. 1932 Cal. 478, 138 I.C. 627, 1932 Cr.C. 480, A.I.R. 1932 Cal. 488,

In cases coming under secs 562 and 563, Cr. P. C., the proceedings fall into two—the sentence does not immediately follow the conviction—but that does not give the person convicted of the right given him by sec. 408, Cr. P. C., of appealing first either conviction only, or sentence only, or both. If he is dissatisfied with the conviction, although he has not been sentenced, he may appeal against the conviction only. If he is not dissatisfied with the conviction and therefore does not appeal against it he can nevertheless, if dissatisfied with the subsequent sentence (if any), then appeal against the sentence only. A person against whom a conviction is recorded under sec. 562, Cr. P. C., and who is subsequently sentenced more than sixty days after the recording of the conviction can appeal against the sentence in the High Court if he does so within sixty days from the date of that sentence—Mohamed Khalick v. The King, 1940 Rang. 257 (258), 42 Cr.L.J. 91, 191 I.C. 169, 1940 Rang.L.R. 386, following Inkar Sukul v. The King, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 223, 1940 Rang.L.R. 381; Mst Shweun v. King-Emp., (1904-05) 1 U.B.R. 7, 1 Cr.L.J. 543 and Ma Chut Su v. King-Emp., 1 B.R. 129, 4 I.C. 1027.

The High Court in revision can set aside the conviction and the order demanding surety, even though the convicts have not moved the High Court to exercise that power—Radha Kishen, 67 P.L.R. 1912, 13 Cr.L.J. 476; Chhaju Mal, 1914 P.L.R. 21. But unless the order passed by the Magistrate under this section is clearly mistaken or judicious or amounts to a failure of justice, the High Court will not interfere in revision—Murlidhar v. Mahboob, 47 All. 353, 26 Cr.L.J. 624. The High Court is reluctant to interfere with an order of a Magistrate passed under this section in the exercise of his discretionary jurisdiction unless the discretion has been wrongly and reasonably exercised, even though the High Court itself would have awarded a substantive sentence of imprisonment in the case—Nur Hussain, 31 P.L.R. 334, 1930 I.C. 108; Kesho Ram, 28 Cr.L.J. 255 (256), 99 I.C. 127, 7 A.I.C.R. 427, 1927 Lch. 353; Surendra v. Dharendra, 1929 Cr.C. 386, A.I.R. 1929 Cal. 5; Parlab Narain, 2 O.W.N. 593, 26 Cr.L.J. 1278; Abdul, 1910 P.W.R. 19, 6 L. 639, 11 Cr.L.J. 389. The Lahore High Court refused to interfere in a case where a trial Magistrate had resorted to the provisions of this section, although that case the section could not legally be applied, on the ground that there was nothing to be gained by passing a substantive sentence—Abdul, supra; Bhagat Singh, 1933 Lah. 393, 144 I.C. 538, 1933 Cr.C. 637, 34 Cr.L.J. 779, Ind. Rul. 1933 Lah. 0. See also Alhtar Munir v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 610, 168 I.C. 783, 9 R.Pesh. 131, 1937 Pesh. 51. In the last mentioned case the High Court refused to interfere, even though the order had been passed in a case to which this section was wholly applicable.

Where a Magistrate convicted the accused under sec. 411, I.P.C., and illegally dealt with him under sub-sec. (1A) of this section, the High Court in revision can alter the conviction into one under sec. 379, I.P.C., and maintain the order under sub-sec. (A), which would then be perfectly legal—Bhola Mia, 18 P.L.T. 872

It was held under the old law that in setting aside the order under this section in revision the High Court could not substitute in its place a sentence of imprisonment, cause no 'sentence' had been passed by the Lower Court (the order under sec. 552 not being a 'sentence'), and the provisions of sec. 439 as to enhancement of sentence did not apply—Bhasite, 37 All. 31, 12 A.L.J. 1244, 16 Cr.L.J. 43. If the Appellate or Revisional Court considered that any sentence should be passed upon the accused, it could order a retrial—Harnam Singh, 12 Cr.L.J. 213, 1911 P.R. 16; Bhasite, 37 All. 31. But the new sub-section (3) now empowers the High Court, in appeal or in revision, to pass sentence on the accused after setting aside the order as to security—Kesar, 1 A.L.J. 228, 27 Cr.L.J. 303; Janki, 28 N.L.R. 260, 1932 Cr.C. 666 (669), Ind. Rul. 1932 Nag. 115, 140 I.C. 59, 33 Cr.L.J. 844, A.I.R. 1932 Nag. 130; Mohammad Khan, 1934 Lah. 36, 35 Cr.L.J. 613, 14 Lah. 800, 148 I.C. 56, 35 P.L.R. 83, 1934 Cr.C. 69.

Under this section when an accused is released on probation of good conduct, no sentence is passed by the Court. Therefore, when, as under sec. 562 (3), Cr. P. C., the High Court sets aside an order and passes a sentence in lieu thereof, it cannot be said that the High Court enhanced a sentence within the meaning of sec. 439 (6), Cr. P. C. The accused cannot, therefore, claim to be heard on the merits of the case though he is entitled to be heard on all matters material to the question before the High Court, that is the passing of a sentence in lieu of the order passed by the Magistrate under this section—Miro Ghulam Hussain, 41 Cr.L.J. 187, 185 I.C. 428, A.I.R. 1939 Sind 339, I.L.R. 1940 Kar. 88.

563. (1) If the Court which convicted the offender, or a Court which could have dealt with the offender in respect of his original offence, is satisfied that the offender has failed to observe any of the conditions of his recognizance, it may issue a warrant for his apprehension.

(2) An offender, when apprehended on any such warrant, shall be brought forthwith before the Court issuing the warrant, and such Court may either remand him in custody until the case is heard or admit him to bail with a sufficient surety conditioned on his appearing for sentence. Such Court may, after hearing the case, pass sentence.

564. (1) The Court, before directing the release of an offender under section 562, sub-section (1), shall be satisfied that the offender or his surety (if any) has a fixed place of abode or regular occupation in the place for which the Court acts or in which the offender is likely to live during the period named for the observance of the conditions.

(2) Nothing in this section or in sections 562 and 563 shall affect the provisions of section 31 of the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897.

The words "sub-section (1)" has been added by the Repealing and Amending Act, VII of 1924. "This is intended to make it clear that sec. 564 (1) does not relate to the release of an offender under sub-sec. (1A) of sec. 562"—Gazette of India, 1924, Part V, page 59.

Previously convicted offenders.

565. (1) When any person having been convicted—

(a) by a Court in British India of an offence punishable under section 215, section 489A, section 489B, section 489C, or section 489D, of the Indian Penal Code, or of any offence punishable under Chapter XII or Chapter XVII of that Code, with imprisonment of either description for a term of three years or upwards, or

(b) by a Court or Tribunal in any Indian State acting under the general or special authority of the * Central Government or of the Crown Representative of any offence which would, if committed in British India, have been punishable under any of the aforesaid sections or Chapters of the Indian Penal Code with like imprisonment for a like term, is again convicted of any offence punishable under any of those sections or Chapters with imprisonment for a term of three years or upwards by a High Court, Court of Session, Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate, Sub-Divisional Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, * * * such Court or Magistrate may, if it or he thinks fit, at the time of passing sentence of transportation or imprisonment on such person, also order that his residence and any change of or absence from such residence after release be notified as hereinafter provided for a term not exceeding five years from the date of the expiration of such sentence.

(2) If such conviction is set aside on appeal or otherwise, such order shall become void.

(3) The Provincial Government may make rules to carry out the provisions of this section relating to the notification of residence or change of or absence from residence by released convicts.

(4) An order under this section may also be made by an Appellate Court or by the High Court when exercising its powers of revision.

[(5) Omitted by section 3 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1939 (Act XXII of 1939).]

(5) Any person charged with a breach of any such rule may be tried by a Magistrate of competent jurisdiction in the district in which the place last notified by him as his place of residence is situated.

Change:—This section has been almost redrafted by section 158 of the Cr. P. C. Amendment Act, XVIII of 1923. The main changes introduced are the following.—“Firstly, it extends the list of offences after a conviction for which a person may be required to notify his residence and subsequent changes of residence, secondly, on the analogy of sec. 75 of the Penal Code, as amended in 1910, provision has been made for previous conviction before tribunals of Native States which exercise their jurisdiction under the general or special authority of the Government of India or the Local Government; thirdly, all first class Magistrates, in place of those specially empowered, have been authorised to pass orders under this section; fourthly, the rule-making power has been extended to cover the provisions of this section relating to the notification of residence, or change of residence, or absence from residence of released convicts, fifthly, the punishment of a breach of the rules made under this section has been enhanced; and lastly, Courts of Appeal or Revision have been empowered to pass orders under this section”—Statement of Objects and Reasons (1914).

The words “any Indian State acting under the general or special authority of the Central Government or of the Crown Representative” in sub-sec. (1) (b) and the words “Provincial Government” in sub-sec. (3) of this section have been substituted for the words "the territories of any Prince or State in India acting under the general or special authority of the Governor-General in Council or of any Local Government" and "Local Government" respectively by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937.

Sub-section (5) of this section has been omitted and sub-section (6) of this section has been re-numbered as sub-section (5) by section 3 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1939 (Act XXII of 1939).

1440. Application of section:—This section applies when the accused has been previously convicted; the passing of an order under this section on a first offender is illegal—Nottaparambul Kunhammad, 1910 M.W.N. 567, 11 Cr.L.J. 636; Bakhsu, A.I.R. 1931 Lah. 675, 35 P.L.R. 615, 1931 Cr.C. 1001, 36 Cr.L.J. 392, 153 I.C. 434.

This section does not apply where either the previous or the subsequent conviction is for an attempt to commit the offence under Chap. XII or XVII of the I. P. Code—Hainam, 1907 P.R. 17, 6 Cr.L.J. 378.

This section does not apply where the accused, upon the subsequent conviction, is sentenced to whipping. An order under this section can be passed only when the accused is sentenced to transportation or imprisonment—Fuljiditya, 35 Bom. 137, 8 I.C. 623, 11 Cr.L.J. 691, 12 Bom.L.R. 901; Eticar, 36 Cr.L.J. 1497, 158 I.C. 991, A.I.R. 1935 Pat. 435, 1935 Cr.C. 1106, 16 P.L.T. 586, 15 Pat. 44; Ba Kyaw, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 258, 1940 Rang.L.R. 527, 42 Cr.L.J. 81, 191 I.C. 117.

This section does not apply where the subsequent conviction is a technical one. Where a person is found only technically guilty of theft, it is absurd to make his conviction for such a trifling offence the occasion for a long period of police supervision under this section—Jauahir, 4 P.L.R. 1914, 15 Cr.L.J. 183.

Where the previous conviction of the accused is set aside on appeal, though on technical grounds the accused cannot be called an old offender and an order of restriction cannot be passed under this section on a subsequent conviction—Nga Po, 3 Rang. 156, 26 Cr.L.J. 1344.

Under the old law, this section did not apply where the previous conviction had been in a Native State, even though the law of that State was identical in terms with the Indian Penal Code—Ghasia Teli, 1 N.L.R. 137, 2 Cr.L.J. 149. But now this section does apply to such a case. See clause (b) which has been newly added.

Under the old law, a first class Magistrate could not pass orders under this section unless he was specially authorised by the Local Government to do so—Dino, 8 S.L.R. 310, 16 Cr.L.J. 469. Under the present law, all first class Magistrates can pass orders under this section.

Previous conviction need not be specified in charge:—An order under this section is not such punishment as is meant by the words of section 221. Therefore, the provisions of sec. 221 (7) do not apply to an order under this section, and such an order can be legally passed without the previous conviction on which it is based having been mentioned in the charge. The omission is a mere irregularity cured by section 537—Jhagroo, 9 N.L.R. 88, 14 Cr.L.J. 390.

1441. Notification of residence:—Change of residence:—As long as a man retains his residence in the same place, his temporary absence from house for a day or two does not require notification. Whether he retains his residence must always be a question of fact, but provided a man leaves his family and household effects in the house in which he was residing, he would ordinarily be considered to retain his residence there. Where all that was proved was that the accused was absent from the notified residence for a single night, held that there was nothing to indicate that the residence itself was changed, and it was not necessary that he should notify such temporary absence for a single night—Naddi Chengadu, 40 Mad 789, 18 Cr.L.J. 638. But under the present law, absence from residence must also be notified.

This section does not provide for an order to restrict the movements of the accused and the order of the trial Magistrate, so far as it relates to the restriction of the accused's residence to a certain specified area on his release, is clearly illegal—Nga Po Mit v. Emp., 38 Cr.L.J. 722, 168 I.C. 1008, 9 R.R. 385, A.I.R. 1937 Rang. 164.

An order requiring the accused to report during certain period his change of residence to a person named in the order at a fixed place mentioned in the order is not contemplated by this section and therefore is irregular—Ba Kyaw, A.I.R. 1940 Rang. 258, 1940 Rang.L.R. 527, 42 Cr.L.J. 81, 191 I.C. 117.

1442. Power of Appellate Court:—Under the old law, it was held that an Appellate Court could not pass an order under this section, where the original Court did not or could not do so—Dino, 8 S.L.R. 340, 16 Cr.L.J. 469. But now sub-section (4) gives such power to the Appellate Court and to the High Court in revision.

1443. Punishment:—Under the old law it was held that any person refusing or neglecting to comply with the rules made under sub-section (3) was punishable as if he had committed an offence under the first part (and not second part) of sec. 176, I. P. Code—Bhola, 1 N.L.R. 133, 2 Cr.L.J. 745; Husein Beg, 31 Mad. 548

By section 2 of the Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1939 (Act XXII of 1939) the words "or, if the notice or information required to be given is required by an order passed under sub-section (1) of section 565 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 5 of 1898, with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to six months, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both," have been added to section 176, I. P. Code. The addition of this clause introduces a specific provision for the breach of an order under section 565 (1), Cr P. C., and the punishment therefor is altered into one of imprisonment of either description whereas only simple imprisonment is mentioned in section 176.

Provided that no trial of an offence punishable under section 67 or 70 of the said Ordinance shall be begun, continued or completed in any area in which section 4 or section 7, as the case may be, is not in force.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The Civil Disobedience movement has made it necessary to supplement the criminal law by means of certain Ordinances promulgated by the Governor-General in exercise of his powers under section 72 of the Government of India Act. The Special Powers Ordinance, which combines powers taken by the earlier Ordinances, expires on the 29th December, 1932. Though the Ordinances have enabled Local Government and their officers to control the movement, its organisers have not yet abandoned their attempt to paralyse Government and to coerce law-abiding citizens. The experience of the last two years and of previous movements on the same lines shows that, in the absence of certain of the powers at present existing, it is no difficult matter to start or revive such subversive movements. The conditions prevailing at present as a result of the measures taken by the Government of India and Local Governments are such as to render it necessary to assume for the whole of British India all the powers conferred by the Special Powers Ordinance now in force, and it is hoped that the powers conferred by Chapter II (Emergency Powers), Chapter IV (Special Courts) and Chapter V (Special provisions against instigation to the illegal refusal of the payment of certain liabilities) will only be needed in certain provinces. It is, therefore, intended by this Bill to take only those powers which a general review of the situation shows are required for the whole of India, and to leave it to Local Governments to supplement these provisions by means of local legislation in order to meet local or emergent conditions.

The present Bill reproduces in the form of amendments to Acts already on the Statute-Book certain provisions of the Special Powers Ordinance (X of 1932) and includes—

- (a) provisions against associations dangerous to the public peace,
- (b) provisions against certain forms of intimidation,
- (c) provisions to secure greater control over the Press.
